TOTS 'DEPRIVED' FOR RESEARCH

BOSTON (AP)—The Boston Globe says a University of Texas research team deprived 17 infants of a food substance essential for their development in an experiment conducted in 1956-57.

The Globe says the researchers deprived the infants for up to 13 weeks of linoleic acid, a fatty substance contained in mother's milk, even though they knew a diet without this food had produced skin breakdown, "marked emaciation" and possible damage to the brain or spinal chord in animals.

The study, published in 1959, was sent to Senator Edward M. Kennedy, (Dem. Mass.), by Dr. Alvin F. Poussaint of Harvard Medical School, The Globe says. Poussaint told Kennedy in a covering letter that he hoped the material would serve as "documentations that will enable you to gain support for legislation that involves human subjects in research."

Kennedy heads a Senate health subcommittee that has been holding hearings on human experimentation.

MPs Weigh Election Chances

OTTAWA (CP) — The consequences are being weighed warily by the various political parties as they manoeuvre toward a predicted parliamentary showdown and a possible general election.

As attitudes apparently stiffen over proposed tax cuts for manufacturers and processors — an issue which could bring down the minority Liberal government — MPs on all sides of the House are taking uncomfortable glances ahead at the election campaign that would follow.

"I think we could pull it off," said a Conservative MP, "but, my God, I wouldn't like to go into a campaign on the basis of us voting against tax incentives to business."

"I'd like to see the Tories explain that one away," said a Liberal. "But there is a danger that they might be able to sell their idea of a time-limit on the tax cuts."

"The issue doesn't bother us," said a New Democratic MP. "We fought the last campaign against 'corporate welfare bums' — but it's no secret that we simply don't want another election now."

A Progressive Conservative motion of non-confidence in the Trudeau government is to be debated Monday in the Commons, but it is more likely to embarrass the NDP than to bring about the government's defeat.

The NDP financial coffers — even more than the treasuries of other parties — are badly strained from the last campaign.

The NDP said Friday it will decide its position on the motion during the weekend and announce it when the debate gets underway Monday.

But reporters overheard NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) tell Treasury Board President C. M. Drury after the Commons adjourned Friday:

"If we decide to defeat you, we'll do it on our own motion."

Another NDP member, who asked not to be quoted directly, noted that the government will bring back its old-age and veterans pension increases Tuesday for final stages of debate in the Commons.

He saw little chance of the NDP using its balance of power to defeat the government with pension increases just around the corner.

The issue which many predict will bring down the government is a budget proposal, first advanced last May 8, that corporate taxes for manufacturers and processors be reduced to 40 from 49 per cent as an incentive for increased investment and job creation. Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield says this would create long-term inequities, but his party will vote for it provided the reductions expire at the end of this year.

He says there is a moral obligation to implement the measures for the time being because thousands of firms have already made decisions based on the tax changes.

"But I have no enthusiasm for the proposal," he adds.

There are increasing indications that Finance Minister John Turner will introduce the legislation without the time limit.

STORY BEHIND APARTMENT BOOM

Half the population of the city of Victoria lives in apartments. Yet nearly all city government officials who oversee building and zoning live in priyate houses.

Must the apartment boom go on? Why did it happen? In a feature article today on Page 15 Times' city hall reporter Roland Morgan investigates and finds some eye-opening facts.

U.S. Fears Gasoline Shortage

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Office of Emergency Preparedness warned Friday that there may be a gasoline shortage this summer and called on refineries to increase output.

OEP acting director Darrell Trent said that although gasoline production for the past five weeks has averaged 42.5 million barrels per week, one million more than the same period last year, "this increase is not enough to meet the need."

He urged the industry to increase production immediately, "both by operating refineries at near to capacity levels and by devoting a large share of their yield to this product."

"Unless gasoline production is increased or consumer demand lessens, spot shortages could occur much sooner this year because of the poor inventory position," Trent said.

President Nixon today was considering further moves to meet the energy crisis after lifting import ceilings on crude and petroleum products for independent oil companies pleading "hardship."

Nixon was preparing to send to Congress a message dealing with the entire scope of the growing oil shortage and other shortages of natural resources facing the nation.

The shortage was already a reality to at least two distributors, one in New England and the other in the Middle West. One firm that sells gasoline to 13 service stations around Norwalk, Conn., said it only had one week's supply on hand. Another firm that operates a chain of 25 service stations around Minneapolis-St. Paul reported it had to close all but six of them because it couldn't get any gasoline.

Women Bait Trap

BELFAST (Reuter) — A third soldier has died following the shooting of four off-duty members of the British security force by guerrilla gunmen after they were apparently lured to an apartment by women Friday night, the army announced today.

A fourth soldier remains in critical condition.

A civilian was also killed during the night when he was shot from a passing car in the Catholic Lower Falls area. His brother was seriously wounded.

The killing of the soldiers — described by police as "one of the most fiendish brutalities of the present emergency" — came only hours after the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army vowed to press on with its campaign of guerrilla violence.

And it raised fears that a mass rally of militant Protestants in central Belfast today could lead to more bloodshed.

The army said the four soldiers were in civilian clothes and met two girls at a tavern in Lisburn, headquarters for the British forces in Northern Ireland, 12 miles southwest of Belfast.

They were invited to an apartment in Belfast's Antrim Road, and when they arrived one of the girls said she would bring two more friends to join them. But the "friends" with whom she returned were two gunmen who ordered the four soldiers to lie face down across the bed and then sprayed them with submachine-gun fire.

The gunmen and the girls then fled, but one of the two surviving soldiers crawled into the street to raise the alarm.

Safeway Sues UFW

FRESNO, Calif (WP) — The chairman of Safeway Stores, Inc., Friday accused Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers Union (AFL-CIO) of "attempted extortion" and "libel" in its lettuce boycott and filed a suit seeking $150 million in damages.

Quentin Reynolds announced the filing of the suit at a San Francisco press conference, telling newsmen that the union and the Interfaith Committee to Aid Farm Workers, another defendant, have intimidated and harassed Safeway since last December.

The suit, filed in Los Angeles superior court, comes on the heels of the UFW's iceberg lettuce boycott, which has concentrated on the Oakland-based Safeway and several other large grocery chains.

Reynolds said the suit alleges that the farm workers union and the Interfaith committee, a group of clergymen, "are and have been engaged in a conspiracy to commit unlawful acts — such as bringing spurious law suits against Safeway, distributing handbills and pamphlets which contain false and misleading statements, engaging in mass picketing of Safeway stores and otherwise disrupting the lawful conduct of business."

In recent weeks the UFW and allies have filed numerous suits against the chain, alleging mislabeling of meat, false advertising and the sale of contaminated cookies, meat and lettuce.

In a court hearing last month a Safeway attorney said the union's mass picketing was costing each of its 500 California stores $5,000 a day in revenue.

COLD CURE COSTLY

STANFORD, Calif. (Reuter) — British and United States scientists reported Friday they have successfully tested a preventive for the common cold.

The only drawback is that a dose currently costs several thousand dollars.

The scientists, however, believe that techniques will be developed to mass-produce the material — called interferon — and the cost will come down.

Interferon is a protein purified from human white blood cells infected by viruses. The substance is secreted by the cells to interfere with — or prevent — the viral infection of other cells.

"This is the first agent known to prevent cold infections in man," the scientists report in an article to be published Monday in the Lancet, the British medical journal.

The research was performed at the British Medical Research Council's common cold unit at Salisbury by Dr. Thomas C. Merigan of Stanford medical school in California, and Drs. Sylvia Reed, Thomas Hall and David A. J. Tyrrell of the common cold unit.

Merigan, now back at Stanford, said findings also showed that interferon could delay the start of influenza B infection, leading the scientists to believe that the agent could prevent influenza if the proper dose could be given.

50-to-1 Long-Shot Wins Big Prize for Canadians

DONCASTER, England (AP) — Bronze Hill, an unrated four-year-old colt who almost never ran at all, was 50-to-1 shock winner of the Irish sweepstakes Lincoln Handicap at Doncaster today.

He carried to victory the hopes of four Ontario residents and earned them prizes of about $123,000 each.

Queendom, a 15-to-1 long-shot finished second 1½ lengths behind and yielded a prize of about $49,200 for each of four other Canadians.

Three Canadians held tickets on the third-place finisher, Desperate Dee, and won about $24,600 each.

Two of them are British Columbia residents: Lois McDonald of North Vancouver and G. Brianche of Lilloet.

There were no other major winners from B.C.

Ridden by virtually unknown jockey Mark Birch, Bronze Hill charged to victory at the end of the one-mile race.

A maximum of 26 starters was allowed in the race and with 27 acceptors the two bottom weights — Bronze Hill and Sixfiveseven — were put into a ballot to eliminate the odd one.

Bronze Hill was lucky, survived the ballot, and stayed in to win by 1½ lengths from second-place Queendom, a 15-to-1 betting shot, with Desperate Dee, the 25-to-1 third placer, another half length behind.

Also big winners were British bookmakers, who admitted they were laughing all the way to the bank. Virtually none of this country's legion of punters had even considered backing Bronze Hill.

One of the $123,000 winners, Alan Lawrence of Kitchener, has been buying sweepstake tickets for 20 years.

Lawrence said in an interview the first thing he is going to do is disconnect the telephone.

"I just know we're going to have every salesman in the country around here in the next few days."

Lawrence reads horoscopes "just for laughs." He said that last week his horoscope said he would be receiving "a very pleasant gift in the form of money from an unexpected source."

Another one, Wayne Fitzpatrick of Tillsonburg, said an anonymous caller offered him $10,000 Friday night for his ticket.

Fitzpatrick, 37, a secretary-treasurer of a car dealership company, said he thought the call was a prank.

NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. Report Hints Trudeau in Straits

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. News and World Report, a weekly news magazine, says Prime Minister Trudeau is preparing to give up the party leadership because he is finding it difficult to obtain campaign funds from large, mostly U.S.-owned Canadian corporations.

The magazine in its current issue says Finance Minister John Turner is more acceptable to the business community as the Liberal party leader and is being mentioned as a possible successor to Trudeau.

U.K. Gas Returns

LONDON (Reuter) — Preparations for resumption of full gas supplies were under way today following acceptance by striking gas workers of a wage offer within limits set by the British government.

Uganda on Alert

KAMPALA (UPI) — Tanzania moved fresh troops toward its border with Uganda today following an unsuccessful invasion of Uganda by a 3,500-man force on Friday, Uganda radio said. Ugandan armed forces were ordered on "full alert" status.

Pakistanis Clash

RAWALPINDI (Reuter) — Clashes between rival political groups which left at least 13 dead and more than 100 injured raised fresh doubts today on government and opposition reaching agreement about a constitution now before the Pakistani National Assembly.

Slides Destructive

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Floods and landslides have struck wide areas of Romania and Bulgaria following a sudden thaw. Reports from Bulgaria said landslides destroyed about 40 houses.

No Trace of Ship

NEW YORK (AP) — Rescue vessels early today reported finding no trace of the Norwegian freighter Norse Variant or her 30-man crew as the search off the New Jersey coast entered its third day.

B-52s Renew Strikes

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. warplanes, including heavy B-52 bombers, again hit targets Friday near Phnom Penh, the 17th consecutive day of American attacks against advancing Communist troops.

The capital has been on a full alert status for two days, with authorities fearing a possible Communist offensive following attacks only miles away to the north and south.

Communists marked the third anniversary of the founding of the anti-government National United Front led by deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk by launching new attacks on major highways. Military sources said they saw this as a move to draw government troops from Phnom Penh.

In Saigon, a veil of pessimism appears to be settling over Michel Gauvin as he surveys the first two months of a bullet-riddled Vietnamese peace.

"The ceasefire is not working," the Canadian ambassador concluded in an interview. "The ceasefire has not been implemented. It is not effective."

Socreds Swear Party 'Alive and Well'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Delegates to the British Columbia Social Credit convention Friday made it clear that they don't consider the party the mastodon of B.C. politics.

Agnes Kripps, a former MLA for Vancouver South, got the ball rolling during her opening speech, claiming "newsmen are saying Social Credit is dead." She then added that "Social Credit is the only viable alternative" to the current New Democratic Party government.

Then Grace McCarthy, the former Social Credit government's minister without portfolio, told delegates to "ask the press" about the accomplishments of W. A. C. Bennett and the future of Social Credit in B.C.

In later interviews, several delegates pointed out that the party is alive and well, one of them saying, "pretty lively, eh? See, we're not dead."

The rash of assurances about the party's future apparently stemmed from news media commentary following the last election. Several political observers said then that the stunning defeat at the hands of New Democratic Party Premier Dave Barrett's "Socialist hordes" had dealt a death-blow to Social Credit in B.C.

Last August's defeat left the party with 10 MLAs in the 55-member legislature. The NDP have 38 seats, the Liberals five and the Conservatives two.

The note of optimism was furthered by the former premier, who, in his keynote speech, predicted that Social Credit would sweep the NDP out of office in the next election. He said if an election were held today, the party would win its biggest-ever majority.

Bennett's hour-long speech was punctuated throughout by table-thumping approval and standing ovations from the roughly 500 delegates and visitors.

It was the first mass meeting of the Social Credit troops since the August 30th election. Today, delegates were scheduled to discuss the primary resolution of the two-day convention — rules governing next November's leadership convention.

The party has never had a leadership convention — Bennett was elected party leader and premier by a legislature caucus vote following the 1952 election. He held office for 20 years until last August's defeat.

Last week Bennett confirmed that he won't seek the leadership in November, thus opening the leader's post for the first time.

Just prior to his speech, Bennett recalled Mrs. Kripps to the podium, where she led the convention in what Bennett called "our great new freedom song."

To the tune of Old MacDonald Had A Farm, it began: "In B.C. we owned our land, be-fore N-D-P ... with a Barrett freeze here, and a Waffle freeze there ..."

The 72-year-old former-premier said that last year's defeat was good for social credit. He said the opposition role will stimulate party membership drives and stiffen the resolve to oust the NDP.

LOCKED DOOR NO HELP FOR SHEEP

DUNCAN — When farmer Walter Paddle of Norcross Road heard that nine sheep had been killed by dogs on a Metchosin farm Monday, he locked his sheep in his barn.

As an added precaution he nailed the door.

Early Thursday morning he found that marauding dogs had broken into his barn and killed 10 purebred border Cheviot ewes.

"It is getting terrible," he said. "Soon you won't be able to keep anything."

$13,410 FOUND IN ROOM

A housekeeper at Victoria's YM-YWCA found $13,410 in $50 and $20 bills while tidying a room Thursday.

City police said Friday the money belonged to a 41-year-old Calgary woman who had been taken to hospital earlier in the week for treatment of a drug overdose.

The woman was released from hospital later Thursday and police turned the money back to her.

She told them she had cashed $12,000 worth of Canada Savings bonds with interest coupons and intended depositing the money in a bank Friday. But she declined a police escort while doing so.

Gauvin avoids public comment on the thoughts deep inside him. In the countless sessions of the International Commission of Control and Supervision, he pushes the Communist side to return to evacuated ICCS team sites, to investigate ceasefire violations, to report findings to the four-party Joint Military Commission.

Aides said the Communist side of the four-country ICCS pays close attention to what the Quebec City diplomat says. They know the respect Gauvin has attained in the eyes of the world press.

But Gauvin is also aware of ICCS limitations working in a sphere of political contradictions in which military strength may be the deciding factors in the future of South Vietnam.

3 Nuns Agree to Talks

Three nuns sitting in at St. Mary's Priory said today they will meet Bishop Remi de Roo — but only at the priory after security guards and "attack dog" have been withdrawn.

The bishop said Friday that he did not want to interfere in what he called an "internal dispute" within the Society of the Love of Jesus but he was willing to mediate.

Sisters Mary Agnes Eaton, Mary Josephine Donovan and Mary Lucy Ford have refused to leave the priory for nine days in a dispute with another faction over control of the religious society. Since last Saturday they have been locked from all but the basement kitchen and an upstairs wing of bedrooms and washrooms.

Both sides have hired security guards and the three Sisters say the guards employed by the other side have had a dog on duty.

After consultation with their lawyer, Hugh McMillan, Sister Mary Eaton made these points today on behalf of the three:

"Because we had refused to go to a meeting (earlier this year) which would have jeopardized the life of our community as such, we were barred from reception of the sacraments by the bishop.

"We have not hitherto mentioned this to the press but the bishop has now brought this out by lifting this ban." (Sister Mary Lucy Ford was not included in the ban).

"We are duly grateful for this. However, to present ourselves at the church to receive the sacraments would mean leaving the priory which we are not prepared to do at this time."

Traditionally the Sisters would attend Mass and receive Communion daily, she said.

"We are puzzled by the bishop's attitude," Sister Eaton said in her statement.

"First his excellency says he will not interfere in what he is pleased to call an 'internal dispute.' Then he comes out with a criticism of our position in which there are statements I feel bound to correct."

The three Sisters are contesting the legality of the election of Sister Leonette Hoesing as mother prioress in 1971, not 1965, she said. They argue she was elected with illegal proxy votes.

Secondly, "we are not aggregated to the Benedictine Federation of St. Gertrude the Great."

Mother Julia Hunhoff "has no authority over us. She is the superior of Sister Leonette Hoesing, who is not a member of our community."

The three sisters are not acting against their vows "as we undertake to obey properly elected superiors."

Sister Eaton said the three Sisters will be happy to meet with the bishop—in the Sisters' common room upstairs at the priory, in the company of their lawyer, "when all guards and attack dogs have been removed" and when they can reach the common room without leaving the priory.

Embezzler Jailed

A man who embezzled close to $30,000 from four companies was sentenced Friday in Duncan provincial court to two years in prison, plus three years probation after he gets out.

Magistrate Lance Heard ordered Donald Reynolds to make restitution to the companies "to the best of his ability".

Reynolds, a former Duncan accountant, had pleaded guilty last month to six counts of theft over a period of two and a half years. Companies involved were James Logging Ltd., Dodds Holding Ltd., Dodds Lumber Company and Crofton Fabricators Ltd.

Defence counsel Cecil Branson had asked Heard to consider a probationary sentence, with Reynolds required to pay back the money he embezzled "in an amount sufficient so it will pinch."

Reynolds has already sold his home and raised $14,000 as restitution to the companies concerned, Branson said.

Scouse, Gunners Aiming for Top

LONDON (CP) — Liverpool and Arsenal came through again today to maintain their ding-dong battle for the English League soccer championship.

Liverpool turned it on after a scoreless first half and beat Norwich 3-1 while Arsenal collected two points with a 2-1 triumph over Manchester City.

Liverpool now leads the First Division with 52 points from 35 games, followed by Arsenal with 50 points from the same number of matches.

Third-place Leeds was held to a scoreless draw by Wolverhampton, and has 45 points from 32 games.

Bennett has groomed no heir to the party throne and said Friday he was sure Social Crediters would unite behind the "brilliant, young leader" they choose in November.

The party board of directors has proposed a leadership amendment to the constitution which would limit the race to members of the B.C. Social Credit league in good standing who are eligible to vote under the B.C. Provincial Elections Act.

In an apparent bid to inject new blood into the party organization, the delegates elected a 28-year-old party-worker to its board of directors.

Ron Price, son of veteran Social Crediter Bert Price, won an upset victory over Isabel Dawson, a former minister without portfolio. Price, nominated by fellow Coquitlam delegates, was named fourth vice-president.

Under a resolution ratified Friday, the seven-man board of directors will serve until next November's leadership convention. After that, directors will serve one-year terms, beginning in September, and will be chosen on a geographic basis, rather than at-large.

Price told delegates to the two-day convention that the board needs better liaison with young people. He said later that, through a resolution adopted Friday, young Social Credit members will have full voting and speaking privileges at party conventions. The resolution wiped out distinctions between the party and the Young Socreds organization.

He added that many young voters now will see Social Credit as "an alternative to the NDP Socialism."

Skies were cloudy over the outer coast and the northwestern interior early this morning in advance of a weakening Pacific cold front. Rain was reported along the northern Mainland and over northern Vancouver Island. Elsewhere in B.C. it was generally clear.

Patchy cloudiness spread across the inner south coast this morning and will cover most of the interior of the province this afternoon or this evening. Occasional rain will accompany this weakening system through the central interior this evening. Gradual clearing is forecast for most sections Sunday as a ridge of high pressure builds over western B.C. However the next Pacific frontal system will spread rain over the north coast Sunday evening.

Victoria Is Late For Date With Quake

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Victoria is late for an appointment with a major earthquake.

Research conducted by seismologists for the Earth Physics Branch of the federal department of energy mines and resources on West Saanich Road shows the Victoria area can expect an earthquake big enough to cause damage every 100 years.

The last one which occurred in 1872 has been estimated at more than 7 on the magnitude scale (a scale which ranks energy released at the focus of an earthquake).

Damage to buildings begins at 5 on the scale. The devastating earthquake at Anchorage, Alaska in 1964 measured 8½.

U.S. Studies When

Researchers in the United States are trying to find a way to predict when an earthquake will strike. They also hope to develop techniques to prevent earthquakes in highly populated areas such as San Francisco and other Californian cities near the San Andreas fault.

Canadian research focuses on predicting where and how often earthquakes will occur, according to Gary Rogers, a seismologist with the earth physics branch here.

This information will be included in the National Building Code so that buildings and other structures in earthquake-prone areas can be built to withstand the shock.

Several hundred earthquakes occur each year in Canada — 60 per cent of them in B.C. and the Yukon.

Rogers says a major fault in the earth's crust stretches from the Queen Charlotte Islands to the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

Faults are cracks in the earth's crust caused by land masses pressing against each other. Africa, for example is stubbornly heading north with disasterous results for the Mediterranean area.

Earthquake-Prone

The entire rim of the Pacific is earthquake-prone because the undersea land mass is "slowly and relentlessly" moving in a northwesterly direction the seismologist said.

"Most earthquakes felt in Victoria seem to be centred in the Gulf Islands or underwater," Rogers said.

Another earthquake zone is located off the west coast of Vancouver Island. Activity in this area is caused by undersea volcanoes.

Rogers explained that damage to buildings during an earthquake depends on how and where they are built.

"Nothing much happens to the average wood-frame house because it is so light," he said.

The kind of soil on which structures are built also influences the amount of damage.

"Man-made fill and pockets of clay shake like bowls of jelly," he said.

Rogers says the Empress Hotel, Victoria General Hospital, the University of Victoria and the highrise apartment at View and Quadra stand on "shaky soil".

The seismology division has placed 80 strong-motion seismographs throughout the province to measure the amount of shake in different types of soil during an earthquake.

The information can then be included in the National Building Code so that builders will realize a structure built on a clay pocket in an earthquake zone needs more protection than one built on bedrock.

Last year's earthquake in the ocean off Nootka Sound proved a striking example of how much difference soil compensation can make.

Makes Difference

People at Estevan Point reported mild earth tremors. Residents of Tahsis, twice as far from the epicentre, felt the quake much more strongly.

Seismologists were puzzled until they discovered Tahsis had been built on a "huge sawdust pile" that shook all over in the earthquake. One resident reported being bounced from wall to wall during the 5½ magnitude quake.

Rogers says the 1971 San Fernando Valley earthquake, which killed 64, injured 1,000 and twisted freeway interchanges like spaghetti, is "a good example of what would happen here in a magnitude 6 earthquake."

"There will be a lot of highways redesigned all around the world as a result of that earthquake," Rogers said.

In the San Fernando earthquake buildings without earthquake resistence collapsed. The 64 who died were all patients in a veterans' hospital built without protective features.

A modern hospital built to resist earthquakes was badly damaged and unable to function, but only one life was lost.

"Hospitals should probably be made earthquake-proof in spite of the high cost," Rogers said.

He explained that such buildings are built to survive even the most serious earthquakes without damage. All nuclear reactors in Canada are housed in earthquake-proof buildings.

Earthquake-resistent buildings are less expensive but they suffer considerable damage in a major earth tremor.

Building Remains

"In earthquake-resistent buildings things break and pipes snap but the building doesn't fall," Rogers said.

He says most people injured in earthquakes are hit by falling objects. Windows shatter and fall into the street, flourescent lights break free at one end and swing like pendulums, and balconies fall off apartment buildings.

Victoria has adopted the federal government's building code for earthquake-prone areas. Buildings must be built to resist the horizontal motion caused by an earthquake.

Rogers says huge dams like the Miea Creek Dam on the Columbia River are known to trigger earthquakes.

"The weight of water behind such dams creates a tremendous load on the earth's crust," Rogers said.

His division installed a seismograph at Mica Creek in 1965 so that by the time construction is complete seismologists will have a 10-year record of earthquake activity for comparaison purposes. He expects the number of earthquakes to rise when the area behind the dam is flooded.

No matter what happens at Mica Dam the earthquake capital of B.C. will probably still be a remote northern area that makes up in quantity what it lacks in magnitude as far as earth tremors are concerned.

The area has averaged 300-400 mini-quakes daily for the past five years. Seismologists suspect these earthquakes — called microearthquake swarms — are caused by glaciers.

2,897 Objects Orbit Earth

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The air force says 2,897 man-made objects are currently orbiting earth.

The air force's Aerospace Defence Command said Thursday 1,978 of them were launched by the United States, followed by 834 from the Soviet Union. The remaining 85 objects were orbited by other nations and the European Space Research Organization.

V.I. Gull Heads South

harold hosford

About 3,000 miles southwest of Victoria, almost half way between Asia and North America, lie a couple of sand dunes that pass for islands and which are known as the Midway group. A typical Pacific atoll, Midway, while it lies more than 1,000 miles west of Honolulu, is still part of the Hawaiian archipelago that stretches 1,500 miles across the Pacific.

Aside from us both being washed by the waters of the Pacific, Midway and Vancouver Island appear to have little in common. Not so, as the following incident will reveal.

A few years back, 1967 to be exact, on July 22, a group of U.B.C. biologists, banding nesting birds on Sea-lion Rocks off Long Beach, banded a young glaucous-winged gull.

While still not able to fly, and at that awkward, leggy stage the bird managed to lead the banders a merry chase before succumbing to the indignity of being marked for life.

But marked it was, and duly recorded with the hundreds of other birds banded that day before being forgotten.

But that particular gull was to come back to haunt its banders, one of whom was Wayne Campbell, newly-appointed Assistant Curator of Birds and Mammals at the Provincial Museum. Wayne told me the story.

Not only did this bird not drop into the limbo of the unknown, a fate which befalls most banded birds, but its dramatic re-appearance provided one of the most exciting chapters in the gull-banding history of Canada's west coast and neatly provided the tie I needed between Midway and Vancouver Island.

Jumping ahead now, more than 4 years, to 1971 and to Sand Island, the largest of Midway's dunes and one of the main nesting grounds of the Laysan Albatross we find a group of U.S. biologists involved in a study of these sea wanderers.

On December 4, 1971, the nets used to capture the albatross for banding contained something new, a pale, white-headed gull, a banded gull.

Subsequent examination proved it to be a near-mature glaucous-winged gull, a bird never seen on Midway before and a bird that should have been somewhere along the Pacific coast of North America.

The band number was recorded and the bird released.

To end the suspense, the bird ultimately proved to be our Sea-lion Rocks bird banded 4 years and 4 months earlier. Somehow it had made its way across the trackless Pacific to the refuge of this speck of land in the middle of nowhere.

The best guess on how the bird managed this feat might be that, like so many British Columbia gulls, it had made its way south to one of the major west-coast ports of the U.S., Seattle or San Francisco for example.

From there it would have been a simple matter for the bird to hook up with a ship heading west, forgetting to turn back, as most gulls do, when they seem to be getting too far from land.

Less likely, is the possibility that the bird made the trip unaided and hit Midway quite by accident.

Strangely enough, this wasn't the first glaucous-winged gull to find its way into the western part of the Hawaiian archipelago. Many years ago another was picked up dead on Laysan Island itself, about 500 miles east of Midway.

Our bird, on the other hand, was alive and well when last seen and may yet write more into its already remarkable life story.

Add Interest to Your Scenic Shots

In scenic shots, it is often a help rather than a hindrance to include people who may be in the field of view. They should, however, look at the scene—not the camera—and they should be at least 25 feet from the camera. For color pictures, have your foreground figures wear colorful clothing, preferably red or yellow, to add color and interest.

Frame your scenics with an interesting foreground such as a tree or a branch. Watch the depth of field so that both the foreground and the scene will be in focus. It is distracting to have an out-of-focus foreground.

To repeat, composition is simply the selection and arrangement of objects within the picture area. If you follow the suggestions your own experience will teach you a great deal about this subject. When you look through the viewfinder, have the whole picture in mind.

Come in to Jus-Rite Photos and pick up some books and other information. Your certified photographic counsellors will be glad to assist you.

Into An Era Of Boss-Men?

Mr. Barrett's flood of legislation is giving new meaning to the old cliche of "sweeping powers" assumed by government. The commissions to be established will consist of appointed citizens whose ability to control the land in the province, or the gasoline and other energy sources, will exceed that of any such agencies heretofore. The automobile insurance legislation likewise gives control to an arm of government that wipes out an established form of private business.

Mr. Barrett is pushing his new bills through the Legislature as though he was in a race against time—as indeed he may be. But the likelihood is that by the time another general election is held, even a defeat of the government would not result in total elimination of the governmental powers so deeply embedded in the economy.

The new Energy Board will replace the Public Utilities Commission, but there will be little resemblance between the two. One of the disquieting features of the NDP legislation, as it was of some of the acts of the past Social Credit regime, is its ready assumption of powers which the authors claim will merely be held in reserve. That is a dangerous type of law-making.

Legislation which is passed on the basis that it will not be used until far in the future, or under exceptional circumstances, or with some other qualification, is time-bomb law. In some cases it can force industry or the people to live under a threat of implementation rather than under the applied terms of the act, and this is not a proper application of law or an acceptable role for government.

Some of the features of the energy legislation can be made useful to the industry and attractive to the public. But the overall nature of the various forms of carrot-and-stick place alarming power in the hands of non-elected persons whose edicts in some cases cannot be appealed. Where will we find the paragons of judgment, experience and integrity into whose hands such vast powers can be placed with confidence—and apparently there will be quite a regiment of them even before the present session's legislative mill is stilled?

The question is particularly pertinent since government ministers indicate that the exceptionally wide powers of some bodies may be increased still further by legislation in the future. For instance, the Energy Board, with control of prices and services, may yet be given control of production from the gas and oil wells, as well as authority over exports. Much will depend on how freely the government permits its commissions to operate, and at this point it is difficult to decide whether more direct government influence on them, or less, may be the greater danger.

Perhaps the impact of the Barrett policies might not have been so direct if the province had not had a continuous 20-year diet of Mr. Bennett's government to precede them. In any case, the imprint of socialism on the province—begun paradoxically enough by Mr. Bennett with his Hydro Authority and ferry system—will be greatly deepened by Mr. Barrett. For better or for worse—and probably both—life in British Columbia will never be the same.

After the Panama Hassle

Well before the United Nations Security Council held its special meetings in Panama this month, it was a foregone conclusion that the host nation's spokesmen would use the occasion to broadcast charges of colonialism against the United States as a result of the existing status of the Canal. It was equally clear that the Panama attack would attract the support of Latin American countries and others anxious to place the United States in an unfavorable light. And it was forseeable that if a resolution supporting Panama gained widespread support at the meetings—a prospect which seemed inevitable—the United States would exercise its veto.

The expected results are now part of history. Procedures followed the anticipated developments and the meeting ended in bitter recriminations. In the existing diplomatic climate, no other course could have been anticipated.

Yet it must occur to a number of internationalists that, whatever the pros or cons of the U.S.-Panama dispute, a waterway of the Panama Canal's importance should not be subject to control by any individual nation. Surely the short-cut between the Atlantic and Pacific is too vital a global concern to be any one country's monopoly. And if it must continue as such, then the reasonable development should be the construction of an alternative of equal, or perhaps greater, efficiency with control vested in a global authority—the United Nations, for instance.

Everyone is aware of what happened to the Suez Canal and the problems which have arisen there from conflict between Egypt and Israel. Is there any reason to assume that problems will not erupt over the Panama cut with mounting Panamanian-American conflicts regarding sovereignty and earnings?

The Security Council meetings have served Panama's purpose and have created discomfort for the United States. Isn't it time now to move to a more constructive approach to the problem of international control of the globe's vital shipping links?

BRUCE HUTCHISON

All Goes Well, Sort Of

That enthusiastic world traveller, Horace Snifkin, has returned from Italy with a photographic copy of a minor historical document. It was discovered by workmen excavating the site for a modern hotel in Rome. Written in 410 AD by Flaminus Pollux, the famous Roman politician, to his friend, Albius Quintus, of Athens, this letter may have some contemporary interest and Mr. Snifkin has kindly allowed me to publish it.

All goes well with Rome and the Empire (Flaminus wrote) and you can disregard with contempt all rumors to the contrary. It is true that the Emperor has withdrawn the legions from Britannia and Gaul but this, of course, was according to plan. Rome has civilized these northern barbarians and established a permanent peace. Now the savages can settle their quarrels among themselves by their customary methods of massacre and pillage.

As the Emperor informed the Senate, his mission has been successfully completed and all our energies can be concentrated thenceforth on domestic business. I regret to add that the Emperor, on leaving the Capitol, was murdered by his legitimate successor and, in my opinion, between ourselves, the dozen assassinations in as many years are somewhat excessive. Fortunately the new Emperor has pledged himself to enforce law and order.

Difficult Problems

The domestic problems of Rome are difficult but we shall quickly solve them with appropriate legislation. I confess that it is irritating, for example, to find foreigners unwilling to accept payment for their goods in the sound currency of the Empire merely because the gold coinage has been diluted with base metals — as if the credit of Rome could ever be questioned.

You may be sure that such an absurd monetary dispute will soon be resolved by our bankers in their present conference with the rapacious money lenders of Alexandria and Jerusalem, a suspicious lot. As the new Emperor remarked to me, only yesterday, the Roman economy is the richest in the world and the most solvent, though it is faced, for the time being, by the unfair competition of low-wage outlanders. Or, in the Emperor's own words, "The Empire is eternal and the living standard of its citizens will rise perpetually."

Perhaps you have heard of a so-called food shortage in Rome but I need hardly observe that it is quite temporary. To alleviate it, the last Emperor slaughtered a million laying hens last year and subsidized the farmers to reduce their crops, seeking thereby to stabilize the national economy. His wise plan did not work out precisely as intended and there is some discontent among the shiftless Roman mob because the price of food has risen and many slaves pretend to be hungry.

The new Emperor quickly pacified

Like Rome . . . eternal

the rebels by providing free bread and circuses, together with an inspired touch of genius, of which you may not have heard yet. Into the Colosseum he released a hundred African lions and an equal number of weird fanatics who call themselves Christians. The resulting sport has put the plebs in good humor and the pestiferous sect from Asia Minor has been extinguished for good.

Again quoting the Emperor's words to the Senate, "the Roman gods, like Rome itself, are eternal." To be sure no educated patrician like yourself, my dear friend, believes in them any more but as a political institution they are vital to the security of the state. By appealing to them for divine guidance, with appropriate sacrifices and ceremonies in the Forum, the Emperor keeps the mob under control.

It must be admitted, however, that there are still problems even in Rome, though naturally they are not mentioned in public. The foolish slaves of Italy, aroused by alien agitators, have left the farms and flocked into the city, making it crowded, uncomfortable, filthy and, to be frank, unlivable for the better sort of people.

The ancient Tiber itself has been so fouled by the discharge of sewage that I can no longer enjoy my daily swim in it; the water is said to be poisonous. This may account for the recent plague, but the Emperor has called in experts who assure him that they can soon restore what they have begun to call, in their queer jargon, the environment (a new word and an ugly one).

To Suburbia

Until these measures are complete we of the patrician class have moved to the suburbs where life is still normal and will continue so. Our taxes, I must say, are atrociously high to pay for the expensive entertainment in the Colosseum but the Emperor has promised to reduce them as the prosperity of the Empire increases under his sagacious management.

The army requires most of the revenue. The legions demand exorbitant wages, sometimes refuse to fight if their demands are not met and often rebel. Some preposterous Visigoth warrior named, I think, Alaric, has lately invaded our northern provinces and actually boasts that he will sack Rome!

When this news was brought to the Senate you can imagine our laughter. The Emperor himself was convulsed with mirth just before the Praetorian Guard found it necessary to take his life in the traditional manner. You can therefore rest assured, dear friend, that Rome is safe and will last forever. So I look forward eagerly to your next visit here. With my best wishes, yours in the old Roman spirit, Flaminus Pollux.

P.S On second thoughts, you might prefer to postpone the visit. Alaric, the barbarian, began to sack Rome early today and we may need a month or two to repair the damage after this brief but annoying interruption. When you come, please bring your own food and drink with you.

ART STOTT

Timed by Nature's Clock

A phalanx of Canada geese follows the flight lanes of the Strait, veering back to its northing as it swings around the southern end of the Island. The querulous calls of its persistent argument drift down from the sky, measured wing beats carrying the big birds toward distant and lonely nesting grounds.

Guided by natural compass and clock no man can comprehend, they seek out the marshlands where they emerged as goslings from the parental egg. Only when change, usually of human engineering, has made their nesting grounds untenable do they seek new breeding sites.

Some will hold to the coast, some move inland and others, strangers to the Juan de Fuca skyway, will test once again the Skagit Valley from which ecological transformation could exclude them in the years ahead.

Ranging Northward

The coastal species, say the experts, will spread northward toward the range of the Queen Charlotte geese, whose long tenancy of the flats by shallow lakes, bordered by muskeg and spruce, has established territorial rights.

Below them, as they overfly the sheltered bays of Victoria, the assemblies of wild ducks that have wintered here diminish. The flocks that rode flotilla close to lee shores have been slipping away, group by group, to their particular mating haunts, discussing passage, it seems, as they continued their guttural conversations, foraging in the bays.

The bluebills and the sawbills have been moving out with the black whistlers. Soon now the buffleheads, harlequins and solitary loons will join the exodus, some briefly, some for the late spring, summer and early autumn sojourn in natural sanctuaries remote from crowding human settlement.

The bays will be returned to their year-round residents, the impertinent hell divers, the cormorants who stand funeral watch on offshore tidal rocks, the fractious gulls, the occasional big blue heron, turnstones and other shorebirds that lend quick, concerted choreography to the sand where constant surf hisses its sibilant undertone.

There are no farewells as the waterfowl leave, just a quiet departure from winter haunts when spring works its mysteries. What impulse sets the route, what memories guide the migrants on their ways through the wilderness may only be guessed.

Yet the buffleheads, who arrive early and stay late in our bays in the cold months, will emerge in such places as the Cariboo, finding nesting sites and hatching eggs in the holes drilled by woodpeckers in old trees. The harlequins, paired for a fleeting parenthood, will disappear, set up house and, shortly, the male, disenchanted with the menage and perhaps ashamed of plumage grown threadbare, will return to the kelp line to moult, retreating from the human eye until his feathers shine forth again in foppish elegance.

The wilder ducks move further afield and for the regular local inhabitants, spring will be little more than a prosaic production of offspring. Gulls and cormorants will build their shantytown nests on the rocky islands offshore where little herbage grows.

Far-called, the migratory flotillas melt away. The wild spirit of waterfowl is subdued in the bays, the untamed visitors vanish.

Domesticity

A pair of mallards will soon fly in from Beacon Hill, proper, pedestrianly middle-class, house-hunting, commenting gruffly on the change in amenities, not quite satisfied but making do in some shore-side thicket or stand of coarse grass until the eggs are laid, hatched and the young ones have been launched on the water.

So the seasons turn. The scene is transformed from the strong, grey-steel etching of winter to the dancing lights on green waves, running white at the crest before the south-easters of March. Then will come the bright days of summer, ripening into the golden haze of autumn with fresh though gentle color in the skies at sunrise and sunset, and the ducks will begin to reassemble.

But now the occasional regiment of Canada geese sweeps overhead, a lingering sound from the sky and thrusting advance in strong flight. An outdoor eye catches them and sees an older calendar than man has ever devised.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

An exploration ramble at Whitty's Lagoon in Metchosin is worthwhile.

There are some excellent trails around the park, one going to the twin falls where the white water cascades into the lagoon and the rock faces are covered with mosses and sedum.

From the banks you will see several of the puddle ducks — the mallards in their breeding plumage, and buffleheads and the little grebes.

In the grasses and mosses in the low areas hundreds of the little black hairy jumping spiders can be seen. These rely on speed to catch their prey, so they do not spin webs.

If you look closely you will find the twin leaves of the rein orchis, and close by the reddish spike of the coral root. This, too, is an orchid.

There is an old, abandoned log cabin along the back trail. On its log walls, if your eyes are quick, you can spot the tiny pseudo scorpion. These little creatures are harmless. Here also you can see the workings of the bark beetle, which leaves such fascinating patterns on the logs.

Along the back trail is a very fine specimen of western yew. It is possible that this tree is several hundred years old.

Here the little stream runs clear and cold. Pick up a small rock from the water and examine it. You will find several kinds of larvae . . . such as the stonefly, Mayfly, and perhaps some very tiny snails.

There is evidence that woodpeckers haunt this area, and overhead the ravens sound their warning cry.

In a short time this park will be a paradise, with many beautiful flowers in bloom.

It is evident that this was once a homestead, for there are several garden flowers growing here. Among them, the daphne is predominant. The fruit of this plant is poisonous.

The Capital Region Parks Board is to be congratulated for making the fine trails and for the cleanliness of the park as a whole. This is another of the green gems which surround our city.

More Profitable

The attitude of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture in approving the liquidation of precious farm land makes about as much sense as the Canadian Medical Association demanding that doctors be allowed to sell the hospitals for more profitable real estate development, or the Law Society advocating the disposal of law courts in favor of enterprises that would earn them more money than the practice of law.

No doubt there are a few doctors and lawyers who wouldn't hesitate to do it, but as responsible professional associations these bodies are bound to oppose socially damaging get-rich-quick schemes. So why is the BCFA behaving so irresponsibly about preserving agriculture in this province? Who are they fronting for — agriculture or the land developers? — W. J. Bloomberg, 1061 Erindale Place.

Mr. and Mrs. America, Who Are You?

By CHARLES FOLEY
The London Observer

LOS ANGELES — One day two years ago, bearded Craig Gilbert, an old hand at making television documentaries, awoke with as inspiration. His camera would capture sociological and psychological truths about the U.S. through the microcosm of a single family, whose daily life, humdrum or dramatic, would be filmed in every detail over a period of months. Then, thought Craig, a heavy man with sad eyes, "perhaps something universal would emerge about relationships, about how a man and a woman and children live in America in the 1970s." His film would hold a mirror up to the troubled U.S., so that the country might better understand itself.

Large ideas need large financing, and this one got $1,250,000 from the Ford Foundation and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Seven months later Craig and his two-member crew had a monumental 300 hours of material on their family, which they edited down to 12 hour-long doses. America has been viewing the end result with vary degrees of rage, horror and masochistic pleasure.

So violent has the national controversy become around the epic An American Family that a stunned Gilbert has retreated into psychoanalysis. It has been described as "the ultimate soap opera," "a television landmark," "a genuine American tragedy," "a glimpse into the pit," and much more. A plaintive note sounds through all the lengthy analysis in national journals, right and left: You mean — it asks aghast — This is Us?

People are measuring their own lives against those of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Loud of Santa Barbara, California, and their five children — the family that posed, so to speak, for the portrait. The Louds have become instant celebrities, pursued by publishers and the press, deluged with mail from across the U.S., lined up for TV talk shows, stopped by strangers in the street.

Each week, on the federal the Louds have seen themselves at work and play, drinking, squabbling, crashing their cars, leading the Good Life in sunny California. ("It had to be California," says producer Gilbert, "because American culture is fashioned on California: any day now America will become California.")

Bill Loud is 50, tall, tanned, successful, with his own machine-parts business — middle-class affluence personified. His wife Pat, 45, is less satisfied with herself and her family: a bit of a nagger.

Vaguely she resembles Jacqueline Kennedy; and oddly enough the Louds say they went into this venture imagining they would emerge as "West Coast Kennedys." Thus they see themselves. But Gilbert's camera sees otherwise.

Trouble begins in paradise with instalment two, as 19-year-old Lance, the eldest son, leaves home to join New York's homosexual community. Lance, it appears, dyed his hair silver in imitation of his idol, Andy Warhol, while only 14. He shacks up in the bohemian Chelsea Hotel with a Warhol "superstar," transvestite Holly Woodlawn. When Mom travels across country to visit, they hold painful colloquies about "getting a job" and "looking after your health." Ever-lengthening silences interrupt all the parents' attempts to advise or "communicate" with their children.

Matters go from bad to worse as Mr. Loud's business heads for the rocks, vast quantities of alcohol are consumed, "other women" are pursued and the 20-year-old marriage begins to fall apart before the viewer's eyes. The Louds talk it all out: beside the big blue pool of their five-bedroom, ranch-style home; in the ultra-modern, beautifully-appointed kitchen; in the Jaguar, or one of their other three cars. At last they decide on divorce, while the cameras roll and the tape-recorder turns. And they did, indeed, divorce: today Pat Loud lives with four of the children in the house she once shared with her husband.

The Louds are ambivalent about what they see now on the small screen. On the one hand they accuse Gilbert of selecting all the most bizarre and sensational scenes for his series and leaving everything normal — "the joyous happy hours of communication and fun" — on the cutting-room floor. "It's a caricature," says Lance Loud. "I'm shown as a swish, Dad's a stagger-on drunk." And yet he and his parents seem secretly delighted about the whole business. "I'd do it again," confesses Mr. Loud. "I enjoyed it, and I enjoy it when people ask me about it. I guess it's an ego trip."

Press pundits and social critics are virtually unanimous in taking Gilbert's vision at face value. The Louds are Mr. and Mrs. Contemporary California, and This Is Their Life.

If the series has any meaning at all, it is that materialism doesn't pay; that at the centre of all this American affluence is hollowness and anguish.

But is this really the way it is in today's America? Are the Louds typical of anything beyond themselves? In these questions lies the mystery and the fascination of the series. Gilbert denies that he sought out a "typical U.S. family"; but, he adds, any family living here now is "subject to cultural pressures that are universal." America made the Louds: it therefore bears responsibility for what they are.

There is more than a germ of truth in this; but Gilbert's attempt to make "a completely honest documentary" must ultimately fail because it is based on a series of false premises. The camera itself is "dishonest": through close-up and angle it can emphasise the insignificant, or minimise the important. A good director is "dishonest": he chooses; from the mass of available material, only those moments that conform to his vision of the subject (and Gilbert didn't start with a completely open mind: he first discovered a picture of the kind of family he was seeking "described with absolute accuracy" in the pages of Californian novelist Ross Macdonald.)

Finally, the subjects are "dishonest", for who can be his natural, uninhibited self in the camera's presence — however familiar it may be?

Nor are the Louds uniquely American. Film the lives of any set of wealthy, middle-class Western philistines, and you would probably come up — given the correct social bias — with similar results. In fact, the Louds survive their grotesque ordeal - by - television rather well. They cope, they communicate, they are considerate and kind . . . Yet many Americans clearly agree with leading psychiatrist Dr. Norman Paul, who thinks the series "shows how people tune the guts out of their lives. It's today's epidemic."

The Louds . . . tuning out the guts

'DOLEFUL VIEW'

THE NATION

"If I film any one American family over a long period of time, I will expose the myths, the value systems, the ways of interacting that are American and apply in some way to all of us." Thus Anne Roiphe, author of Up the Sandbox, quotes Craig Gilbert, director of WNET's An American Family (The New York Times Magazine, February 18).

Assuming that Ms Roiphe heard Mr. Gilbert correctly, he has an exaggerated admiration for the analytical powers of his medium and a doleful view of the homogeneity of American life. Just for a start, an essential part of the value system of a great many Americans is the conviction that family life is private; the fact that the Loud family of Santa Barbara was prepared — indeed, apparently eager — to sign a paper giving Gilbert and his camera crew access to its personal relationships over a period of many months suggests that the Louds' "ways of interacting" may in fact apply to very few of us.

An American Family was a bad idea. It is not art, because art does not use people but rather celebrates them; and it is not fact because man, for all his compulsive display, is essentially as secretive as the fiddler crab. The Louds are not popping up all over the spectrum, protesting that it was not that way at all. We will believe them, and wish for them the early comfort of a decent obscurity.

The Land Act Furore: Much Ado About Little

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — There hasn't been such invective and apocalyptic alarm since medicare and the doctors strike in Saskatchewan. And, as a hunch, the perspective a decade from now about the uproar in B.C. over the government's Land Commission Act will be much like the current retrospect on the contentious medicare breakthrough of the early 1960s. That is, there was too much ado about too little. We know this from subsequent events. Medicare quietly rolled on to institutional status in all provinces.

Resonant Bob

A resonant bellwether from bygone days has been in to the fight over the Land Commission in B.C. with his familiar wisdom. Remember Bob Thompson, the former Social Credit leader? Bob now leads a Bible College in the Fraser Valley. He speaks on occasion for the Progressive Conservative Party. Bob told an angry gathering of farmers last week that the terrible bill "is the first step on the road to provincial communism." Bob felt the same about medicare in Saskatchewan in 1961.

One letter to a daily paper gives you the mood. Dozens of others are similar.

"If John Q. Public doesn't stand up and be counted now, we could be in bondage within a year of the accidental election of what I call the New Dispossession Party, who will then control our property, homes, jobs, and lives by means of their insidious theft programs contained in such bills as 35, 42, 74, etc., etc. Perhaps one of the next bills will be to control the exodus of people and capital from British Columbia. The socialsists in East Germany tried to control it with a wall."

This "infamous" bill about land is not yet approved in principle by the B.C. legislature. The minister sponsoring it, David Stupich, has already promised at least four substantial amendments. The premier has promised hearings around the province. He's undertaken to finance outside expertise for the B.C. Federation of Agriculture so that it can bring together criticisms of the bill and amendments,

The behavior of the crowd which marched on Victoria last week was militant and rather absolute in its demands that the bill be scrapped. The three opposition leaders, led in noisy outrage by recent premier, W.A.C. Bennett, insist the bill must be withdrawn.

The premier, Dave Barrett, relaxed into a candid judgment of what has happened with a Vancouver columnist.

"It's been bad PR. Lousy PR. We didn't explain things. That's obvious. We know that now."

He told the columnist that the government had been "naive. We didn't prepare the public for what we were trying to do."

The visitor from Ottawa, dropping into the populous Lower Mainland, all roiled and racketing from the Land Commission furore, assumes at once that the bill in question must be an extremely radical one. I did until I got a copy of the bill.

To the easterner, used to the powers given federal agencies — for example, to the National Capital Commission or the Canada Development Corporation — or to the powers exerted for years in Ontario by the Ontario Water Resources Commission or by Ontario Hydro or by the Ontario Municipal Board — B.C.'s Bill 42 seems pretty mild.

Familiar Problem

The problems which the bill sets out to meet are familiar in every region in North America which has had progressive urbanization and population growth.

Good farmland gets subdivided for housing developments. City people realize there must be more provision for green space and parkland. Zoning of lands in juxtaposition for specific purposes makes planning sense in terms of economics, tax potential, service costs, aesthetics and ecology.

The bill would create a commission of five persons to keep arable land for farm use, preserve greenbelts around towns and cities, foster and maintain the family farm, buy and sell land, and to designate land into four "reserve" categories — agricultural, green belt, land bank and park land.

I wondered, after reading the bill, how anyone could see it as radical or dangerous or unusual. I swear that a similar bill brought in by the Ontario government would not cause an uproar.

The tempest in B.C. seems to rise from this situation. Much of the province's small fraction of arable land is around Vancouver and the other cities of the province. It is held in fairly small acreage by a lot of people who have been as much, if not more hopeful of doing well out of the incremental values of the land and its eventual sale, rather than from farming.

Socred Followers

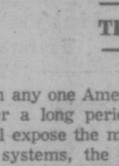
Thus the freezing of agricultural land blights many hopes of fortune. Moreover, most of the hopefuls have been followers of Social Credit. They are only too ready to see measures of the NDP government as "red" and confiscative. The trauma of their election upset has worn away. Their spiralling frustrations, out of office, turn from defeat to revival, in this God-given issue.

It is noticeable, below the one-sided invective and th lame excuse of "lousy PR" by the government, that many people and groups, even editorialists agree that B.C. must have thorough, tough measures to control and plan the future use of its land resources.

When one hears or reads again and again, that something was needed but not this act with its particular features, one is right back to the medicare example (and before that, to hospital care, and before that, to unemployment insurance, and before that, to old age pensions,).

The purposes of the bill do stand up, even if the provisions to achieve them may be much amended. By the mid-80s it will be rare that land, particularly farm land, will change hands without the future use of the land being determined by a board or planning commission.

Buddy Can You Spare a Buck?



RUSSELL BAKER

With the dollar undergoing the monetary equivalent of surgical sex change, this is a good time for the American government to do something about coin reform.

It is clear by this time that the greenback is an antique, and ought to be done away with. When derelicts brace you on the sidewalk, murmuring, "Buddy, can you spare a dollar for a cup of coffee?" it should be clear even to a Republican secretary of the treasury that it is time to adapt to reality.

The obvious solution is to turn the dollar bill into a coin. The grocer treats it as loose change; why shouldn't the government? Men who keep their folding money in billfolds have probably noticed lately that wallet pockets in their clothes now wear out faster and faster. This is because of the accelerating frequency with which the wallet has to be slid out and in over increasingly expensive fabric as demand for dollar bills becomes increasingly insistent.

The current melodrama of the dollar's eerie shrinkage provides the publicity music necessary for coin reform, but we should not be contented with transmutation of paper into brass. The old coins — quarters, nickels, pennies — have been out of date a long time. Total reform is overdue.

Consider the quarter. An antique, originally created for heavy tipping. Headwaiters. Pullman porters who had seen you through an overnight trip. After the inflation that followed World War II, its status declined from elegance to bourgeois businesslike serviceability. It flourished to tip cab drivers, doormen, waitresses in lunch joints; to buy a shoeshine, a magazine. Now it is wrong for everything.

People who once tugged forelocks at a quarter tip may now aim it at your head — there is an incivility inflation, too — if it isn't accompanied by at least a dime, and maybe a nickel more. The quarter no longer fits. Its replacement should be a coin worth about 37½ cents. It could be called a "tipper."

Magazines that only yesterday used to be yours for a quarter now require 53 cents before they will yield up their secrets. (How to have hip fat surgically removed; latest trends in adultery; bad news about the dollar; the time Liz and Dick almost bumped into Jackie off Gibraltar). The price rise is due to inflation and the six per cent sales tax, which is spreading across America like the elm blight.

The logical move at the mint is to stop making pennies. Pennies don't buy anything anymore anyhow. Even penny candy nowadays costs two cents for considerably less than a penny's worth. Also stop making nickels.

In its day the nickel was a truly great coin. That good metallic feel! And the beautiful precision of the thing. It was created for only two specific purposes — but what a magnificent two they were!

It bought a bus, subway or streetcar ride. And it bought the Saturday Evening Post with its weekly testament to the soundness of the dollar.

Well, the streetcar is gone, and most of the buses, and those that remain cost 40 or 50 cents per ride. And the Post is gone, too, with the soundness of the dollar, and gone with all these wonderful things is the whole point of the nickel.

What replacements? Instead of the penny, a three-cent piece. The ideal coin to pay the universal six per cent sales tax, especially since nothing nowadays costs less than 50 cents, even penny candy if you want to get a really honest penny's worth.

The nickel, by mint decree, would become the new 50-cent piece. This way it would again serve the functions it was made for — buying magazines and local transportation. The present 50-cent piece would be eliminated for the dollar coin. A coin any bigger would weigh too much and wear out coin pockets anyhow, so there is no point in retaining the 50-cent piece.

Money men can probably find flaws here. A case can be made that instead of a dollar coin, there ought to be a 99-cent coin, in view of the merchant's passion for pricing sales items at $1.99, $2.99, $3.99 and so on up to $10 billion and 99 cents. Alternately, the coin might be made worth $1.05, to build the sales tax payment right into the currency.

That is for experts to settle. The basic need, however, cannot be winked away by treasury bureaucrats. We abolished the rumble seat, didn't we? Why be sentimental about the greenback? Let's make it a coin that men can drop on a plastic table and, hearing its clack, be moved to smile and say, "sound as a yen!"

The Empress Far From Finished

$5M IMPROVEMENTS

Canadian Pacific will spend another $5 million on The Empress hotel over the next 10 years, including a new swimming pool which should be completed by year's end, Donald Curtis of Toronto, national president of CP Hotels said in Victoria Friday night.

"There is no thought of tearing down The Empress," he said.

"In fact we plan to spend millions more on her."

He said The Empress was a unique hotel that must be preserved.

The swimming pool, he said, will be built to the south of the Conservatory, where the greenhouse now stands. Dressing rooms and a sauna bath will be installed under the Conservatory. The Conservatory will not be altered.

About $400,000 is being spent on The Empress this year and money will be spent at the rate of about half a million per year over the next ten years to improve the efficiency of the premises.

Curtis was in Victoria Friday to introduce the new manager, W. A. Gray of Saskatchewan. He also presided over a farewell reception for Louis Finamore who is retiring to rejoin the Hilton chain in Quebec after four years as manager here.

Also in Victoria was Banff Springs Hotel manager Ivor Petrak, vice president for the CP Hotel mountain and Pacific region.

National headquarters for the CP Hotel chain is the Royal York in Toronto.

NO CAMPAIGNING

Curtis said he would not actively campaign for a convention centre for Victoria, although he thought one was needed.

He said a convention centre should be funded completely by governments with the municipality taking the initiative. Municipalities in other areas got their conventions as a result of campaigns by municipal governments and tended to be government funded.

"The Empress can survive without a convention centre although one would undoubtedly help," he said.

Curtis said it is wrong to think of The Empress as being an old, inefficient hotel. He said good management could make it very efficient, particularly in view of the room for internal expansion.

For example, if demand for room service increased, there could be a kitchen on every floor to supply instant food.

Curtis said CP Hotels hopes to expand on the world market in a grand scale.

The company is extremely eager to get a hotel in Honolulu where demand is strong, although competition is fierce.

He said efforts to buy a suitable existing hotel have so far been unsuccessful, but the company is still trying.

The company will build its first hotel in Paris to be completed in three years and a hotel is also planned for Tel Aviv, Israel.

At present the only CP hotel outside Canada is the Chateau Royale in Mexico City, just purchased from the Hilton chain.

In Canada, CP hopes for its first hotel in Ottawa and is looking for a site in Vancouver.

Curtis said new Canadian hotels should be located near skiing as that was becoming very popular. He said CP was looking at sites in the Grouse Mountain and Whistler Mountain areas but had come to no decision so far.

Nixon's Phase 3 Has Bombed Out

By HOBART ROWEN
(An analysis by the financial editor of the Washington Post.)

WASHINGTON — Phase III of President Nixon's economic plan has bombed out. It is a complete failure. The U.S. faces not only a consumer revolution over soaring food prices, but a runaway inflation in industrial raw materials that has not yet been reflected in the retail costs of finished goods.

In this situation, there is only one possible answer: an immediate 90-day freeze of all prices and wages, during which time President Nixon can rectify some of the damage he did when he abandoned Phase II for a weaker Phase III.

And this time around, the president will have to extend controls to farm prices. That will be politically unpopular in the farm belt, cutting into farm income and profits which have rise sharply.

Farmers have had some lean years, to be sure. But there has been an increase in cash receipts from farm marketings this year that can be described only as huge. The current quarter is estimated at 25 per cent above a year ago. For the year as a whole, the estimate is 26 per cent above 1973. In dollar terms, 1972 cash receipts were $58.5 billion, a total which will rise to $73.8 billion this year.

Farm operators' net income, after all expenses, rose from $17.4 billion in 1971 to $19.8 billion in 1972, and is projected at $22.4 billion for 1973.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, of course, sharply opposes any controls on prices at the farm, on the theory that such a step would only cause a reduction in food supplies. He claims there is an increase now in the making that should bring prices down by late 1973 or early 1974.

But it is doubtful if the country can wait that long. As Harvard Prof. Otto Eckstein says, the department of agriculture overstated a policy of scarcity by at least two years, in an effort to be "nice to farmers," and we're all paying the bill for it now.

The policy of scarcity (which the administration is now desperately trying to reverse over farmer objections) combined with the Russian wheat sale and a strong demand for food products has resulted in a spectacular 53.2 per cent jump in the annual rate of wholesale farm product prices over the past three months.

But as bad as the food price picture is (and it would naturally get the headlines), the real trouble is coming in the cost of finished goods in retail stores. Industrial commodities are soaring out of sight. Hardly a day goes by without an announcement by some major company of an increase in prices.

What has happened is very clear: Phase II, which required pre-notification of price increases and surveillance of misbehavior by the revenue service, worked very well. But business and industry took the announcement of Phase III as the go-ahead to be more relaxed. Phase III constituted a major error in judgment by Mr. Nixon and his advisers.

Foreign Sales Slip Causes Turn-Around

OTTAWA (CP) — The country had a deficit of $584 million in its international balance of payments for 1972, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The figure marked a sharp turn-around from 1971 when a surplus of $400 million was achieved.

Almost the entire change resulted from a decline of more than $900 million in the merchandise Canada sells abroad. Total for these exports at year-end was $1,397 billion.

Buoyant economic activity at home, particularly late in the year, spurred the flow of imports which, on the entire year, rose 60 per cent faster than exports, the statistics bureau said.

"A relatively low rate of growth in exports to overseas countries probably reflected a slower pickup in economic growth in many of these countries than in Canada, particularly in the early part of the year."

Tht first and third quarters of 1972 were harlest on the payments balance. There was some evidence of a turn-around in the final three months of the year.

SHOWED DEFICIT

For the final quarter, the balance showed a deficit of only $43 million, down from $209 million in the previous three months. The surplus on merchandise trade in the final quarter jumped to $517 million from $213 million in the prior three months.

This increase of 14.4 per cent to a total of $5.514 billion outstripped the increase in imports, up 8. 4 per cent.

There were significant increases in foreign — mainly U.S.—purchases of automotive products, lumber, nickel, wheat, crude petroleum, iron ore and copper.

At the same time Canada bought more abroad, mainly from the U.S. Imports of automotive products, machinery, communication equipment and fabricated steel all ran higher.

Consumer Spending Helped Beat Doldrums

TORONTO (CP) — Consumer spending helped pull Canadian business out of the doldrums of the early 1970s and the energy boom may help it to continue expanding to 1980, Jack Toten said Wednesday.

Mr. Toten, vice-president, planning and economics, Bank of Montreal, was one of four speakers at a day-long session on the Canadian consumer in the 1970s sponsored by the Conference Board in Canada.

The board provides economic and business information to 400 associates in Canada.

The speakers presented a picture of changing population patterns, increased personal income and changing attitudes to consumer spending.

Mr. Toten said:

"The decade began with business in the midst of a recession. The subsequent expansion has been sparked, in the main, by consumer spending and, at times, by exports. In the immediate future the driving-force seems likely to shift to capital expenditures as the energy boom gets under way.

"It will be economically possible to tap remote Canadian sources (of energy).

"These resources can be economically tapped only if the market is sufficiently large to enable the huge capital investments to be written off within a reasonable time. It seems to be this inevitably means increased exports to the United States."

Mr. Toten said he believes Canada can finance the huge amounts of investment money required and can organize the use of foreign funds to prevent trouble with the exchange rate.

UNEMPLOYMENT TO DROP

Thomas Schweitzer said unemployment is expected to drop to around four per cent by the end of the decade, in spite of an increase of 2.5 million people in the work force during the 1970s. Mr. Schweitzer is a staff member of the Economic Council of Canada.

He said there will be a decrease in child and teen-age markets, but a rise in the number of young households and therefore a rise in the demand for household goods and services.

Mr. Schweitzer predicted a coincident rise of almost 50 per cent in real disposable income per capita compared with an increase of about 35 per cent in the 1960s.

He said research has convinced him the growth in demand for health services is directly affected by the rise in income.

"The Canadian consumer reacts to a one per cent increase in his real income after taxes by raising his demands for pharmaceutical products by 1.2 per cent, for doctor's services by 1.4 per cent, for hospital services by 2.4 per cent."

SPENDING TO INCREASE

Fabian Linden said that in the United States there will be a 100 per cent growth in the spending ability of the 25-to 34-year age group during the 1970s. Mr. Linden is director of consumer research for The Conference Board in the U.S.

Blair Little said the pursuit of health, increased leisure and changed family patterns that no longer have child-raising as their focus are all-important elements in the buying patterns of young adult consumers today.

Mr. Little is associate professor of business administration at the University of Western Ontario in London.

He said time also is a major factor. "Today's time is at a premium and is not to be squandered on unnecessary routine."

Therefore, he said, the young are looking for products that save them time, that are simple to purchase and accompanied by information useful to the consumer.

Authors Excommunicated

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican today angrily excommunicated two Italian authors who took tape recorders into hundreds of confessionals throughout Italy for a sex survey.

The authors, Norberto Valentini and Claradi Meglio, said they simulated 636 "confessions" to obtain the priests' reactions on such topics as premarital sex, adultery, birth control and unconventional sexual practices.

Vatican press spokesman Federico Alessandrini said the pair had committed "a particularly odious violation of the sacrament of penance' and fell automatically under the excommunication order cutting them off from the church.

"It's barbaric," Valentini said. "What a way of opening up a dialogue."

The survey, entitled "Sex in the Confessional," appeared in bookstores this week shortly after a mass circulation magazine published excerpts from it.

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Lennon, the 32-year-old British singer, songwriter, author and film-maker who became a favorite of young Americans as a member of the Beatles, was ordered out of the United States within 60 days Friday because of a disputed conviction for possession of hashish in England in 1968.

WASHINGTON — The Senate foreign relations committee gave its consent Friday to President Nixon's nomination of Ruth L. Farkas to be ambassador to Luxembourg. She and her husband last year pledged $300,000 to Nixon's re-election campaign.

WOODLAND HILLS, Calif. — Old-time cowboy actor Ken Maynard, 77, the last of the "Big Four" of early western movie heroes, died Friday night.

Officials at the Motion Pictur Country Hospital here said the veteran of about 300 movies was admitted Jan. 18 for treatment of nutritional deficiency, arthritis and general physical deterioration.

A native of Mission, Tex., Maynard first galloped on to the movie screen in 1923. The next year, he had the starring role in $50,000 Reward.

TORONTO — "See the difference" was the slogan chosen for CBLFT, the French-language television station here which went on the air for the first time at noon Friday.

To mark the occasion, Radio-Canada taped a talk-show in Toronto with such guests as entertainers Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster, Ontario Labor Minister Fernand Guindon and Montreal singer Louise Forestier.

The new French-language television station intended to serve Toronto's 300,000 franco-phones and give bilingual anglo-phones a chance to keep in practice.

LINDEN, N. J. — Mary Mitchell, reputed to be the queen of American gypsies, was buried Friday with a necklace of $50 gold pieces and a $1,000 bill in her pocket at ceremonies attended by 1,000 of her followers from as far away as California.

The gypsy queen died Tuesday at St. Vincent's hospital in New York city ater a five-month illnss. She was 70.

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — The Australian foreign trade minister, Dr. Jim Cairns, said today that he may sail in the New Zealand yacht making protest voyage to the French nuclear test area in the South Pacific.

Cairns, who met the protest's organizers in Auckland Fiday night, said whether he goes to Mururoa atoll probably will depend on getting his government's approval and on the date of the tests.

NEW YORK — Impresario Sol Hurok announced Friday that Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet will open a four-week run at the Metropolitan Opera House here June 26.

It is the Soviet troupe's first visit to New York since 1966. The ballet performed in Canada last summer.

PARIS (AP) — The first two Concorde supersonic airliner prototypes will carry out high-altitude tests over the Atlantic, Australia and the Antarctic soon to check possible effects on the atmosphere of supersonic airliners, it was learned Thursday. The French-built 001 model will fly over the Bay of Biscay and the Irish Sea and the British-built 002 will fly in the Australian area.

Chest Needs, Purposes Must Be Clear—Armstrong

W. H. Armstrong, outgoing president of the Community Chest, has asked that a clear rationale be established as to the needs and purposes of the community before the United Appeal drive next year.

The hope was expressed in the agency's annual report presented Friday afternoon.

He reported that progress has been made towards re-organization and re-orientation of the Community Chest to a new communly role.

Discussions have been held with representatives of the provincial government and more are planned for the immediate future, he said.

"We believe that these will lead to a clarification of the need and importance of maintaining a strong separately incorporated network of service organizations in the community."

Armstrong noted that Human Resources Minister Norman Levi has emphasized the importance of continuing participation by volunteers.

"We anticipate that in the future the Chest will become a fund-granting organization rather than a deficit-financing organization so there will be increased flexibility in the allocation of funds."

While this may initially have a disturbing effect on the traditional Chest-agency relationships which have developed over the years . . . we feel confident that the end result will be a net improvement in the kinds of services available, the president said.

He noted the Community Chest will move its office at the end of this month to the second floor of the Yorkshire Trust Building, 737 Fort, a direct cost-saving of almost $1,200.

Armstrong referred to 1972 as a year of frustration for the agency as "we were unable to raise the amount required to meet the full needs of member agencies."

But he expressed appreciation to workers in the 1972 Appeal which raised $625,966, or 86 per cent of its goal of $724,931.

New community chest president is P. A. Darling.

20 STUDENTS TO BE PICKED

Twenty Grade 11 and 12 students from across British Columbia will receive bursaries this summer to attend a theatre workshop at the University of Victoria.

The B.C. government's cultural fund has made $5,000 available for the scholarships to the workshop which runs for seven weeks, from July 3 to Aug. 17.

Winners will be chosen by schools and the UVic theatre department in conjunction with provincial drama festivals.

Classes in acting, mime, speech, design, costume and stagecraft will be conducted by faculty members Esse Ljungh, former CBC director and Kaz Piesowocki, mime artist.

Bond Sales To Public Urged By MFA Chief

North Vancouver district Mayor Ron Andrews, re-elected Friday as chairman of Municipal Finance Authority, urged the authority consider direct-to-the-public sale of bonds.

The method was considered a year ago but rejected because some municipalities had their own over-the-counter sales to cover specified local projects and MFA did not want to compete.

But earlier this month the provincial government approved widening MFA borrowing powers to permit the financing of all local undertakings, not simply the sewer, waterworks and pollution abatement projects to which it has been confined.

Andrews told the annual meeting here the MFA should not undertake new European borrowings until international currency markets stabilize.

Various capital markets of the world have been investigated, Andrews said, and major financial institutions are anxious to do business with the authority.

Andrews voiced caution in the approach to direct sales, which had to be completely successful if the authority's bond rating is to remain high. He called for the active support and participation of mayors, aldermen, chairmen and directors of regional districts.

There are prospects of a rise in U.S. rates of interest, and although the market is at present poor, the Canadian bond picture remains brightest with rates of 8.25-8.35 per cent.

There is $17.9 million in outstanding requests before the authority, of which $13.4 million could be covered in a spring issue.

Andrews said the government has been asked to allow provincially-controlled pension funds to invest in MFA bonds.

"The municipal superannuation fund purchases some $30 million in securities each year. It would seem logical that a fund owned by the municipalities and their employees should be able to invest in their own bonds," Andrews said.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis was re-elected deputy chairman, along with trustees Mayor Robert Prittie, Burnaby; D. M. Beaton, Nanaimo Regional District; Jim Stuart, Central Oakangan Regional District, and Mayor A. M. Sheppard, Fraser-Fort George Regional District. Seventh member of the board of trustees is newcomer Frank West, Sunshine Coast Regional District.

Vintage Car Sold

GENEVA (AP) — A 65-year-old white Benz driven in United States and Grand Prix races before the First World War was sold at auction Thursday to an English collector, Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, for almost $90,000.

Pot for Pain

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A 76-year-old man who said he was growing marijuana to ease the pain of his cancer was charged Thursday with a felony. State Attorney Don Nichols filed the charge against Nathan Zamostansky, a former Connecticut farmer, but instructed the sheriff's department not to take the man to jail.

Bureau Director Sues For Wages

John Woods, director of the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, claimed $400 damages against his former employer in Victoria small debts court Friday.

The suit was filed against Slegg Bros. Lumber Ltd. and Henry Hudson Apartments Ltd. after Slegg Bros. sold the apartment building at the end of October.

Judge D. G. Ashby reservered decision.

Wood's position as property manager for Henry Hudson Apartments Ltd. terminated at the time of the sale and Woods claimed Slegg Bros. failed to give him a month's notice.

His monthly salary was $400.

The building was sold to a Judge Hansen, owner of Utah Apartment Holdings Inc.

Counsel for the companies, Nicholas Lang, said the apartment building was sold with the understanding that Woods' employment would continue with the new owner.

Slegg Bros. controller John Graham testified: "ever since the building was built, it's been known it was for sale. Mr. Woods was quite aware of it."

The sale was supposed to be finalized at the end of September but it was held up, said Graham.

"It was then that both parties had made arrangements that he would stay on. In fact, he was paid in November by the new owner," he said.

Plenty Of 'Fertilizer' In House—MLA

The week of business in the B.C. Legislature ended Friday as it had begun with continued debate on second reading of the NDP government's controversial land commission legislation.

But the final speaker of the week, and the only farmer in the house, Donald Lewis (NDP—Shuswap) countered a total of almost 24 hours of opposition criticism by accusing the opposition parties of whipping up public concern over the legislation "for their own good and not for the good of the farmer."

"There has been more fertilizer spread in this house about farmers since I've been here than a farmer spreads in 100 years," Lewis said to the accompaniment of loud laughter from the government benches.

NO SUGGESTIONS

Lewis also accused the B.C. Federation of Agriculture of failing to offer any constructive suggestion with regard to Bill 42. He said "everyone from the Boy Scouts up" conducts intensive lobbying of MLAs throughout the year, but he wasn't aware of a single member of the NDP caucus being approached by the federation.

"The only one I saw was on the day of the protest," (on Thursday last week) he said.

Lewis claimed farmers in his riding are running 4 to 1 in favor of the legislation, and there will be 100 per cent support among the farming community once the promised amendments are brought in.

NONE HURT

He said not a single farmer will be hurt by the legislation, providing other legislation is also brought in to make farming a more attractive and economic acitivity. Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, he predicted, would become a "hero" for his efforts.

Appealing to all opposition parties to co-operate with the government in a sincere attempt to help the farmer, Lewis said: "If we have to go through this same old tripe every time we try to help the farmers we're not going to get anything done."

He urged MLAs to "do some concrete thinking" about the problems of agriculture and the farmers who have been "abused and neglected."

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace suggested the land-freeze imposed by order-in-council last December should be allowed to stand until the government has had a chance to study all the suggested amendments and proposals. The revised legislation could then be brought in later, possibly at the fall session of the legislature, he said.

LAND INVENTORY

One of the essential tasks the government should tackle first, in co-operation with municipalities and regional districts, is the compilation of an accurate land inventory throughout the province.

Wallace said his party has received more than 18,000 pieces of mail opposing the bill, and in his years as an MLA he could not recall any issue that had evoked such a response.

Among the questions he said Stupich should answer in replying to the debate is whether the regulations accompanying the legislation would give a full definition of farmland.

He also asked why cabinet approval is required when the proposed land commission designates an area of farmland, but not when it designates land for recreational, greenbelt or land bank purposes.

Wallace said the Conservatives feel it is not the intent of the legislation which the house is debating, but the "mechanics" of achieving the aim.

"While we agree with the principle and intent and philosophy of preserving farmland we feel it could be done in a better, fairer more rational method," he said.

Debate on second reading was adjourned by Liberal leader David Anderson.

FARMER MLA RAISES LAUGHS

Some speakers in the Legislature's debate on the land commission legislation this week have been declaring their personal land holdings, but none did so as amusingly as farmer Donald Lewis (NDP-Shuswap) on Friday.

Lewis told the house he has been a full-time farmer for seven years and has "60 head of cattle, 12,000 chickens and two tired roosters."

A little later, there was another gale of laughter from members as Lewis recounted the joke of the farmer who gets up at 4 a.m. to milk the cows and the developer who gets up at 9 o'clock "to milk the farmer."

Logging Act Changes Define Tax

Changes in the Logging Tax Act were made Friday when Lands and Forests Minister Bob Williams introduced amendments which more clearly define what wood products may be taxed.

He called them mainly "housecleaning changes" which bring the act into line with former Social Credit government policy before a recent court case confined taxes on lumber to the initial sawmilling operation.

Before the court case, "the various stages of processing were included in the terms of the administration of the tax," Williams said outside the house in an interview.

The word lumber in the act is replaced by the term log product, which is defined as "every thing resulting from the procesing, treating, manufacturing, or breaking down of logs or their by-products or wastes and the making of anything therefrom into salable products."

DIAPERED GORILLA is cuddled in Alberquerque, N.M., hospital after being rejected by its mother after birth Tuesday. The four-pound baby was placed in an incubator.

Reform Plea Succeeds

Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake ordered a $500 fine and one-year probationary term Friday, for a man convicted of trafficking in MDA who had "cleaned up his act."

Richard Michael Pegg, 21, of 425 Quebec, was given the lenient sentence after Drake said, "I am quite persuaded by the evidence" given by two character witnesses.

RCMP undercover agent Blaine Froats testified that Pegg sold him two caps of MDA for $5 in the Colony Inn June 10.

Before sentence, Pegg testified, "I never trafficked in a drug for profit. In the case of Mr. Froats I did it as a favor."

Asked why he dropped out of the drug scene, Pegg replied. "There was no future. They didn't help me at all."

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood said Pegg has completely changed his life style since then, has dropped out of the drug scene and is on his way to becoming a useful member of the community.

"The man who appears today before you for sentencing is a much more responsible man than the one who was originally charged," he said.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson pointed out that the courts had been lenient with Pegg in sentencing him on two other charges in 1970.

"Despite that ... he continued to act in a manner that is anti-social and, it is our submission, criminal."

As a probationary condition, Pegg was ordered to "refrain from associations with known drug users."

Also in county court, a 22-year-old Victoria man was convicted by Drake of trafficking in heroin.

Keith Alan Iverson, of 1115 Collinson, was remanded to April 12 for sentence.

Undercover agent Froats testified that Iverson sold him one cap of heroin for $20 Aug. 1 in the Churchill Hotel.

Escaper Caught In Toronto

A William Head prison inmate who disappeared Dec. 15 has been arrested by Toronto Metropolitan Police, Colwood RCMP said today.

RCMP received confirmation Thursday that John Percy Zona, 27, was recaptured about two weeks ago.

Zona was one of nine inmates given temporary passes to see the Ice Capades. The other eight returned.

Serving six years for robbery, Zona was due for release Oct. 16, 1975, police said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Victorian who "used his wife as a punchbag" was Friday given a suspended sentence and placed on 18 months probation on two counts of common assault.

Ernest Perry, of 2673 Blanshard, had pleaded guilty to the charges, arising from a domestic incident March 6.

Crown prosecutor John Macintyre said the man's previous record showed he had "used his wife as a punching bag." Judge William Ostler decided against a jail sentence for the man solely on the grounds that his wife was prepared to give her husband another chance to rehabilitate himself.

The man was ordered to report to Alcoholics Anonymous and made to promise total abstinence for the probationary term.

A 59-year-old Montreal man who stole three golf balls from the sporting goods department of The Bay was fined $250 by Ostler.

Robert Litwin, pleaded guilty to the Thursday offence, which he termed a "mental aberration." He had $460 on him at the time of his arrest.

A 45-year-old father of five, charged with impaired driving, was fined $200 and given 10 months to pay, in a case which Ostler said "had certainly excited my sympathy."

Kam Singh Bhoodpaul, of 2683 Blanshard, was arrested Thursday on Gorge Road at Garbally, after police noticed he was driving erratically. Bhoodpaul told the court he had drunk only two bottles of beer, but was unused to drinking.

The judge ordered the fine after hearing that the man and his wife earn a combined salary of $120 a week as farm laborers in Saanich.

James Douglas Paul Barnes, 18, of 2784 Claude, was given a suspended sentence and six-month probationary term by Judge F. S. Green after he was found guilty of possession of hashish Oct. 27.

In traffic court, Brian Leslie Weich, 23, of 1604 Pembroke, was fined $350 by Judge Harold Alder after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Thursday.

VSE DELISTS METROSPOSAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange Friday delisted Metrosposal Industries Ltd. formerly Calmark Industries Ltd., for failure to maintain listing requirements.

Calmark Industries was suspended from the mining board Dec. 17, 1971 pending clarification of company affairs. The exchange said today that since then the company has been unable to satisfy the requirements of either the exchange or the British Columbia Securities Commission in order to regain listing status.

Love Story of a Lost Town

By DON VIPOND

Anyox. As in Fanny Box. Mine and smelter town hidden mercifully far up an inlet north of Prince Rupert. Slag heaped high, greenery withered by stack gas, grimy harbor, dreary houses, charred stumps, barren hills, sullen rain, fathomless snow.

That's what you get from just looking at pictures. But sometimes a picture needs a thousand words before you know its worth.

THE TOWN THAT GOT LOST, by Pete Loudon. Gray's Publishing. $7.50.

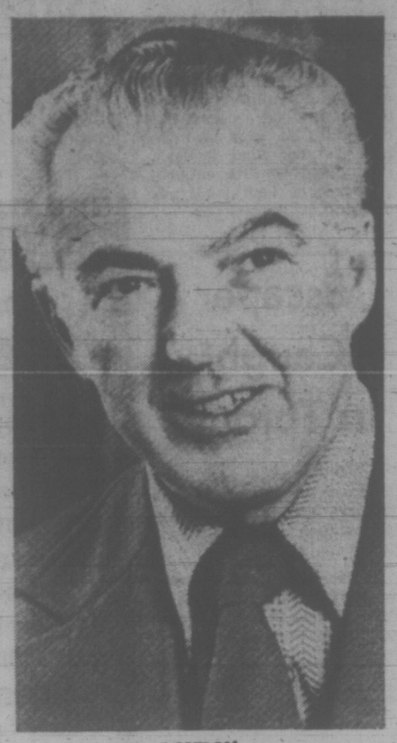
Anyox is a ghost town now, victim of the Depression, drifting back to dust in the wilderness for the past 38 years. And this is a love story.

A love story about home, how a boy discovered it, revelled in it as he rambled through a junior decade in Anyox, how the man was haunted by it, prodded at last into going back — which is something nobody is supposed to be able to do.

Out of Pete Loudon's pilgrimage has come this requiem, the sort of funny wistful song most of us have trapped somewhere deep inside but have pushed just out of hearing. Pocket treasures from childhood we would like to stroke again but can't quite reach.

Anyox is history, an incident which shaped the lives of about 3,000 people for a little while (as history goes) not so many years ago.

Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Company gave it life and took it away, just like God. In the beginning there was copper to be mined and melted and in the end nobody could buy the copper. So God pulled out in 1935.



LOUDON
. . . Klim and copper

But this is a story of Anyox only incidentally. It is really a story of how a family, friends and a community nourished a little boy and how a skilled writer acknowledges that love by telling lovingly about it. Loudon could have compiled the same vivid memories wherever he grew up because he has that sort of talent. Perhaps Anyox helped make him that way.

The Town That Got Lost is for everyone who was once a kid, not just for refugees from Anyox. There are things here to tickle everyone's memory, like how Pete and his best friend Frank were sentenced to and barely survived The Strap, no thanks to poet Pauline Johnson.

Ever tasted Klim, or heard of the Stolen Light Bulb Company? Ever chewed the sweatband from your hat at the Saturday matinee, maybe watching Bob Steele ride the celluloid range? Remember any distant moments of sweet revenge, like the time apprentice Johnny Lazaruk vanquished the persecuting journeymen machinists?

Times readers will remember Pete Loudon's byline over feature stories just a few short years ago. Since then he has been an editor in Port Alberni and Nanaimo and now works for the Vancouver Province. All told, he has won five newspaper writing awards in British Columbia and a national award for travel writing. His first book is another winner. Anyox taught him that if beauty is only skin deep, so is ugliness. Whatever you call home, it's people who make the difference.

ANYOX . . . Portrait of a company town

Burning Issues From the Past

By PAT BARCLAY

"For the well-rounded intellectual adventure", says the ad inviting us to buy a subscription to Canadian Forum. "The one journal that will publish material too difficult, or too scandalous, for commercial magazines."

Unique in Canada because it is a serious publication which has survived for over 50 years, the Forum is well named. A glance at a list of its contributors over the years reveals that many of Canada's most controversial social critics and literary figures found it a hospitable home.

"So many people who had something to say said it in the Forum that in a very real sense the backfiles of the magazine are a national treasure." Fortunately for treasure-hunting Canadians, two Ontario university professors took on the task of compiling an anthology of 350 Forum pieces.

The book is divided chronologically, so that each decade from the 20s to the 60s gets a section and a brief introduction all to itself. This approach leads to some glib-sounding value judgments on the part of the editors, e.g., "The depression decade unquestionably marked the high point of the Canadian Forum. Times were tough . . . but adversity evitently stimulated the outpouring of a brilliant array of articles . . .", and "If there is a dark decade in the history of The Canadian Forum it may well be the 1950's . . ."

On the other hand, there is something remarkably reassuring about having the immediate past summed up for us with such confident economy. It's as though all those burning issues, and the people who wrote them in the Forum, were part of a coherent scheme of things after all.

The editors of Selections from the Forum deserve credit for their part in giving shape to Canada's life and times as they have been mirrored in the Forum. How much more credit is due, then, to the successive editors of the magazine itself, who had the intelligence to know what they were looking for, and the wit to recognize it even when it arrived in the form of an unsolicited manuscript.

One of the Forum's proudest boasts is that it has always encouraged unknown authors and sought to defy accepted wisdom. (Was it only last year the Forum scooped the press and enraged the politicians by publishing the first version of the Gray Report on foreign investment?)

"Certain themes", say the editors of Selections from the Forum, "have recurred with striking regularity in the Forum decade after decade." As the decision to leak the Gray Report suggests, the major theme of the past is one which is still very much with us today: our national independence.

"Another perennial subject" was McKenzie King: "How did the dumpy little wizard from Kingsmere do it?" A host of contributors did their best to grapple with this one.

Feminists may discover another thread running through the pages of Selections: several short stories depict unenviable realities in the lives of Canadian women.

(One story, "Phyllus", seems to have caused quite a stir. I had forgotten about Toronto the Good. "I am informed that such tales have an appeal to a certain class of reader but I had not thought that this class subscribed to The Canadian Forum", wrote a scandalized Torontonian in 1927. The Forum felt moved to Phyllus' defence. "From the psychological standpoint it is interesting that of all the races in the world it is mainly among the British people that this belief in the suppression of all discussion of sex problems is strongly held . . . Is it really in the interests of morality that this inhibition should be continued? And if we agree that ignorance and innocence are not synonymous, is not fiction a valid medium for the purpose of enlightenment." Poor Phyllus needed an abortion and chose suicide instead. The seduction scene was so circumspect I had to read it twice to make sure anything had happened.)

For readers interested in or provoked by the Forum's continuing discussion of Canadian independence, its managing editor, Abraham Rotstein, has co-edited (with Gary Lax) a "reference handbook" containing the best available thought and information on the subject. Titled Independence: the Canadian Challenge, its red and white cover illustration shows a Canadian flag button, unobtrusively labelled "Made in USA." Contributors include Peter C. Newman, Eric Kierans, Claude Ryan, John Livingston, and many more.

Canadians today seem to be divided into two groups: one group fears for the survival of our nation, while the other group scoffs or yawns at their distress. What all Canadians can agree upon is that the responsible individualism of a magazine like The Canadian Forum is a vital contribution to our national health.

BEATLES
. . . shadowy

Apple Sugar

By ROLAND MORGAN

It was too much to hope that Playboy Press would come out with a book about Apple Corporation, the recording company set up by the Beatles, which actually said something. Instead they have chosen to publish a memoir by the "house hippie" whose main function in his three years with the company seems to have been to clip newspapers, pour drinks and roll "B-52 Hash Bombers" to smoke in the toilet.

THE LONGEST COCKTAIL PARTY, by Richard Dilello. Musson. $10.25.

It's a shame because Apple warranted more than Richard DiLello's adolescent approach, which is a throw-back to the kind of teeny-bopper Honey Magazine culture which the Beatles were trying to — not so much escape — but transcend.

The Fabs were somewhere near the peak of their success, they had recently appeared on a world-wide television link-up singing Love, Love, Love to a couple of hundred million viewers and the good vibrations were echoing through an entire generation when in 1968, they set up the record company of everyone's dreams. An artistic foundation devoted to creativity first, commercial success second. Young talent would be actively sought out, not forced to spend years struggling to get grey men behind desks to listen to their test tapes — which was what had happened to the Beatles.

The whole enterprise went rather seriously wrong. It floundered along for a couple of years until Allen Klein, manager of the Rolling Stones, was called in to set things straight. Klein negotiated the Beatles free of the EMI recording company commitments, and some of the real Beatles millions began to get back to Apple and into the pockets of the lucky lads. But that was really the end of what the Beatles had set but to do, and the beginning of something else. Why did the original idea go wrong?

Alas, music buffs will never find out from the likes of DiLello. One wonders whether he even has much interest in music, so incidental is the music world to the scene at Apple as he draws it. Not that Mr. DiLello is dishonest. He consistently writes from the point of view of a hanger-on, a sponger so dedicated that he accepted a $25-per-week wage for working a regular week over a period of three years. The Beatles themselves are shadowy bosses as remote as generals to a kitchen boy.

Seductive Writing From Africa

By ANNE McDOUGALL

Laurens van der Post is an inspired travel writer. Best-known for "Venture to the Interior" and "The Lost World of the Kalahari," both set in South Africa, he returns to his native land for this adventure story in a remote corner of S. Africa. "Journey into Russia" and "A Portrait of Japan" have both been praised as penetrating, noble accounts of these countries. He is a first-class reporter.

A STORY LIKE THE WIND, by Laurens van der Post. Clarke Irwin. $9.95.

There is no way to quarrel, either, with his reputation as an evocative writer on life in the African bush. This book glitters with all the fascination of elephant stalks, lion kills, baboons at play, crocodiles at watch and kingfishers agleam over sleepy, green African rivers, that makes "Ventures to the Interior" such a beautiful book.

"A Story like the Wind" tells the adventures of a young white boy of Huguenot descent, Francois Joubert. His father, formerly a government official, has broken with the new regime and so gives his son his schooling at home. Their estate, "Hunter's Drift," is an isolated homestead and Francois an only child. He gets his lessons done early in the morning and spends the rest of the day with his gun tracking through the bush, watching and learning from the Bantu hunters when to kill and when to let live. It is a fantastic life for a boy, reminiscent of Kipling's Kim, and makes the book worth reading for this quality of excitement alone.

Van der Post explains in the introduction that he is interested in the importance of myth and legend in the life of primitive Africa. He introduces a hunter from the almost extinct Bushman tribe who has come down from a far-away desert to visit the cave, decorated with paintings, that has remained a holy temple to the Bushmen. He is caught in one of the traps on the trail. Francois comes across him, rescues him and takes him to the cave. He smuggles in food and medicine until Xhabbo, as he is called, is ready to return to his people in the desert. They become blood brothers, Xhabbo promising to return after he has made the journey home.

Many things happen to Francois while he is waiting for Xhabbo's return. His father gets ill and in spite of a trek Francois makes with the great hunter Bamuthi to the most renowned witch-doctor in the country, his father dies in a distant Capetown hospital. Then one day another white settler, a retired British naval officer, appears to claim his adjacent tract of land, bringing with him his vivacious daughter, a girl about Francois' age.

The old homestead goes all out to make them welcome. Black women stand by with steaming pots of coffee, hot rusks, the beds fresh and ready, the silver and brass gleaming, baskets of melons, tomatoes and mulberries from the garden, old Cape brandy from the cellar. It is seductive writing, rather like the Old South.

Francois is beginning to feel the pressure of being "young master." He gets reassurance and support from his nearest neighbor, the legendary Mopani Theron who runs the game reserve, and also from the black Africans on his estate. Meanwhile, they take note of an unusual number of trucks and lorries passing along the rough road that runs through their land. They are heading northwest and seem to be driven by "new men," black, colored and Chinese.

All the while he is describing life in the bush and the interplay between animal and human spirits (rather like the B.C. coast Indians), van der Post builds an ominous tension. Then one night Francois wakens when he hears the signal agreed upon by Xhabbo to mark his return. With the little girl, who hears him get up, he slips out into the velvet African night. What follows is a devastating scene of massacre. He reaches Xhabbo in time to escape with him while hordes of the new men ravage the farm, killing everyone who lived there. Francois and his companions face a new Africa.

It's an imaginative and gripping story on dramatic grounds. In artistry it falls short, I think. Van der Post comes from a family that has lived in South Africa for generations. He knows and loves his country. As a writer he is legitimately intrigued by the myths and legends of other races. And yet it is exactly here that the story may break down.

The day may be past when a white man, however sensitive, can write about a black man's life. There are too many passages where van der Post's ability to observe is the very thing that obscures the innermost feelings of the people he is writing about. Where he stays to ponder, they would probably laugh.

It's true he faces stiff competition. In "Cry the Beloved Country" his compatriot Alan Paton stays sternly on his own ground. It is a white man's cry of anguish that has produced this great book. To know the other Africa it's probably time we all learned Swahili. Or fell silent and listened to black Africa speak.

Trifling With People

The Holiday Friend is another variation of a favorite English theme: the Adventure on the Continent. In this version a middle-aged college lecturer (Gavin Eastwood) takes his wife and eleven-year-old boy for a summer holiday at an obscure seaside resort in Belgium. It is "their place"; they have been to the area twice before and are well known to the local hotel and restaurant proprietors, and some of the other guests.

The HOLIDAY FRIEND, by Pamela Hansford Johnson. Macmillan. $7.95.

Enter The Complication: the lecturer, who still loves his wife despite, says the author, fourteen years of marriage, has been followed by a love-smitten student. Melissa is a crashingly vapid character, impossible for the reader to like. (The Eastwoods, however, manage to pity her a little.) Various other characters drift in and out of the story, introduced by Ms. Johnson whenever Gavin and wife Hannah need a bit of manipulating.

At last something happens: Melissa's obsession with Gavin has distracted the parents' attention from their son, and he finds his own "holiday friend." There is a nasty shock-ending.

If you like this sort of thing, you'll find it better done in James Barlow's Term of Trial (also made into a film, with Laurence Olivier and Simone Signoret as the couple, and Sarah Miles as the student.)

Mr. Barlow has the edge on Ms. Johnson largely because his story is told from the viewpoint of the teacher, who is potentially the most interesting character. Ms. Johnson's omniscient author technique tempts her to explore the women, which she does well, at the expense of the men. Gavin thus comes across as a simple-minded weakling, and forfeits our sympathy.

Holiday Friend is a cynical and trifling book; "trifling" in the sense that its author seems content to manipulate her characters (and her readers, come to that) for no good cause. A moral frame of reference would have improved it enormously.

If you do decide to read it, first a word of advice: Holiday Friend is one of those books which need to be read all in one gulp. To rephrase the old saying, if you once put it down, you just can't pick it up again.—P.B.

Humor Lightens Gloom

By SUSAN MUSGRAVE

"why can't I be
with images
out of language as I used to believe

DRIVING HOME, by Miriam Waddington. Oxford. $2.95.

In these "poems new and selected" Miriam Waddington looks back on thirty years of writing, thirty years in which her voice has always been distinctive, uninfluenced by the passing fashions that have so often seduced her contemporaries.

Essentially hers is still a young voice. At least she is still alert to the world, at grips with language and capable of seeing herself — for she is truly a romantic poet — as another. Yet the tone of the new poems is very much reflected in the quotation above — there is disatisfaction, almost weariness as she looks at her life and work and casts a jaundiced eye upon contemporary Canada. This is not the voice of an older poet left behind, however; the tightness of her language and an easy but tough sense of humor counteracts the gloom.

What, looking back, is Miss Waddington's achievement? First there is an unquestioned technical mastery, especially in those poems that run like one telling sentence, poised and undulated, never flagging and ending at exactly the right moment. And few of our poets can really use the short, two or three word line as more than an affectation. She can.

At will she can be lyrical in a nakedly traditional way, or directly conversational:

"Someday some woman is going to kill you for that expression on your face. . . . ."

And, very importantly, of the many Jewish poets who have sought their identity in verse, she is one of the few to succeed in avoiding posture. In one poem, "Desert Stone", she achieves a magnificently biblical but relevant statement.

I would make one criticism of this book: I feel that in selecting from her past work Miss Waddington has perhaps excluded some poems that do not match her present mood and style. It's a pity — perhaps poets should not be their own editors. What seems to them juvenilia may be a real value to the reader. Noticeably she's left out poems where the influence of other poets shows — Eliot, Dylan Thomas. But the use she made of their example was often superb.

Miriam Waddington is becoming increasingly well-known across the Atlantic: she's one of the handful of Canadian poets who are given their due there. Driving Home is a salutary (and very low-priced) reminder of her powerful and distinctive presence among us.

Pyramid King Turner Drops $6M

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Florida millionaire and Pyramid Sales Entrepreneur Glenn Turner has agreed to transfer nearly $5 million in assets to as many as 75,000 persons who invested in his several companies in the last five years.

Turner, who gained notoriety through selling thousands of distributorships in cosmetics and motivation companies, conceded what is left of his corporations in a settlement agreement that was given preliminary approval Thursday by a federal judge in Pittsburgh.

The $6 million settlement—Turner must add $1 million in future earnings to the $5 million in assets—is the result of seven months of closed-door negotiations between Turner's lawyers and attorneys for the 75,000-member class.

It makes public for the first time the precarious financial condition of Turner's empire. The two main income-producing companies, Koscot and Dare To Be Great, were estimated by Turner to be worth $150 million as late as 1971: the settlement agreement reveals that Turner's net worth is actually less than $6 million.

The settlement agreement may relieve Turner of thousands of individual claims that the recruited people into sales programs which courts and federal regulatory agencies have termed illegal. The defence of these claims cost him $3 million, according to Turner.

Under the terms of the agreement, $3.7 million in real estate and personal property—including the $2 million, 17-acre company headquarters outside Disney World near Orlando, Fla.—will be transferred to a publicly-held corporation which has agreed to purchase the assets in exchange for an issue of $1.8 million shares of perferred stock, to be distributed among the members of the class.

Additionally, Turner has agreed to pay $1 million from his future earnings toward the settlement. The company issuing the stock in the settlement is Candida Holdings, a Bahamian company traded over-the-counter.

Political Science Head

Dr. Walter Young, chairman of the political science department of the University of British Columbia since 1969, has been appointed chairman of that department at the University of Victoria, effective July 1.

He succeeds Dr. Neil Swainson, department head for four years, who is going on study leave.

Young, a native of Winnipeg, did two years' undergraduate work at Victoria College before receiving degrees from UBC and Oxford, where he went as a Rhodes Scholar in 1955. He learned his Ph.D. at the University of Toronto.

Dr. Leonard Laudadio, associate professor of economics at UVic, will become chairman of that department July 1, succeeding Dr. Leo Bakony who is also going on leave.

Dr. Charles Forward has been reappointed as head of the geography department.

Dress Too Casual

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A juror was fined $25 Thursday by a judge who said he warned him four times about the way he dressed when reporting for jury duty. The fine was levied after the juror, 19-year-old Edward Leiser, entered Judge Livingstone Johnson's courtroom wearing a shirt unlaced halfway down his chest.

HOSPITAL VOTE MEETING SLATED

People in Langford, Colwood, View Royal and Metchosin will have a chance Wednesday to hear details and ask questions about the regional hospital referendum March 31.

Jack Fry, information officer for the Capital regional board, said a public meeting on the subject will be held in the Elizabeth Fisher junior secondary school auditorium Wednesday at 8 p.m.

The meeting is sponsored by the Glen Lake Ratepayers' Association.

Speakers will be Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board; John Striha, president of the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society and George Harrison, administrator at St. Mary's Priory.

Fry said there will be an opportunity for the audience to ask questions after the speakers have made their presentations.

The referendum next Saturday will ask ratepayers to approve a $22.5 million hospital building and renovation program. The provincial government would contribute about 60 per cent of this if the referendum produces a 60 per cent yes vote.

Stab Charge Changed To Capital Murder

A capital murder charge, carrying the death penalty, may be laid against a 42-year-old Victoria man, charged in a Dallas Road stabbing death, the senior prosecutor said in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Prosecutor J. T. Anderson said he will meet provincial court officials next week to review the case against Roydon Gaylord Morrison, charged with the March 14 stabbing death of Wallace Omar Stevenson, 51, of 132 Dallas Road.

Morrison was charged with non-capital murder the day after the incident.

The five-year trial period during which capital murder charges were reserved for killing police and prison officers expired Dec. 29, 1972.

The Victoria prosecutor said that after the expiry date, any charge of murder can be capital or non-capital. In capital cases, the law must offer evidence to indicate that a murder was planned or deliberate.

In Vancouver Friday, a non-capital charge was changed to a capital one, in the case of a 21-year-old man, charged in the fatal beating of an Ontario man.

No federal legislation has been introduced in Ottawa to re-instate the five-year trial period.

UVIC RESPONDS TO BLOOD CALL

The Red Cross in Victoria fiished a week of blood clinics with a total of 853 donors, short of rhe 1,000 objective but high enough to draw praise from one of the organizers. Supervisor Charles McNeill said today he was particularly pleased with the turnout to three days of clinics at the University of Victoria.

There were 155 donors at Friday's clinic to bring the university total to 614.

"That is one of the best clinics at the university for some years," said McNeill. He added that he thought the week's objective of 1,000, set by the Red Cross in Vancouver, was "a little high."

Clinics will be held at four Greater Victoria high schools in the coming week — Oak Bay on Tuesday, Esquimalt senior on Wednesday, Mount Douglas senior on Thursday and Claremont senior on Friday.

Hours for the first three will be 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 3 p.m. At Claremont the hours will be 10 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 3 p.m.

The clinics at the schools are open to the public and donors wanting transportation should call 382-2213.

Warning on Cleanser

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The United States Centre for Disease Control (CDC) says hexachlorophene should not be used in the prophylactic bathing of an infant unless infection already present and unless the infant weighs five pounds or more.

The CDC said Friday its recommendations were based on a study by the University of Washington of pathologic specimens of children less than five years old.

The study showed the lesions of the brain stem developed in 21 infants, 19 of whom had been bathed three or more times with a solution of three per cent hexachlorophene, an antiseptic widely used in hospital nurseries to help prevent staph infection.

The CDC said the children exposed to three per cent hexachlorophene fewer than three times or exposed only to a highly diluted solution had an attack rate lower than one per cent.

A CDC spokesman said the recommendations are for the benefit of hospital nurseries. The CDC has no regulatory power.

The Food and Drug Administration has directed that hospitals confine hexachlorophene to prescription use.

Recital Tonight By TV Singer

At Newcombe Auditorium tonight at 8, Suzanne Jeanson, a radio and television artist making her first western tour, will be presented in recital by Les Francophones de Victoria.

Suzanne, who was born in Lorette, Man., has her own television series on channel CBWFT in Winnipeg and also appears on numerous radio and television shows on both French and English networks.

Last year she was invited to participate in the Festival of Arts at Ottawa and also in the Festival of Song in Granby, Que.

She is an artist who sings as easily and effectively in English as in French.

The present tour was offered her by the government in recognition of her talent and popularity.

Symphony On Air

Several numbers from the last pair of Victoria Symphony Orchestra programs will be broadcast over CBC radio Sunday and Wednesday.

The program was recorded live at the Royal Theatre last Sunday.

At 1 p.m. on AM radio Sunday, conductor Laszlo Gati and guest artist Ricki Turofsky will be heard in the operatic arias and Gliere Concerto for Soprano and the orchestra will perform the overtures, Colas Breugnon and I Vespri Siciliani and the Intermezzo from Cavalleri Rusticana.

The program will be repeated on FM radio on Wednesday at 10 a.m.

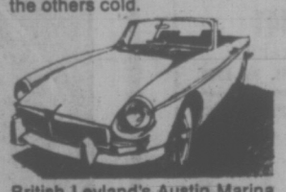
This is the stuff Austin is made of.

Durable—is the only word for British Leyland's Land-Rover and their Austin Marina. Rustproofing and undercoating are standard procedures for the latest Austin, which also comes with a special 7-point Cold Climate Package that beats the others cold.



British Leyland's Austin Marina has the same 1800 cc. engine as British Leyland's MGB. And they both have front power disc brakes as standard.

British Leyland's Jaguar is a superb example of timeless styling. They designed the Austin Marina along the same lines.

Built into every Austin Marina are the same kinds of economy and dependability that have made the Austin Mini the choice of over 3 million people who have better things to spend their money on than gas and repairs. Another thing that always impresses people in the Austin Mini is its large interior—especially considering its small exterior. Of course, the new Austin Marina is built that much bigger outside and inside. In fact, the Austin Marina's front and rear seats are wider than most.

Durability. Performance. Styling. Economy. Spaciousness. These qualities, coupled with a low initial price tag are what you look for in a small car today. And these are the qualities Austin has built into Marina. The Marina is not simply the best Austin ever but, quality for quality, feature for feature, very probably the finest car of its type currently being built.

The Austin Marina is available in three models: 2-door Deluxe Coupe and 4-door Super Deluxe Sedan (both available with Borg-Warner automatic transmission) and 2-door GT. The Austin Marina is backed by five Canadian parts depots and a coast-to-coast dealer network.

Up-Island Airway Gets Service Nod

The Canadian air transport commission has granted Island Airways permission to begin Vancouver Island's first north-south air service.

The Campbell River firm was granted the right to begin flights as soon as possible between Victoria and up-Island points.

Island Airways operations manager Frank Roberts said Friday it would take about six weeks before the service could begin.

The company was still trying to decide between seaplanes landing in the Inner Harbor and land planes arriving at Pat Bay airport.

He said Island Airways would offer two flights a day in each direction but service might only be on Monlay, Wednesday and Friday to begin with.

The plan is to leave Campbell River about 8 a.m., make a stop in Courtenay and then fly directlu to Victoria, arriving just before 9 a.m.

The plane would immediately make the return journey with a stop at Courtenay and arriving in Campbell River about 10 a.m.

No stops are planned at Nanaimo or elsewhere on the Island. However, the flight would connect with a Pacific Western Airways flight from Vancouver that lands in Campbell River before proceeding to Port Hardy.

Roberts said that would permit Victorians to go from Victoria to Port Hardy without having to go to the mainland.

He said Island Airways probably would have a plane leave Campbell River again about 4 p.m. for Courtenay and Victoria, returning at 5 p.m. up-Island.

Public Absent

The local design professions were well-represented at a panel discussion Thursday dealing with the use of architectural design consultants in municipal planning.

But the public was conspiciously absent and a representative for Saanich failed to appear.

The public meeting in Oak Bay Senior Citizens Activity Centre drew about 24 people and was called by the Victoria chapter of the Architectural Institute of B.C. in the interests of stimulating concern for planned environment and the use of advisory design panels by municipalities.

Arthur Mudry, architect and member of West Vancouver's advisory design panel for a number of years, was one of the speakers.

Others were Oak Bay municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White; Victoria designer Ted Bowers, Victoria Ald. Mike Young (both members of the newly-formed design panel to advise city council); architect David Hambleton, and chairman Ben Levinson, also an architect.

Saanich alderman William Campbell was on the program but did not appear.

Bowers said this was disappointing "since they are in the throes of this whole thing," meaning Saanich consideration of setting up a design advisory panel.

Oak Bay was the first Greater Victoria municipality to enlist the guidance of a design panel, and the only one besides Victoria.

Bowers said he was interested to hear of Mudry's experience over 10 or 15 years with a panel, "to hear what it can do and what it can't. The immediate effect in the community is to raise the calibre of development proposals," he noted.

Judge Upholds Eviction Notice

A woman and her son were ordered by Judge D. G. Ashby to vacate their apartment by April 30, in small debts court Friday after their landlord launched a suit against them.

Mrs. Auro Carmona, who lives at 136-1900 Mayfair with her 20-year-old son Jose, was given notice in January by Park Pacific Apartments Ltd., asking them to leave by the end of February.

The notice, from apartment manager R. F. McIndoe, stated Mrs, Carmona had violated the terms of their rental agreement.

Under terms of the Landlord-Tenant Act, the landlord is under no obligation to explain how the agreement was violated.

Mrs. Carmona stated she had written a reply Jan. 16 to the eviction notice advising the manager she had no intention of moving out of the apartment because she had not violated agreement terms, any more than other tenants in the building, (Mount Tolmie Ridge Apartments).

She said she liked the location of the building, because it was near the university where her son went to school.

Before making a decision, Judge Ashby noted that proposed amendments to the Landlord-Tenant Act now being considered by the provincial government "would give a judge a little more power to go into the merits of why a person has to vacate" an apartment.

He told the woman her reply to the landlord was "just defiancy," but granted her until the end of the school year — April 30 — to find another place to live.

Chamber Still Wants Late Ferry

Plans by Canadian Pacific for a night ferry will not satisfy the problem of late night transportation to the Island, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer said Friday.

He told a directors' meeting of chamber at the Strathcona Hotel the CP proposal is to run a freight ferry from downtown Vancouver at 1:30 a.m., arriving at Swartz Bay about 4:30 a.m.

"This is not what we had in mind at all," Farmer said.

He said the chamber will continue to press for a B.C. government ferry leaving Tsawwassen at midnight and arriving at Swartz Bay at 1:40 a.m. or leaving at 1 a.m. and arriving at 2:40 a.m.

ASKS NEW BRIEF

Chamber transportation committee chairman J. A. McKernan said it looks like the provincial government is trying to shove its responsibility on to the CPR.

He said Highways Minister Robert Strachan has written him outlining reasons for not proceeding with a late ferry but has asked for a new brief on the question to be prepared by the chamber.

McKernan said he has asked former Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch to help prepare a brief to submit to Strachan.

Chamber manager Brian Small said a key element in the new brief being submitted should be a reminder that a late night ferry was an election pledge by the NDP.

In other business, Philip Holmes, newly-elected president of Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island, urged the Victoria directors to participate in a tour of Ontario hydro plants from May 11 to May 15.

He said nuclear power plants at Pickering and Bruce will be visited, along with a coal-fired thermal plant at Lakeview, Ontario.

Annual meeting of the B.C. chamber, he said, would be held May 27 and May 28 in Kamloops.

Walter Nelson, of the chamber harbor committee, said negotiations are proceeding for purchase of the VMD property by the department of transport. The city is hopeful that cruise ships would tie up there if the purchase is consummated.

Saanich Chamber Merges With City

Saanich Chamber of Commerce president David Moore said Friday his organization intends to amalgamate with the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Moore said merger of his 80 members with the 800 members of the Victoria chamber would give his group more influence in dealing with Saanich municipality.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer said he was delighted by the Saamich decision. Victoria policy had been to keep the door open for such amalgamations but it would wait for the other group to make the first move.

Farmer said Oak Bay and Esquimalt chambers would also be welcome if they chose to join the Victoria group but the Victoria chamber is not actively promoting the idea.

Moore said the identity of the Saanich chamber would be retained in a Saanich Action Committee to be formed as part of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The Saanich chamber would merge with the Victoria chamber on July 1 and at that time turn over the assets of $2,000 to the senior body.

First-year budget of the Saanich Action Committee would be $250, he said,

Moore said the merger made sense because business interests in the two municipalities overlap and the two chambers in past had been campaigning on the same issues.

Moore told a directors' meeting of Victoria chamber of commerce that people are coming to realize more and more that we all live in greater Victoria rather than in separate municipalities.

Even the address of the Saanich Municipal Hall is 770 Vernon Avenue, Victoria, he said.

Chamber directors said the Saanich chamber move might set an example for other organizations to think in terms of metro government rather than municipal government.

Moore said a meeting of Saanich chamber members Thursday night voted unanimously to proceed with negotiations for the amalgamation.

Because of the requirements of the Saanich chamber constitution, the final vote can not be taken until the next general meeting in June—but there has been no opposition to the plan, Moore said.

He said he expected final approval to be given in June and the merger would take effect July 1.

Ship Sues Pilots

VANCOUVER (CP) — An action has been filed by the owners of the freighter Irish Stardust against the B.C. Pilotage Authority and the federal transport ministry.

The Irish Stardust was charged with unlawfully discharging oil or an oily mixture, into Broughton Strait, off Alert Bay, last January and her captain, James Caird, with failure to report by radio an oil discharge.

Irish Shipping Ltd. has filed a counter claim in federal court alleging default by the pilots aboard the vessel and default by the ministry in regard to placement of navigational beacons.

The vessel received bottom damage on a reef near Cormorant Island near the northeastern tip of Vancouver Island.

Pilots Code Interception Procedure

TOKYO (Reuter) — World airline pilots said Thursday they have set up a committee to standardize procedure for interception of civil aircraft.

The announcement, made at the close of the annual conference of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations (IFALPA), follows the shooting down of a Libyan airliner which strayed over Israeli-occupied Sinai last month.

At a news conference, Laurie Taylor, British vice-president of IFALPA, said: "It is ridiculous that every country has its own procedure for air interception.

"There is a risk of mistakes for pilots in adapting themselves to these procedures," said Taylor, adding that a pilot normally covers eight to 10 different countries during one flight.

Taylor said IFALPA has been urging governments to adopt sanctions against violators of international conventions on hijacking.

"We are extremely disappointed at the lack of progress made at international conferences of governments in the past 12 months," he said.

Dead Man Identified

The man found in Beacon Hill park Wednesday after he had shot himself through the head has been identified, Victoria police said today.

The name of the 62-year-old Vancouver resident has been withheld at the request of the police and the man's relatives.

The dead man was discovered by a passerby at lunchtime Wednesday, with a sawed-off .22 rifle by his side.

THERE'S MORE FOR YOU DOWNTOWN

Record House Starts

OTTAWA (CP) — Residential construction reached record levels last year despite rising land and building costs, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. reported Friday.

The corporation said in its annual report that housing starts increased seven per cent to 250,000 units, while there were 232,000 completions. About 189,000 units were still under construction at the end of the year.

Starts fell in the Prairies and Maritimes, however.

Land and building costs each increased more than six per cent over 1971, compared with the 4.8-per-cent increase in prices generally.

The report said the average land cost for single-detached homes built under the National Housing Act was $4,885, up 6.5 per cent from 1971. Construction costs for NHA financed single detached homes were 6.2 per cent higher.

The average total cost for NHA-financed, single-detached units was $23,401, an increase of six per cent.

PAYMENTS UP

Average monthly payment, including principal, interest and property taxes, was $194.25, compared with $191.75 in 1971.

The corporation said there has been increasing success in making funds available to younger borrowers. Forty-five per cent of all borrowers under NHA were below 30 and the average age of NHA borrowers dropped to 32.2 from 32.7 the previous year.

Expenditures for new residential construction rose by 13 per cent to an estimated $5.1 billion. Building permits for new homes were valued at $3.6 billion, compared with $3.2 billion the previous year.

Ontario had the greatest number of housing starts—more than 100,000 units for the first time. The Prairies had 39,416 starts, down slightly from 1971, while starts in the Maritimes totalled 16,502, down about 750.

Starts in British Columbia were 35,317, up about 600, and in Quebec 55,746, an increase of almost 4,000.

Look-Alikes Shake Police

By DAVID NICHOLSON

NEW YORK (CP) — The erroneous arrest of an assistant district attorney on charges of sexually molesting young girls has stirred a growing debate on the dangers of eyewitness identification in criminal cases.

William Schrager, an assistant district attorney in Queens borough, was placed in a police lineup and positively identified as the man responsible for a series of attacks in Brooklyn and suburban Nassau County.

Schrager spent three weeks in jail awaiting trial, insisting he was innocent. But he was not released until this week, when police arrested another man resembling Schrager. The man confessed to three of four crimes of which the district attorney had been accused.

Police now say they think Schrager's look-alike may also be responsible for another series of sex crimes blamed on a third man who also was identified in lineups.

Police officials admit they are shaken and have launched an investigation to see whether some policemen may have shown an excess of zeal in Schrager's case.

JUMPED TOO FAST

"I think a lot of people jumped too fast," says detective chief Louis Cottrell. "I want to know why this man was arrested and locked up."

Some observers suggested this may only be one of many cases in which innocent persons are fingered by overwrought victims.

City Ripped, Rebuilt

And Those Who Make Decisions Don't Represent the Tenants

Is the city of Victoria bound to become another North American apartment house wasteland laced with one-way streets and dotted with supermarkets? How are the fast increasing numbers of apartment tenants to become involved in city government?

Today Times' city hall reporter Roland Morgan looks at the facts behind the apartment boom and finds that city government representation is lagging far behind the new realities of the city.

Like all Canadian cities, Victoria is being ripped down and rebuilt on a huge scale, and it has happened at such speed that people are only just becoming aware of it.

In only six years, the number of apartments in the city of Victoria has nearly doubled, and now almost half the population is composed of apartment dwellers — nearly all of them tenants.

Neighborhoods of houses and gardens with tree-lined sidewalks and small-scale local schools are rapidly being replaced with apartment blocks. Schools are getting bigger, roads wider and more congested.

Some of the reasons for this trend are national and international in scale — the move from the land to the city in search of work, the emergence of independent young and old people, the expense of property purchase, the general increase in population.

At the same time, an analysis of six inter-connected political bodies in Victoria city government shows that the trend to a big-business, homogenized city can partly be explained by the composition of the city government.

Three critical factors that emerge are:

1. Crucial city government groups are disproportionately weighted with citizens directly or indirectly dependent on the property development industry.

2. The same groups are almost exclusively composed of homeowners, while 62 per cent of accommodation in Victoria is now apartment units. A significant proportion of these homeowners (50 per cent) live outside the city, where there is limited apartment development.

3. The groups are almost exlusively composed of men, a large proportion of them medium-to-high income businessmen.

The group dealt with here have 42 seats filled by 25 appointees and 10 elected members.

They are:

1. The advisory planning commission. This 15-member group, six of them elected (four aldermen, the mayor and school board chairman) is designed to represent the overall interests of the people of Victoria.

It meets in secret once a month to discuss building plans; no voting record is kept and the commission's recommendations to city council are usually made known to the public only when reports are read out at twice-monthly city council meetings.

The commission is composed thus: eight out of 15 commissioners are connected with the property industry. Ten out of 15 (66 per cent) are businessmen. One is a woman — another woman resigned in protest against the secrecy policy.

Twelve out of the 15 own and occupy single family dwellings — in other words a house and a garden — five of them outside city limits. Only two currently live in apartments — one renting, one owning.

As far as can be ascertained, only one member is a salaried employee, and he was formerly self-employed until semi-retirement.

Direct Role

This is a group which has taken a direct part in planning and authorizing over a period of eight years the apartment boom which by this year placed 47 per cent of the population of the city in apartments. When the commission was set up, only 29 per cent of the population lived in apartments. (Figures from the city planning department.)

2. The traffic sub-committee. This is an appointed body of five men which meets the police and traffic officials to discuss traffic affairs and make informal recommendations.

Four of the five are businessmen. The fifth is the automobile association manager.

Only five own and occupy houses with gardens, four of them outside city limits.

3. The police commission. This group of three is composed of the mayor and two appointees.

They are currently a car dealer, a lawyer and a retired car dealer. All three are homeowners, two at addresses in Oak Bay.

4. The board of variance. This is a five-man body of appointees which can overrule city council on approved building plans.

Four of its members are or were in the property industry. Three of them are homeowners. The chairman is a retired building contractor.

5. The advisory design panel. This is a five-member appointed body which considers the aesthetic (beauty-value) and environmental side of building projects.

Apartment Dwellers

Closely linked to the function of the advisory planning commission (to which it reports), this panel is remarkable for being deliberately drawn from the property industry as a matter of policy rather than being selected according to the convention of "lay" citizens.

Thus four of its members are from the property industry. All five are homeowners, four of them at addresses in Oak Bay.

A large proportion of the schemes considered by this panel of homeowners is composed of apartment buildings, yet apartment dwellers are not represented.

6. City council. The place where the buck is supposed to stop, although the board of variance can overrule it, and although it is rare for advisory planning commission recommendations to be ignored, and although many decisions are finally swayed by the recommendation of the traffic engineer.

This nine-man elected body is the only exclusively elected group in city government apart from the metro area school board.

Three Connected

Three members are connected with the property industry, although two of them claim a policy of curbing growth, and five (55.5 per cent) are businessmen.

None live in apartments.

This all-male group represents a city population more than half of which is female, and nearly half of which lives in apartments.

Just as the patterns of development which are afflicting Canada's cities are all present in Victoria, so are the patterns of city government repeated here.

Victoria has its critical shortage of family housing, housing cheap-to-buy, human-scale housing; its proliferation of apartments with little social planning; its increasing traffic congestion; its rising crime.

And in city government (in the bodies dealt with here), 49 per cent of those making recommendations and decisions are connected with the property industry.

In Own Homes

Nearly all the members of these government bodies own and occupy private houses with gardens. They create and help to perpetuate zonings which authorize the destruction of neigborhoods for the constructioin of ever-larger apartment buildings and ever-wider roads, yet they do not themselves live in apartments and many of them live far away from the environment they have helped to create.

The areas singled out for apartment zoning do not reach the secluded, tree-lined single-family sanctuaries where 95 per cent of those who govern the city live.

Approximattely, nine of the 42 key city government members can be assumed to earn or to have once earned salaries—the rest are (or were) self-employed cr professional fee-earners. As far as is known none of them could be described as wage-earners.

The general picture is of a privileged section of society overwhelmingly dominating city government, with minimal representation from the middle area of salary and wage-earners, let alone from the ranks of the less and under-privileged.

While this situation persists, it is hard to see how the course the city is set on will ever change.

A Pleasant Core Attracts Them

There has been a rush to build apartments in the city of Victoria, and it does not look as though it will slow down in the near future.

Dr. Peter Murphy, a geographer at the University of Victoria, says in a newly-published study of apartment growth in Greater Victoria that the central city is more attractive for apartment developers than other city centres.

"Central Victoria does not appear to have lost its apartment growth momentum to the degree reported in some other cities," Murphy writes in Residential and Neighbourhood Studies in Victoria.

While downtown apartment buiding has been declining in Winnipeg, for example, "in contrast, Victoria's equivalent area contained 67 per cent of the metropolitan apartment units in 1971, and it was still receiving the majority of new units," Murphy states.

"Such evidence indicates that Victoria's central city offers positive location factors which may not be present in other Canadian cities. These include the largest centre of employment in the metropolitan area, containing the provincial government offices, in addition to the usual central business district functions."

"It offers a wider range of retail and service functions than would normally be expected in a city of its size, due to a substantial tourist trade, and both the tourists and apartments are attracted to the core area because of its pleasant setting and well maintained appearance," Murphy writes.

The geographer also concludes that apartment developers seek attractive scenic and recreational areas, particularly fronting on the sea and on parks.

He says a geographical study of Vancouver's densely built-up West End showed that market forces put highrises on the perimeter of the land, causing "highrise apartments to form a ring around the West End leaving, like a hole in a doughnut, a region of pre-existing converted, wood-frame dwellings."

A similar pattern is evident in James Bay, Murphy states.

There, a "wall" of highrise apartments has developed on the east side, adjacent to Beacon Hill park, and on the south side waterfront, "while one encounters a general decline in apartment density, merging with older single-family dwellings, as one moves away from these favored perimeters."

Murphy quotes government and real estate industry figures showing that during the last two decades Victoria roughly doubled its apartment population every four years.

Nearly half of the entire apartment accommodation in Victoria was built between 1968 and 1971 — 140 buildings averaging 47 apartments each and totalling 6,578 units. And there is no slowing down.

Also, the buildings have been getting bigger and bigger. In 20 years up to 1971, buildings with less than 20 apartments declined from 85 to 19 per cent of the market.

Medium-sized buildings with 20 to 49 units grew from 15 to 55 per cent of the market.

In the 1960's larger buildings with over 50 units took 26 per cent of the market.

By March of this year, according to the city's community development department, which showed apartments forming 46 per cent of dwelling units, housing only 28 per cent of the population.

This was a dramatic increase over 1966 figures, which snowed apartments forming 46 pr cent of dwelling units, housing only 28 per cent of the population.

Construction of apartments drastically outstripped construction of single family houses and duplexes.

In six years to date, no less than 7,925 apartment units were built, while only 398 houses or duplexes were built — and 1,039 houses were pulled down.

Who, What They Are

Here are lists of the people currently occupying the 42 positions on Victoria city boards, committee and council governing development of land and building.

One alderman is to be elected, and one member of the advisory planning commission who resigned has not yet been replaced. The two empty seats are counted occupied by homeowners.

Members are categorized under their business interests, other interests and under a loose category called the property industry. Because of the substantial involvement of the legal profession in property affairs, general practice lawyers are included under the property industry category.

Advisory Planning Commission:

Commission members connected with property industry:

S. J. Cunliffe (chairman), consulting engineer, homeowner.

G. S. Reeson, contractor, investor, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Peter Bunn, contractor, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Malcolm Anderson, investment dealer, homeowner, (Saanich).

R. R. Wilde, retired bank manager, homeowner, (Oak Bay).

Clive Campbell, architect, resident elector.

Ald. Sam Bawlf, developer, homeowner.

Ald. Mike Young, lawyer, homeowner.

Commission members with other business interests:

J. C. Cosh, accountant, homeowner, (Saanich).

Mayor Peter Pollen, car dealer, homeowner, (Oak Bay).

Other:

Dr. L. J. Clark, retired university professor, homeowner.

Margaret Richards, housewife, resident elector.

Ald. Alf Hood, retired colonel, homeowner.

Ald. Clyde Savage, semi-retired pharmacist, homeowner.

Board of variance:

Board members connected with property industry:

J. A. Pollard (chairman), retired building contractor, homeowner.

C. P. Rutherford, stockbroker and investor, homeowner (Oak Bay).

J. G. Greenwood, notary, insurance, real estate, homeowner (Colwood).

J. Moffat, retired construction union business official, resident elector.

Other:

E. F. Holliday, retired professor of education, resident elector.

Advisory design panel:

Members connected with property industry:

A. E. Bowers, construction designer, homeowner (Oak Bay).

David Hambleton, architect, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Allan Hodgson, architect, homeowner.

J. W. G. Kerr, highway engineer, homewoner (Oak Bay).

Other:

Sylvia Graham, housewife, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Traffic sub-committee:

Members connected with property industry:

E. H. A. Emery, lawyer, homeowner (Saanich).

Members with other business interests:

D. Lewis, photographic supplier, homeowner (Saanich).

R. R. Skillings, moving company, homeowner (Oak Bay).

K. E. King, retirement home manager, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Other:

R. W. Elston, auto association manager, homeowner.

Police commission:

J. C. Cowan, lawyer, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Mayor Peter Pollen, car dealer, homeowner (Oak Bay).

D. H. Lawson, retired car dealer, homeowner.

City council:

Aldermen connected with property industry:

Sam Bawlf, developer, homeowner.

Percy Frampton, accountant, homeowner.

Mike Young, lawyer, homeowner.

Aldermen with other business interests:

Bill Tindall, Better Business Bureau director, homeowner.

Peter Pollen, car dealer, homeowner (Oak Bay).

Other:

Clyde Savage, pharmacist, homeowner.

Alf Hood, retired colonel, homeowner.

Tom Christie, retired school board accountant, homeowner.

One alderman to be elected.

FIVE FIT PATTERN

The six candidates in next Saturday's by-election in Victoria fit in well with the pattern analyzed on this page.

Only one of them, Margaret Richards, is not a homeowner. She rents an apartment, like almost half the population of the city. She is also the first appointee on behalf of tenants to the new Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau. (She is matched against Wes Dickie of the Greater Victoria Apartment Owners' Association.)

Mrs. Richards is also the only woman candidate.

Like many others in city government, Malcolm Anderson and Bill Scott own homes in Oak Bay. Anderson is aiming his campaign literature almost exclusively at homeowners.

Ed Kop, Jim Beaubien and Bob Ellis are all homeowners.

Anderson, Scott, Kop and Ellis are all businessmen. Anderson and Kop are connected with the property industry.

Beaubien is an exception, since unlike any office holders in the cross-section of city government analyzed here, he works for a wage — and on round-the-clock shifts.

What's Happened to Good Neighboring?

IN THE GORDON HEAD of 20 years ago, neighborliness was taken for granted. We dropped in on each other without invitation and took pains to make the newcomer welcome. Our children ranged from one property to the next like a flight of waxwings. In an emergency brought about by unexpected guests, the roast from our freezer might migrate to a neighbor's table, or his whisky to our glasses.

It was a way of life, and we regreted its passing. So did the friends we visited in the course of our last jaunt to Victoria. They no longer knew who lived across the road, and they wouldn't think of looking in unbidden on the couple next door.

"We've become compartmented," our host said. "I guess it had to happen when the city moved out this way."

The compartmentation that he ruefully noted did'nt come about overnight. It was a creeping thing that advenced from year to year as the area once sparsely populated became a subdividers' paradise.

Houses multiplied. So did property taxes. Fields contracted and orchards vanished. An area that had been semi-rural went suburban.

A thinly spread population is less concerned with maintaining privacy than with combatting the sense of isolation that can accompany an over-supply of elbowroom. We had our recluses in the older Gordon Head, but most of us prized our neighbors as a necessary defence against being cut off.

The shift forced a change of attitude. It was subtle, it was insidious, and we were no more than vaguely aware that it was taking place. We kept our friends, but didn't exert ourselves to make new ones in our home drastically expanded community. The casual drop-in, the spur of the moment invitation, the get-aquainted call on new arrivals became less frequent as the years passed. The condition that prodded us into cultivating the art of neighboring no longer existed.

There were too many houses, too many people. Isolation vanished. Although we were still a far remove from the dehumanized overcrowding that makes "Mind your own business" a cardinal rule of big-city life, we began to acquire the protective glaze that distinguishes city slicker from country cousin.

My wife and I retained fond memories of the days when neighboring came as naturally as breathing. But we didn't expect to regain that happy condition, and came north to this Up-Island strip as a self-contained couple prepared to be sufficient unto ourselves.

On our first Sunday morning here we got a hint that we had landed in neighbor country. We were still up to our ears in the tramatic business of shoehorning the contents of the Victoria house we had quitted into this smaller abode.

I was burning wadded newspaper from a pile of emptied cartons when Nick whose house is next up the line came out on his sun porch. His first hail didn't register. I wondered if the smoke from my bonfire was creating a nuisance, or if we were breaking some district ordinance. He called again, and this time his words reached me.

"Come on over and have some breakfast."

It was a fine, hearty breakfast, and Nick and his wife Joy made us take time enough from our unpacking to enjoy it. It was also the start of a neighboring that has continued to our benefit and pleasure.

We like to know that the double rap on a car horn isn't necesarily a sign that some impatient passer is belting along the straight-away that flanks our place. The chances are that it's a hello from Jerry and Lenore, bound for Campbell River to do some shopping, and we hope of a mind to stop by for coffee on their way home.

We would take it amiss if Bill, who is finishing a house in the lee of an alder ridge, didn't avail himself of our ladder at need. At the same time I'm comfortably aware that if I need a tool not in my kit it's available elsewhere, along with an extra pair of hands if required.

About that last trip to Victoria I mentioned:

We came home at the heigfit of a mad March gale. Minutes after I put our car into the access road, a hellish gust toppled a tree of dismaying proportions across that same road, neatly bottling us in. While I was still figuring how long it would take me to clear the obstruction with my litle axe, our phone rang.

Bob, who lives across the highway, didn't offer help. He merely announced in matter-of-fact tones that he was coming over with a power saw.

That's good neighboring, the sort that adds a dimension to living. I wouldn't go so far to insist that it can't survive where population thickens. But if it's yours to enjoy, guard it as best you can, for it is one of earth's dwindling commodities.

BRONZE HILL WIN DELIGHTS BOOKIES

DONCASTER, England (Reuter) — Bronze Hill, a 50-to-1 shot won the Lincoln Handicap today with a desperate run in the last furlong of the one-mile race.

Victory in the first major handicap of the English flat-racing season, on which an Irish sweepstake is based, came at the expense of 16-to-1 shot Queendom and Desperate Dee, a 25-to-1 starter that placed third.

Bronze Hill won by 1½ lengths, with half a length between the second and third horses.

Favorite in the race at 5-to-1 was Jan Ekels, ridden by champion jockey Lester Piggott.

The Lincoln is the first leg of the English Spring Double, with the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree March 31 the second leg.

Bronze Hill's victory delighted bookmakers, who reported that all their big spring double bets have gone down.

Galiano, starting at 16-1, finished fourth.

Respect for Bays Soars

VANCOUVER — Oak Bay's Don Horwood and John Kootnekoff of Simon Fraser University were two to show early appreciation, but now "the rest" are paying their respects to an Oak Bay team which tonight puts in its bid for a third provincial high school boys' basketball championship.

The tough and talented Bays advanced to the B.C. final for a fifth time Friday by overwhelming West Vancouver Highlanders 57-46 before about 5,000 spectators at the Pacific Coliseum.

Oak Bay will face North Surrey Spartans in the championship game tonight.

The Spartans, emphasizing ball control and a tight defence, moved into their first B.C. final by defeating North Delta Huskies 34-28 in Friday's other semi-final.

On form, the Bays move into tonight's playoff as slight favorites. In compiling a 33-4, won-lost record this season and unbeaten since dropping a Victoria League decision to Mt. Douglas Rams just after Christmas, the Bays have knocked off North Surrey in two exhibition meetings this season.

Oak Bay edged the Spartans 41-39 at Abbotsford and then posted a 55-47 win at Queen Elizabeth High in Vancouver.

The favoritism being shown today surprises neither Horwood nor Kootnekoff. The Simon Frases coach predicted two weeks ago that "either Oak Bay or Vancouver College will win" the provincial championship.

Spoiling College's hopes was Mt. Douglas, which upset the Fighting Irish 41-39 Wednesday.

Horwood said he leaned over backwards to "be objective rather than partisan, but still figured my team could win it all even before the season started."

"In the first provincial poll, I was the only coach to rate Oak Bay as No. 1. I felt we had the talent," he added.

Now great numbers of experts attending the B.C. tournament are starting to express similar sentiments.

Confident and always poised, the Bays had no trouble with West Vancouver, rated one of the smallest of the 16 teams that started play here Wednesday. Yet despite full control of the backboards, the Bays refused to be casual. Leading 37-24 at the half, the Bays were almost flawless on defence in the third quarter and out-scored the Highlanders 10-4.

Forwards Chris Trumpy, Dave Kirzinger and Brian Sutherland-Brown along with guard Grant Boland continued their strong on-floor leadership.

The three forwards topped their two-way efforts with brilliant back-board control while Boland gave Oak Bay a dash of outside class with his strong shooting.

The four combined to produce 51 of Oak Bay's 57 points.

Trumpy and North Surrey's Brad Harward, who contributed 11 points in the victory over North Delta, are being touted as the leading candidates for most-valuable-player honors in the tournament.

Mt. Douglas advanced to the consolation semi-finals with a last-second 49-47 victory over Delbrook Hilltoppers. Rick Jones scored the winning points from the free-throw line with two seconds remaining.

Tidbits: An Ex-Cougar Makes Good in Dallas

Things are often stereotyped around the sports desk.

The editor is busily engaged in making out the assignment book, checking the event list, and deciding the "play" of the day's top stories.

The make-up man is on his usual kick, complaining about a shortage of space while trying to get all the news that's fit to print into the columns available.

The reporters are hard at it, putting stories together, getting the facts right, noting the local angle, and producing gems of wisdom at the discretion of the editor and his aides.

Then the columnist walks in, saunters up to the boss, and says: "what's news?"

Hardly original, but there it was — in the post — a note, attached to which was a tribute to a former Cougar hockey player, Gary Donaldson.

It was written by Harry Gage, a Dallas hockey reporter, and I just thought you might be interested in how one of the ex-Cougars (vintage '72) is doing in the eyes of others.

"Pound for pound, little Gary Donaldson stacks up as the most courageous player to put on a pair of Dallas Black Hawks skates in the club's history," Gage says.

"At 155 pounds, the 5' 9" youngster is throwing his weight around with an abandon that fast is gaining him a reputation of a solid hitter.

"Coach Bobby Kromm, also holds the youngster in high esteem. 'He is as game a little guy as you'll find. He is tricky, smart and has a good shot. You gotta admire him because he is a helluva player,' Kromm states.

" 'He is one of our better skaters and would have a good shot at the big league if he can put on some weight.' "

Once urged to give up the game—he was considered too small when he reported to Calgary when he was 18 — Donaldson feels he can make it as a pro.

"You are only as small as you think you are. I've played on. So I have to let 'em know I'm no patsy," Page quotes Donaldson.

So it's nice to hear that success has come to one of the most popular of all Cougars. And good luck to this year's graduating class too.

With the World Hockey Association apparently on a survival course and ready to expand, and the National Hockey League about to do likewise, the professional world of hockey can be a delightful oyster for many aspiring young men with talent.

It's a player's market, so they should make the most of it. In the vernacular of the day: They never had it so good.

And in the post too, a query: "Who was the New York Yankee relief pitcher of about 10 years ago with the blazing fast ball?"

Well, through the years, the Yanks have been blessed with some great relief pitchers. Johnny Murphy was one. So was Joe Page. Today there is Sparky Lyle. Last year he appeared in 59 games. But the one you refer to must be Ryne Duren. The dates match.

Duren was quick, and not always blessed with great control. The scouting report on him said: "He can throw a ball through a brick wall, but he probably can't see the wall."

The one I like best about Duren is that if his fastball was quicker than most, so were his glasses thicker than most. On hot, humid days, he had a delightful ploy. After wiping the pespiration from his brow he would toss his glasses over towards the dugout. And just in case anybody missed the message, he would get down on his hands and knees at the end of the inning and grope for the glasses in the grass.

If other players laughed at these antics, they also stayed loose at the plate.

Finally, the way I heard the story was this: When Bill Heaney and his foursome of Justin Harbord, Newt Cameron and Herb Brown stepped up to the 13th tee at Victoria Golf Club last Saturday. Heaney said:

"This being St. Patrick's Day, and as I happen to have a bottle of Irish whisky in my bag, why don't we all have a little nip before we tee off?" Whereupon they did. Heaney then took out his four wood and promptly smacked the ball into the cup for an ace.

If there's a moral there, Bill will gladly explain it and buy! G'nite all.

TROUBLE IN TREES has Rod Curl down on all fours searching for best route to get ball back on fairway. Despite some problems with shots into rough, Curl fired second successive one-under-par 71 Friday to remain close to leaders in Greater New Orleans golf tournament. Elder Shares Top Spot After Skidding to 74

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "This is the round," Lee Elder said before teeing off for today's third round of the $125,000 Greater New Orleans open golf tournament.

"You don't want to get in this position and lose it."

Elder, who fell back into a tie for the top spot with a second round 74 Friday, is fighting for his first tour triumph and seeking to become the first black to compete in the Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga., two weeks from now.

He blew nine strokes from a brilliant 65 in the opening round, was tied by veteran Miller Barber and must play today's round on the 7,080-yard Lakewood County Club head - to - head with Jack Nicklaus.

Barber had a second round 69 and tied Elder at 139.

Nicklaus, making his final preparations for defence of his Masters crown, had 16 consecutive pars for a 72 and a tie at 140 with Lou Graham.

At 141 were Dave Hill, Babe Hiskey, Tom Watson and Tim Collins.

Ben Kern of Toronto was among a group of 11 tied for ninth place at 142 after his 70 Friday. George Knudson, also of Toronto, was another four strokes back after a 74.

Arnold Palmer, meanwhile, could do no better than a 75 and just made the cut for the final two rounds today and Sunday at 147, the cutoff figure.

Brandon Blasted In Opening Game

SASKATOON (CP, — Saskatoon Blades scored seven goals in the last two periods Friday night to batter Brandon Wheat Kings 8-3 in the opening game of a Western Canada Hockey League best-of-seven quarter-final series.

Brandon opened strongly, earning a 2-1 first-period lead on goals by Kelly Greenbank and Ralph Krentz. Danny Arndt of the Blades had opened scoring.

The second period made the difference, as the Blades produced four unanswered goals before 3,344 fans. Byron Jackson, Russ Walker, Pat and Bob Bourne each managed a goal.

Blades dominated play most of the way, outshooting Brandon 45-25. The edge was particularly noticeable in the second period, when the Blades fired 20 shots on goal compared to two by the Wheat Kings.

Whaler Ace Adds To Status as Star

By The Canadian Press

Tom Webster, who jumped to the World Hockey Association this year but indicated recently he'd go back to Detroit Red Wings if the money is right, is giving substance to his status as a star performer.

Webster, one of eight who jilted the NHL's California Golden Seals last summer to join the fledgling WHA, has been one of the sparkplugs this year for New England Whalers.

His status as a top scorer has never been in question although he got little chance to show it with Boston Bruins, who developed him in their farm system; Buffalo Sabres, who drafted then chose to trade him to Detroit for goaltender Roger Crozier, or California where he was traded in October, 1971, for defenceman Ron Stackhouse.

A near-crippling back injury plagued him through his season in Oakland, and, along with several other Seals, he found owner Charles O. Finley too difficult to deal with at contract time.

Only in Detroit, where he led the Wings in scoring in 1970-71 with 30 goals, did he feel satisfied and indicated recently that despite his success in the WHA he would willingly return to the Motor City—if the money was right.

Friday night the 24-year-old right winger from Kirkland Lake, Ont., scored twice to lead the Whalers to a 3-1 victory over Chicago Cougars and pad New England's Eastern Division lead to 11 points over Cleveland Crusaders.

In the only other contest, Philadelphia Blazers scored three power-play goals en route to a 7-3 win over Los Angeles Sharks.

Seal Spirits Get a Boost

By The Canadian Press

Light-scoring Gary Croteau tallied the first and last California goals Friday night to pace the Golden Seals to a 7-4 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs in the only scheduled National Hockey League game.

It was only the fifth and sixth goals of the season for the 25-year-old left winger from Sudbury, Ont., whose defensive work is prized more than his offence.

But Croteau has had only limited opportunity to perform either function this year, missing several weeks of the season with injuries.

The victory was a boost to the flagging spirits of the financially-plagued Seals who have been reported rife with dissension. Several players have threatened to jump to the rival World Hockey Association unless there is a change in the ownership.

Owner Charles O. Finley met with several dissatisfied players last weekend then announced that negotiations had been going on with the NHL which had offered to repurchase the team.

The NHL owned the club once before,w hen the original group of owners, headed by Barry Van Gerbig, had sold the team back to the league after obtaining the franchise in the 1967 expansion which doubled the league to 12 teams.

Upset Win By France

PARIS (AP) — France won a surprise 12-3 victory over Wales in their Five Nations rugby match here Saturday, fly half Jean-Pierre Romeu scoring all the home team's points on three penalties and a drop goal.

Welsh fly half Phil Bennett saved Wales' honor with a drop goal. The French had led 9-0 at half-time.

Fritz Skips Rink To League Title

Wes Fritz has skipped a rink to the Friday Night Mixed League championship for the third succwssive year at Playland Curling Club.

Key Fritz, Eric Westlake and Marge Westlake are other members of the winning rink, which was presented with the title trophy at the league's windup Friday.

Skipping quarets to victories in the league bonspiel were Butch Kearns (A event), Harold Bjornson (B), Fred Middleton (C) and Lloyd Kearns (D).

Shuttle History

LONDON (Reuter) — Indonesian star Rudy Hartono made badminton history today when he became the first player to win the all-England men's single title for the sixth year in a row.

The 23-year-old Jakarta student took only 25 minutes to beat his Thomas Cup teammate, Christian Handinata, 15-4, 15-2 in a one-sided final.

One more single's title for Hartono in this tournament would tie him with Irish-American star Joe Devlin who won the crown seven times between 1925 and 1931. But Devlin only won it five times in successive years.

Margaret Beck, England's No. 1 women player, earlier took the women's singles title with an 11-8, 11-0 win over her countrywoman, Gillian Gilks.

Silver Rink Wins

RICHMOND — The Art Silver rink from Victoria Curling Club is the new holder of the Guy Philp Trophy, emblematic of the Pacific Coast over-60 championship.

Silver, supported by Graham Sled, Les Thornley and Scotty Anderson, downed Rudy Rudoski of Vancouver 8-5 Friday to wrap up a four-team playoff.

Silver beat Gerry Garoz of Courtenay 9-4 while Rudoski romped to a 12-2 decision over Hal Harley of White Rock in the semi-finals.

The four Coast finalists will compete with four B.C. Curling Association repesentatives in the provincial playoff, which starts Sunday at 4 p.m. at Victoria Curling Club.

Cricket Stand Blazes

KARACHI (Reuter) — Two disturbances by spectators wrecked the opening day of the third and final cricket Test between Pakistan and England today and forced the day's play to be abandoned 40 minutes early.

When the match was called off for the day with Pakistan 201 for two in their first innings, one of the spectator stands was ablaze.

Earlier in the day, armed police restored order among several hundred spectators wandering on to the pitch and play resumed after a 20-minute delay.

But a single run scored by Majid Khan, which gave the Pakistan skipper his 50, provided the spark for the second interruption.

A small group of spectators raced on to the pitch to congratulate him. But when the fans were struck by police wielding batons other spectators began hurling chairs on to the field.

A huge hemp cover, which had been providing some of the crowd with protection from the sun, was set alight and soon afterwards harassed officials announced play had been abandoned for the day.

England Manager Donald Carr said the match would resume Sunday but added: "After that, we will have to see what happens."

IT TAKES A WEE GIRL TO WIN OVER BIG CITY

NEW YORK (AP) — Big George Zaharias presented a huge silver trophy Friday night to Olga Korbut, the tiny star of the Russian women's gymnastics team.

"Olga, we love you!" he said in a voice hoarse with emotion.

"Olga, we love you!" shrieked thousands of raucous voices from the stands of Madison Square Garden.

Zaharias had presented the Babe Didriksen Zaharias Trophy to the 17-year-old Miss Korbut, honoring her as The Associated Press Woman Athlete of 1972.

Miss Korbut was chosen for the award by the votes of sports editors of Associated Press member newspapers and broadcasting stations after winning three gold medals and a silver in the Olympic Games at Munich.

Garden officials announced there were 19,964 spectators, a North American record for a gymnastics performance.

Zaharias has been presenting the trophy annually since his wife, Babe Didriksen, six-time Associated Press woman athlete of the year, died in 1956.

Extra-End Shot Only Thought

REGINA (CP) — Harvey Maazinke, the cool skip from Regina, connected with a delicate last-rock shot in an extra end Friday night to put Canada into today's world curling championship final against Sweden.

Mazinke's gentle draw shot pulled around a guard, tapped back an opposition stone and nestled in the four-foot, spelling a 6-5 defeat for Scotland's Alex F. Torrance.

"I didn't have time to think of winning or losing," Mazinke said after the epic struggle against the hot-shooting Scots. "I had no other thought than how to throw the rock."

He said the shot was on target because of a couple of "great sweepers"—lead Dan Klippenstein and second George Achtymichuk.

Sweden also went through a nerve-wracking encounter with France, before emerging with a 6-5 decision when Pierre Boan, the French skip, missed both his shots in the 10th and final end.

Sweden was down 5-2 at one stage but skip Kjell Oscarius said that even then "I thought we had a chance to win."

Oscarius said he decided to put the Swedish rocks into the back of the house in the 10th end "to put pressure on them . . . to make it rough."

France, in the semi-finals for the first time, cracked under the strain.

Mazinke said the semi-final tussle with Scotland was "our toughest of the championship . . . Alex made some fine shots."

Canada earned a playoff berth by piling up a 9-0 record in the championship's round-robin section and now has won 41 straight games in world competition, a string that extends back to 1969 when Ron Northcott finished with an 8-1 record.

France and Sweden came out of the round-robin with 7-2 records, Scotland finished 6-3, Werner Oswald of Switzerland and Charles Reeves of the United States 5-4, Helmer Strombo of Norway and Klaus Kanz of Germany 2-7, Renato Ghezze of Italy and Viggo Hunaeus of Denmark 1-8. The Danes and Italians were competing for the first time.

Scotland came up with a highly-respectable effort Friday night and although a loser Torrance said "I'm not disappointed."

Mazinke said that only once before this season did he face a more difficult shot than the one required to beat Scotland.

The Canadian contingent got a standing ovation from a sellout crowd of 4,500 at Regina Stadium, a hockey arena converted for curling use. The fans were also partial to the Swedes and cheered when the French skip missed with his last rock.

Sweden was one of the few rinks to give Canada problems in the round-robin—Mazinke won 8-7—and Oscarius said later the Canadians can be beaten by "brilliant curling and strategy."

Track Marks Topple

MONTREAL (UPI) — The touring Russian track team defeated the Canadian track and field squad, 150-114, Friday night in an invitational meet in which three Canadians set records.

The Russians took most of the events in the indoor meet, but the crowd of 12,000 at the Forum saw the Canadians pull off several upset victories.

Debbie Van Kiekebelt of Toronto managed one upset in the women's quadrathlon with a total of 3472 points in the four events. She finished third in the shotput and second in the 50-yard hurdles but managed victories in the high jump and 50-yard dash to finish on top.

Wendy Taylor of Vancouver delivered another fine performance, running the 50-yard hurdles in 6.7 seconds to set a new record for a Canadian. She finished third behind two Russians.

A new Canadian record was established by Russia's Viktor Saneev in the triple jump. Saneev, the world champion in the event, totalled 53 feet 1-¼ inches to break the old Canadian record of 49 feet 10 inches.

Toronto's Abby Hoffman won the 800-metre race while Louise Hanna also of Toronto, scored an upset in the women's high jump.

Another Canadian record fell when Glenda Reiser of Ottawa ran the women's 1500-metre race in 4:22.3 for a third-place finish.

The previous record for Canadian women held by Miss Reiser, was 4:22.7.

Grant McLaren of London also pulled off an upset with his first-place finish in the men's 3000 metres. McLaren was awarded the trophy as the best Canadian athlete.

Claude Ferragne of Montreal, who won the trophy as the best athlete in the meet, beat his own Canadian record when he took the high jump with a height of seven feet, three inches.

Canada also took both the men's and women's relay events.

Several British Columbia athletes on the Canadian team showed well.

Long jumper Penny May, a former Victorian living in Burnaby, placed third in the women's long jump with a leap of 18' 7½"; John Hawkins of Courtenay was fourth in the high jump at 6' 6"; Rick Cuttell of Vancouver placed third in men's pentathalon with 3848 points; Patty Loverock of Vancouver was third in the women's 50-yard dash at 6.0 seconds and Tony Tenisci of Trail placed third in the hammer throw with a toss of 54' 4".

Winnipeg Foursome Takes Legion Crown

TORONTO — Al Lutomsky of Winnipeg survived a tenth-end scare and went on to win the Canadian Legion curling championship on Friday.

Lutomsky, representing Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario in the 10-rink competition, edged Harvey Chapple of Ontario, 8-6, in an extra end.

But Lutomsky had some anxious moments in the previous end.

One up coming home, Lutomsky attempted to steal a point by placing his final shot behind an Ontario rock in the eight-foot ring. The Manitoba stone, however, slid up to the Ontario rock and nudged it into the four-foot ring, giving Ontario a tie.

Chapple, who needed any part of the four-foot, was heavy with his final shot and sent the match to an extra end.

Claremont Players Dominate All Stars

Claremont players dominated the Greater Victoria high school all-star side which will play Whitgift, a touring English school team from Croydon, England.

The English schoolboys faced a combined Brentwood College-Shawnigan Lake side at Brentwood today and then meet Victoria's all-stars at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Royal Athletic Park.

Dave Newton, Dave Neufeldt, Dave Chambers, Mike Puckett, Sandy McHattie and Chris Neal were chosen from Claremont, the defending district champions.

Les Wong, Tony Flynn, Venni Barbon and Randy Bieber were Victoria High players selected while Dave Reid, Ian Benson, Don Carson and Don Graham were chosen from Oak Bay.

Charles McDermott and Mike Bramson, both of Mt. Douglas, Barry Scroggs of Reynolds and Ed Murray of Mount View round out the team.

TIDE PLAYS UCLA SQUAD TUESDAY

Victoria's representative rugby squad, Crimson Tide, won't get much of a chance to rest after today's McKechnie Cup encounter with Vancouver Reps at Macdonald Park.

The Tide is scheduled to play University of California at Los Angeles in a exhibition match 3 p.m. Tuesday in Centennial Stadium.

Butlers Cut Out That Extra Work

The Vancouver Island Hockey League finalists cut down on their work-day Friday, and Esquimalt Butler Brothers enjoyed the benefits more than did Chemainus Blues.

Teams went overtime in each of the first two games of the best-of-five Colony Cup final, but Butlers needed only the regulation 60 minutes to post a 6-3 victory at the Sports Centre.

Holding a 2-1 series lead, Butlers can wrap up the championship with a victory when teams meet again tonight at Fuller Lake Arena, starting at 8:30.

Left winger Don Jones scored three goals for Butlers, including the winner early in the final period. Kerry Brewster, Ed Croteau and Paul Bion also connected for Butlers as they out-shot the defending champion Blues 36-22.

Wayne Anderson, with two, and Dave Griff, counting his seventh goal in three games, were Chemainus marksmen.

In Lebanon Murderers Can Be Heroes

The London Observer

BEIRUT — A Lebanese court has sentenced a middle-aged man to 10-years' hard labor for killing his 16-year-old daughter in a fit of fury when he found she was pregnant. He cut her throat in front of his family.

The incident received only back-page coverage in the local newspapers, for in Lebanon a murderer can be considered to be doing only his duty. He may even be rated a hero.

The Lebanon family honor counts for everything. An insult is often avenged only by spilling blood. There are also traditional methods of settling blood feuds by conciliation, but a Lebanese mother may bring up her unfathered child to accept that sooner or later he will have to avenge his family's honor by killing.

This done, a man is on the run from orthodox justice — and from surviving male members of the family he in his turn has dishonored. The desolate villages of Hermel in northern Lebanon, six miles or so south of the Syrian border are then his only sure hope of survival.

Hunted ineffectually by the Lebanese government and eulogized in folk songs and epic tales, 400 suspected and convicted murderers have made the mountain villages of Hermel their home and stronghold.

Once there a man can ask for the protection of any Hermel family, and honor demands that the family welcome him into their home like a son, take on his enemies and defend him — literally — with their lives.

Not that a fugitive is always 100 per cent safe even then, because with the number of outlaws gathered in the Hermel villages, a blood feud transferred there from the may sometimes by simply place where it originated.

Three years ago Hassan Dandash took a sub machine-gun into a Hermel village square and sprayed bullets into the remaining four male members of an enemy family.

Then he calmly walked out of the village and has not returned. Today, in another remote mountain cottage, a legendary figure, he is visited once a week by his wife. But according to Hermelites "not a policeman in Lebanon would dare try to arrest him single-handed."

Some of the men in Hermel are bitter about their lot. "I was pushed into killing," said one. "My family buried my brother underneath our front door. Every time I went in or out I had to walk over his tomb, and no one would speak to me properly until his blood had been revenged. But I'm just rotting here now, and before it happened I was studying for my baccalaureate."

All this man now has to hope for is an amnesty usually granted by each newly-elected president every four years. But an amnesty protects only against police prosecution; not against a revenge killing. One man who was amnestied in 1958 after the Lebanese civil war is "Abu Diab," 50, who would not return to Hermel without a gun-carrying bodyguard. With 16 "honor" murders to his credit, he lives in Beirut as a security guardsman, but always in fear for his own — and his sons' lives.

Life in Hermel is never pleasant. In summer the fugitives pay for their freedom with insufferable heat, and in winter, bitter cold. The barren mountain terrain makes poor farmland and beyond the main village of Hermel there are no medical facilities. The overcrowded schools are barely worth the name.

But more than anything else, it is a tedious life. The men are all fiercely political because they say, "there's nothing else to do or talk about." No man is ever without his gun and all are as alert as alley cats to the slightest indication of an enemy's approach. But Hermel's overriding advantage is its geographical position: not even the Ottoman Empire at the height of its power could smoke the outlaws out.

"Just take a look around you and you'll see why the Government can't get at us," said one villager. "We're totally isolated. Even if they did try to round us all up, they'd have to send the entire army to do the job." As it is, the moment a police patrol comes within 25 miles of the Hermel "fortress," the wanted men are warned by a highly efficient network of look-outs.

Only occasionally, as happened in June 1972, does the system go awry. A lieutenant and an army corporal were killed by the relatives of two outlaws they had managed to capture, and the incident provoked an unusual show of strength from the outraged army.

But even in the face of the ensuing tank, helicopter and infantry assault, a good number of the wanted men were able to escape across the open border into Syria while others hid like mountain goats in caves high up in the hills until the heat was off. But such happenings are rare, and in general the army and the outlaws prefer to keep thir mutual distance. "If we don't provoke an outright attack," explained one man, "nor will they."

Most family "honor" feuds begin with a quarrel over land ownership, but the roots of the dispute often get lost in the mists of time. And by then, whole families may have been wiped out. Ironically, the outlawed "honor" murder has a code of behavior that is stricter than most. He has to be restrained from killing his only goat in honor of a guest, and will stress that in Hermel no common criminal is ever given house room. "We turn that sort over to the police," he will say. "We kill for our honor and for our land. But we never tolerate a thief."

CUBANS ARGUE MIGHTILY ON PENALTY FOR CRIMES

By CLAUDE REGIN

HAVANA (Reuter) — In factories, canefields, offices or on building sites, Cubans are involved in heated arguments on what the penalty should be for negligence at work, corruption, rape or cattle thieving.

Cuba's revolutionary government several years ago created People's Tribunals where the judges, appointed representatives of the local populace, to deal with petty crimes.

Now the government has gone a step further in what it calls democratizing justice and turned every Cuban into a legislator. It recently issued millions of copies of law drafts which deal with crimes as varied as illegal use of military uniforms and homosexuality.

Cubans were urged to study the texts carefully and to propose amendments if they did not agree with their contents or the proposed penalties.

The drafts were written in simple language as the legislators did away with the usual judicial jargon so that anyone with primary education could grasp their meaning.

SEEK FRANK OPINIONS

The introduction to the drafts urges Cubans not only to study the texts carefully but to give their opinions freely. The Commission of Juridical Studies, which drafted the laws, said: "We do not want a pro-forma approval."

"Discuss the texts, vote in favor if you think they are right, vote against when you think they are inadequate, and if so, propose amendments," the commission added.

Discuss them the Cubans certainly did. At every local meeting of the Committee for the Defence of the Revolution, the mass organization of vigilantes which boasts a 2,500,000 membership, heated arguments took place.

Some argued, for example, that in a Socialist society those responsible for corruption while holding important administrative jobs should get heavier penalties, especially in a country like Cuba which is struggling to achieve more social justice.

There was also the lighter side to the discussions. When dealing with sex crimes, some men wondered what they might do to a girl and still get away with it.

After being examined by the people, the drafts will be returned to the Commission of Juridical Studies which will amend them as necessary.

They are part of a far-reaching reform of the whole juridical system, and at a later stage, of the constitution itself.

In Cuba, laws dating back to colonial times still co-exist with revolutionary tribunals, 14 years after Fidel Castro toppled former dictator Fulgencio Batista and established a Communist regime.

Moratorium On Foreign Professors

HAMILTON (CP) — A Carleton University professor said Thursday he wants to see a moratorium on the hiring of foreign scholars to Canadian faculties until a long-range policy on recruitment can be determined.

Dr. J. Steele, an English professor at the Ottawa university, told a seminar at McMaster University that this would ensure a higher proportion of Canadian scholars teaching at Canadian universities, would bring about a stronger approach to Canadian studies and would result in more Canadians in graduate school.

Dr. Steele said foreign recruitment should be determined by first establishing the amount of supply and demand for Canadian scholars through the Economic Council of Canada, as well as drawing input from the Canadian Association of Graduate Schools and the department of manpower and immigration.

"We should try to be the most liberal country in the world . . . but we should try to do this in a manner consistent with our responsibilities to our Canadian community," said Dr. Steele.

Pollsters Link TV, Reading

BRUSSELS (CP) — A new poll taken in Belgium may prompt some rethinking about the alleged ravages of television on the literacy of modern man.

The poll found that, of a cross-section of 1,200 persons questioned, one-third said they never buy books.

But more declared non-readers were found among Belgians who don't own TV sets than among those who do.

The poll-takers also reported that owners of TV sets are more likely to know in advance what they want in visiting a bookshop than is the case with those lacking television.

The poll was taken for the Institut Belge d' Information et de Documentation — the Belgian Institute for Information and Documentation.

The survey reports that more men than women admitted that they don't read books.

SEEK USEFUL BOOKS

Books of a practical sort — notably those dealing with mechanics and science — were most widely cited by the Belgians as being on their reading lists.

The pollsters also asked their cross-section about the books considered most necessary in domestic libraries.

Dictionaries and general encyclopedias ranked top in this category.

Drinking Doesn't Fizz on Secretary

VALLEYFIELD, Que. (CP) — A 30-year-old secretary who says "drinking doesn't fizz on me that much" slips away from her typewriter twice a day for a rendezvous with a bottle of rye, rum, scotch or some exotic alcoholic delicacy.

Rachel Gendron is no closet drinker. She doesn't even swallow the stuff.

She is a member of the taste panel at Canadian Schenley Distilleries Ltd. here, and maintains an impressive 71-per-cent efficiency rate.

Most tasters score around the 65-per-cent mark and are rewarded with 25-ounce bottles of something good to drink. Rachel receives 40-ounce bottles for her superior performance.

She started working at the Schenley plant here eight years ago as secretary to the industrial relations manager, and is still in the same office.

About six months after starting with the firm she became a trainee taster and a month later was promoted to the "control team." The normal apprenticeship period is six months.

A Schenley's taster is expected to maintain 60-per-cent efficiency to remain on the control team, says Rachel. Efficiency percentages are compiled daily and accumulated by four-week periods up to 12 weeks.

At two 15-minute sessions daily, she must sample three glasses of liquid—the finished, matured product, the product being brought to maturity, and Brand X.

Her job is to say whether or not the product being brought to maturity is as yet consistent with that currently on the market.

She accounts for her success by saying she doesn't smoke, she hasn't false teeth, and she is a woman.

The Schenley averages indicate women have more sensitive taste buds than men. The company's 10-person taste panel is comprised mainly of women.

Rachel and her husband, Yves, have a two-year-old daughter. They ski and swim in their spare time and rarely go to a bar. But on one recent night out, Rachel put her skills to work for her.

"I asked for a special kind of rum and they gave me something else," she recalled. "I sent it back."

Equality Ratified

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state of Washington ratified the equal rights amendment to the United States constitution Thursday, becoming the 29th state to do so. The amendment, which guarantees equal rights to women in employment, government and other areas, must be ratified by 38 states to become law. Nine states have rejected it.

Cast Your Vote March 31st for MARGARET RICHARDS

Dear Fellow Victorians:
On March 31st I ask you to vote for me, Margaret Richards, as full time Alderman for Victoria City Council. If elected I shall devote my full time, energy and enthusiasm to the many tasks at hand.
Cast Your Vote for:
• A FULL TIME ALDERMAN WITH TIME TO LISTEN
I will always be available to work on behalf of the community at large — independent of business and commercial interests. Backed by my experience, gained as a spectator at Council and Capital Region meetings over the past four years and my own political education, I know I can work successfully for you.
• A MEMBER OF THE VICTORIA ADVISORY PLANNING COMMISSION
Backed by my work on the commission and the insights into good planning gained on Mayor Pollen's European tour of model cities I shall work on Council to promote development in keeping with the needs of the community at large. Open markets, pedestrian malls . . . a harmonious blend of old and new to enhance the unique character of our garden city.
• A MEMBER OF THE NEWLY ESTABLISHED LANDLORD TENANT ADVISORY BOARD
A tenant myself, I shall work on Council to improve the landlord/tenant relationship; Prime considerations will be the improvement of tenant voter registration and, most important, a vote for tenants on the money referendums that affect us so much.
• SUPPORT FOR THE INTERESTS OF THE OLD AND THE YOUNG
I shall work to improve the quality of housing and extended care facilities available for senior citizens. In addition I should like to see Council become involved in creating new challenging opportunities to develop responsible citizenship in the youth of today. Related to these aims I shall work on Council to promote a good working relationship with the Provincial Government.
Let me work for you . . .

Dropping Exams Affects U of A

EDMONTON (CP) — Elimination of Grade 12 departmental examinations will have a profound effect on the University of Alberta, president Max Wyman said.

Dr. Wyman told a meeting of the executive committee of the general faculties council that with replacement of departmentals by teacher-evaluated marks, the university "must watch its admission regulations."

BRITISH MILLIONAIRE BOOSTS CHESS AGAIN

London investment banker Jim Slater is famous throughout the chess world as the man who saved the Fischer-Spassky match. Slater's last ditch offer of $125,000 being added to the prize fund was the gesture that caused Bobby Fischer to board a plane to Reykjavik at the last possible moment.

Now Slater is trying to help create some Grandmasters in his own country. Although Britain's young players have always performed well in junior tournaments, there has never been a British Grandmaster. Slater realizes that the financial rewards are insufficient in Britain to induce top players to become profesional. He has therefore offered 5,000 pounds ($12,500) to the first British player to get Grandmaster title and 2,500 pounds to each of the next four.

Slater's announcement was made at the opening ceremony of this year's Hastings tournament of which he is the chief sponsor. Immediately an English player took the bit in his teeth. William Hartston, 25, who only two months earlier had gained his International Master title, started off the tournament with a terrific burst. He beat Soviet Grandmaster Tukmakov in Round One, almost beat Smyslov in Round Two and, with only a few rounds to go, he was leading the tournament. Two rounds from the end Hartston needed only half a point to reach the Grandmaster norm for the first time (it is necessary to get the norm twice in order to be awarded the title). But in the final stages, his nerves failed him. He lost to Uhlmann in the penultimate round and narrowly missed drawing with Larson on the last day.

If Hartston can learn to overcome his nerves when he is in critical situations he will undoubtedly become Britain's first Grandmaster. Here is his win against Tukmakov, one of the many Soviet players who will be taking part in the Interzonals later in the year.

Everyone Knows Wigwam Harry

By DENNIS BELL

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) —If all the beer bottles that Wigwam Harry drained during this year's Yukon Sourdough Rendezvous were turned into paving stones, there would probably have been enough to build an amber feeway fom the Arctiv Ocean to the British Columbia border.

Wigwam Harry is one of those legendary characters who seem to blossom in the taverns of the Yukon Territory on such auspicious social occasions as the Rendezvous, an annual three-day blowout each February billed as a 100-proof cure to winter cabin fever.

Good old Wigwam is an integral part of the local color in this territorial cpaital of 10,000. Everybody in town knows him, and even the Rendezvous organizers say the winter carnival wouldn't be complete without him.

A holedigger by profession, Wigwam looks as if he's at least 110. He doesn't say much but smiles often to reveal a mouth devoid of teeth.

And he laps up a fantastic nightly quota of ale.

The Rendezvous is built around a series of sports events peculiar to the Canadian North. There are three days of dogmushing races with drivers guiding teams of huskies around a 15-mile course down the frozen Yukon River and through the bush.

There are also such things as the one-dog pull in which powerful huskies attempt to move small sleds laden with hundreds of pounds of flour, and, for the humans, a flour packing contest.

The Rendezvous attracts a strange assortment of visitors. It brings in trappers and miners from the bush who have spent the winter months talking to cabin walls, and it brings back just about every Yukoner who ever left the North.

This year, charter jets disgorged noisy hordes of bottle-laden travellers from Alaska, British Columbua, Alberta and the Northwest Territories. It's possible, even probable, that most of them never made it down to the Yufon River to see the dogmushers.

Many of them went from bar to restaurant to bar to room party for the entire three days. Two wine salesmen from Vancouver managed to maintain one hotelroom party for 72 hours straight, something of a record, even in the Yukon.

The Rendezvous committee pronounced the 1973 edition a resounding success.

The biggest coup was pulled off by a young man from Vancouver who introduced himself to everyone as "Scoobie Oobie" and was readily recognizable by the beanie and Mickey Mouse ears he wore throughout the Rendezvous, indoors and out.

Scoobie Oobie entered the flour packing contest after signing a release form with other contestants and shortly thereafter a forklift deposited sacks weighing 500 pounds on his back.

He handled it with ease. But a second contestant screamed "No way!" and turfed the flour off, while a third simply turned turtle under the weight.

There was no stopping Scoobie Oobie and his flour-power. Other contestants dropped out one by one and he finally emerged the victor by toting a remarkable 750 pounds over the prescribed course.

Consumer Mag On the Stands

The bright orange cover of the April issue of Canadian Consumer magazine is now on newsstands across the country—after a successful trial run in Ottawa and Toronto.

The magazine is on sale in 21 Canadian cities, including Victoria, Vernon, Burnaby and New Westminster in B.C. Other areas will be covered soon, editor Mrs. Pamela Mac Rae said in a news release Friday.

The magazine carries no advertising.

Workers' Group Eyes Own ECM

By CY FOX

BRUSSELS (CP) — The spectacular growth of the European Common Market, regarded by some of its critics as mainly an outlet for big business, has prompted plans for similar multi-national development by spokesmen for the workers and small traders of Western Europe.

In Brussels, capital of the Common Market, British union chief Vic Feather has been elected head of a new workers' group called the European Trade Union Confederation.

The aim is to make the confederation the market's leading union body, presumably big enough to counter the burgeoning power of the vast companies whose growth has matched that of the enlarged economic community.

The confederation held its first formal conference in Brussels. There, West German delegates were particularly insistent on strong British participation in the new workers' organization.

Continental unionists in general hope that, despite formal opposition to British market entry on the terms negotiated by the Conservative government in London, Feather's Trades Union Congress will support them in their efforts to influence the social policies now being worked out by the Common Market's top-level commission.

GO BEYOND COMMUNITY

The unions subscribing to the fledgling organization extend well beyond the borders of the economic community, embracing 16 countries in all and claiming a total of 30-million members.

But there is skepticism in some quarters about the chances of a single, multi-national union group ever growing to the point where contracts with employers can be negotiated to any great extent on a level transcending Europe's traditional frontiers.

Moreover, the union project is certain to have no appeal for small-business spokesmen like Frenchman Gerard Nicoud.

The 26-year-old Nicoud, a volcanic campaigner who boasts a prison record as fight for the rights of independent businessmen, issued a call in Brussels for a shopkeepers' defence group covering all countries of the Common Market.

In France, Nicoud is general secretary of a national small-business pressure group which in four years has built up a membership of 200,000.

Though the movement resembles that of Pierre Poujade in the France of the 1950s, Nicoud accuses his predecessor of selling out to the politicians of Charles de Gaulle's Fifth Republic.

Like the owners of small businesses in Belgium, Nicoud's followers loathe the complex and, to their minds, oppressively burdensome taxes heaped on Europeans trying to run shops and cafes independently of the great commercial corporations.

They have turned violent in their protests against big government — and also as a reflection of anxiety about the growing impact of the supermarket revolution in Europe.

Nicoud's prison terms — 22 months in all — followed a succession of violent protest incidents in 1969-71, notably the burning of tax records, the blocking of streets and highways and the besieging of government offices by his angry French followers.

The fiery cafe keeper from Marseille considers the middle class to be the most oppressed section of 20th-century society, victim of what he calls "a process of dehumanization where man becomes a mere serial number."

Under the vast bureaucratic machinery of the Common Market, this process will, if anything, be accelerated, Nicoud believes. So he considers the future of all Europe now is at stake.

In Belgium, at least, his ideas should find an eager audience.

CLOSE IN PROTEST

Here protest shutdowns by small businessmen exasperated by the size and techniques of modern taxation — particularly the Common Market-style — have been frequent in recent years.

The fears about the incursions of supermarket and chain-store operations also seem rife.

The Belgian small businessmen have bonded together in an impressive show of solidarity but have not produced a leader to rival Nicoud for personal magnetism.

The Frenchman envisages his expanded, Common Market movement as non-political and unconnected with working-class trade unionism.

The traditional unions, Nicoud maintains, suffer from the very sort of bureaucratic sterility that has made the machinery of government cumbersome and oppressive.

Acupuncture Used At Taiwan Clinic

TAIPEI (Reuter) — A group of enthusiastic doctors are giving free treatment — including the old Chinese method of acupuncture — to poor patients on the second floor of an old hardware store here.

In addition to providing free diagnosis, treatment and medicine from morning to night, the doctors also visit their patients at home when necessary.

Led by Dr. Liu Chen-lin, the centre was founded last October with 15 participating doctors who wanted to serve the poor.

They decided at a preparatory meeting that each member should first contribute an equivalent of $125 to buy beds and simple medical equipment for the patients.

In addition, each member would make a monthly contribution of $12.50 towards the clinic's expenses and pay their own transportation costs.

Not every doctor in the group is rich. Only a few have their own clinics and most work in public and private hospitals.

LOCATION DONATED

The clinic was formally opened to the public last December. The location was provided rent-free by a wealthy friend of one of the doctors.

The clinic has about 40 patients every day and although it has never advertised, its patients are on the increase as the doctors' generosity becomes known.

Patients come not only from all parts of Taiwan, but also from the United States, Japan and France.

COMPENSATION FOR EX-MINISTER

A Social Credit member in the legislature Friday introduced a private member's bill which would provide compensation payments to former cabinet minister Cyril Shelford who was injred at a political demonstration last summer.

Frank Richter (SC—Similkameen) introduced the Cyril M. Shelford Compensation Act, which would have the government refer the case of Shelford's injury to the judge of the county court.

The judge would then determine the extent of Shelford's injuries, the amount of compensation to be paid and the term of medical coverage benefits. Government approval will be needed, however, before any compensation can be provided.

Shelford suffered a cracked collar bone at a demonstration during the cabinet's tour of the province last summer. He has had to resign from steady employment as a result of the injuries.

Two-Year U.S. Drug Study Yields 100 Suggestions

By STUART AUERBACH
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — After a two-year look at the United States' drug crisis, a conservatively oriented national commission reported this week that the federal response "tends to perpetuate the problem" and that Americans need to develop new attitudes toward drug use.

On the federal level, the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse, called for the establishment of an independent superagency to take over all drug programs—law inforcement, education, research and treatment.

The agency would have subcabinet status and its head would report to the president. But to prevent creation of a permanent drug establishment, the commission said this agency should die after five years.

The long run solution, however, lies in a far-reaching change in American attitudes toward drug use, which the commission said are "inconsistent and founded on many misconceptions."

For example, the commission pointed out that the use of alcohol ("without question is the most serious drug problem in the country today") and barbiturates ("America's hidden drug problem") is condoned. But the use of marijuana or heroin is condemned.

"Chronic alcoholism and hidden barbiturate dependence . . . share much in common with chronic herion use," the commission said. "Drug use becomes interwoven into the fabric of the users' life because it replaces something otherwise missing."

These conclusions lie at the heart of the more than 100 recommendations by the commission, which was created by congress in October, 1970. Nine of the 13 members were appointed by President Nixon, the others—two representatives and two senators—were named by each house of congress.

The president met with the commission Thursday but made no comment on its report. Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said Nixon had not read the final draft.

Earlier, Warren announced that the president would send a reorganization proposal to congress to put all narcotics law enforcement agencies under the justice department.

He indicated that Myles Ambrose, a special assistant attorney general and director of Drug Abuse Law Enforcement, would leave the government after overseeing the transition to the new agency, and some one else would be put in charge of the program.

The reorganization plan, which either house of congress could veto if it acted within 60 days, may be ready within a week, Warren said.

It will move some 500 customs agents who are working directly on narcotics problems from the treasury to the justice department, he said.

In addition, all other enforcement activities would be consolidated under the justice department's bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs, Warren said.

However, rehabilitation and education programs would not be affected.

Last year, in its first report, the commission recommended the elimination of criminal penalties for the private use of marijuna — a recommendation it repeated in this report.

Otherwise, however, the comission said "irresponsible" drug use — which threatens the safety or welfare of others, impairs a person's ability to function, or retards his development — should be discouraged.

But penalties for possession of drugs should be lowered, and persons arrested for possession should be offered treatment rather than jail. Failure to accept treatment would result in no more than a year in jail and a $500 fine.

Drug traffickers "should be punished severely", the Commission said. But it differed with President Nixon's proposal last week that all traffickers receive mandatory minimum jail terms.

"This would return the drug use prevention effort to relying on fierce words in statute books instead of constructive action," the Commission said.

Throughout the report the commission tried to balance its desire to discourage drug use in America with its feelings that the nation had overresponded to the drug problem and that harsh penalties for drug use would solve nothing.

It reserved its strongest attack for what it called a billion-dollar "drug industrial complex" that has grown up over the past five years and now has "a vested interest in the perpetuation of the problem."

Federal spending on drug programs, the commission pointed out, has increased 1,092 per cent since 1969 and is still climbing.

"Drug abuse spending in the last decade," the commission said, "can be summarized thus: An ill-defined program emotionally expressed, led to ill-defined programs lavishly funded."

The Special Action Office of Drug Abuse, created by President Nixon to co-ordinate out of the White Huse the government's drug efforts, failed in its job, the commission reported.

And federal law enforcement efforts have been even worse.

"Integragency rivalry and lack of co-ordination, for example, have seriously hampered prevention of illegal drug trafficking," the Commission said.

"A sometimes bitter dispute exists between the bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs and the bureau of customs regarding which agency has primary authority to carry out investigations overseas and in cases where illegal drugs cross the border into the domestic market.

"This quarrel has persisted despite repeated efforts to resolve it by the president, by the Ashe Council on Government Reorganization, by the secretary of the treasury, and by the attorney general. It has often kept the two agencies from sharing intelligence and effectively co-ordinating investigative activities."

For these reasons, the Commission recommended the creation of a super drug agency — modeled on the Atomic Energy Commission and to be called the Controlled Substances Administration — to run all federal drug programs, including law enforcement.

To correct a similar dilution of effort on the state level, the commission recommended that all states create similar agencies which would run their drug programs and deal with the federal government.

All commission recommendations but the one creating the separate federal agency were unanimous. But Sen. Harold Hughes (D—Iowa) and Sen. Jacob Javits (R—N.Y.) disagreed; they said a single federal agency would not work.

Looking at the vastly expanded drug information and education programs, the Commission found them "scientifically inaccurate" and ineffective.

It recommendel a moratorium on the production and spread of new drug information materials until new standards for accuracy can be set and the present programs can be evaluated. The government is currently considering such a move.

"In recognition of ignorance about the impact of drug education, the commission recommends that policy makers should also seriously consider declaring a moratorium on all drug education programs in the schools, at least until programs already in operation have been evaluted and coherent approach with realistic objectives had been developed", the report said.

"No drug education program in this country or elsewhere has proven sufficiently successful to warrant our recommending it."

Looking at specific drugs, the commission said:

—"Alcohol, the most commonly used drug, is strongly associated with violent crime and with reckless and negligent operation of motor vehicles."

—Heroin has the potential for great dependence and is attractive to a "highly vulnerable population . . . it's social cost is considerably out of proportion to the number of its users . . . and justifies the highest possible restrictions on availability.

"Unfortunately, present social policy tends to exacerbate this cost even more. Because of enormous pressure characterizing the present social-legal-medical response, a disproportionate degree of behavioral disorganization and disruption accompanies heroin dependence."

—Barbiturate use is probably higher than people think, especially among bored housewives. "The commission believes that barbiturate dependence may be the modern equivalent of the hidden opiate dependence of the late 19th Century."

Instead of stricter controls over barbiturates, the commission recommended that doctors be more careful in prescribing them.

The commission is far from radical in its makeup. Raymond Shafer, its chairman, was a middle-of-the-road Republican governor of Pennsylvania. The vice chairman, Dr. Dana Farnsworth, took a strong anti-drug line when he was head of student health services at Harvard University. The executive director, Michael Sonnenreich, is a former narcotics bureau official. Its average age is 55, and its only black, Mitchell Ware, is a law enforcement official.

Winemaker's New Twist Keeps Everybody Happy

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Everybody knows that most wine improves with age.

For the ordinary man the problem is to keep it long enough to mature.

For the average winemaker the problem is to keep capital tied up for several years in maturing and unsold wines.

A New Zealand winemaker has come up with an ingenious way to satisfy everyone.

For a payment in advance he is undertaking to supply a dozen bottles of quality wine every year for five years.

Buyers who feel the wines would never survive at home are entitled to leave them safely stored out of the way of temptation in the winemaker's cellars until ready to use them.

The winemaker himself is under less compulsion to release wines until they are at their peak. With payment already made, he is in a position to give more independent advice to clients on when he believes they should be used.

Customers get a personally labelled vine in the vineyard, and a dozen custom-labelled bottles bearing their name for each five-year order they place.

PRICE CHEAPER

For $50 they get a total of 60 bottles over five years of a blended red or white wine made from hybrid grapes. This works out at 84 cents a bottle compared with the present price of $1.50 a bottle in retail wine stores. In five years' time the price might be a great deal more.

For wine from classical French grape varieties like cabernet sauvignon red or pinot chardonney white; the down payment is $75, which works out at $1.25 a bottle over the five years.

For his part the winemaker gets a quick return of capital, plus an assured outlet for his wine for five years.

There are risks for customers. The winemaker has made it clear that if calamity strikes a vintage, it might be necessary to postpone delivery until the vineyard returns to production.

And if some disaster destroyed the company's winemaking ability, customers could lose the balance of their investment.

Against that, the reputation of the company, N. Nobilo and Sons, of Huapai, near Auckland, stands high in New Zealand.

The founder of the company migrated from Yugoslavia, where his family had a centuries-old winemaking tradition. His son, Nick Nobilo Jr., has established a reputation as one of New Zealand's most talented young winemakers.

The company's products, especially the red table wines, are in the top rank of high award winners in New Zealand competitions and have also gained honors abroad.

Cruise to Hawaii with P&O.
Two weeks, four island ports.
From $440.

For a fortunate few, there is a different Hawaii.
It is the Hawaii that can only be experienced aboard a ship. Where islands appear as dots on the horizon and draw slowly nearer, their mountain peaks shrouded in mist and clouds.
Where cruising coastal waters reveals unforgettable views of rain forests, quiet coves, and jet black beaches of volcanic sand.
P&O invites you to discover this Hawaii in First Class comfort aboard our Oronsay or Arcadia, both registered in Britain, and offering passengers all the friendly service and gracious hospitality of an English country inn.
You'll make two calls at Honolulu. Then visit the historic old whaling port of Lahaina. Kailua-Kona with its deserted temples. Hilo, rich in the color and fragrance of orchids, gardenias, and anthurium by the million.
Oronsay and Arcadia will make three cruises this spring, ranging in length from 14 to 18 days. You can sail from Vancouver on May 21, June 5, or June 21. Cruise fares on these all-First Class ships are as low as $440 (based on double occupancy), including transportation, meals and entertainment.

We've prepared a colorful, 16-page booklet to tell you more about our Hawaii and the big white P&O liners that take you there. Ask your travel agent for a copy. Or send in the coupon today.

Girl, 13, Set Afire

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A 13-year-old girl is recovering from burns suffered when a group of young boys set her clothing on fire with a molotov cocktail.

Laura Leroux of suburban Coquitlam was in satisfactory condition Friday in hospital here with first and second-degree burns to her arms, neck and face.

RCMP cited her companion, Linda Burch of Coquitlam, with saving her life by throwing her on the ground and extinguishing the flames.

They were looking for three boys between 10 and 13 years old who threw the fire bomb at the girl.

A police spokesman said the incident occurred as the two girls were walking in a ravine behind the apartment block where Laura lives.

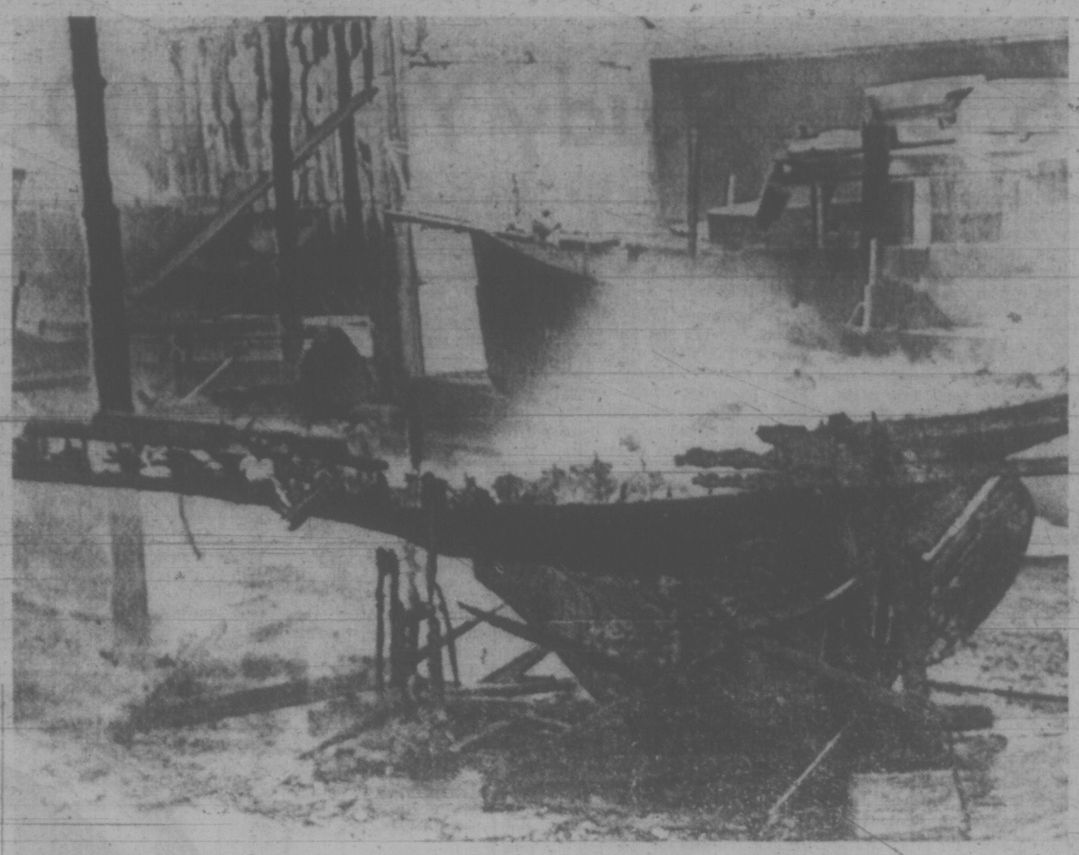
They came upon the three boys playing with fire and Laura told them to stop.

The boys then threw a pickle jar containing gasoline, apparently with a lighted wick, and it hit the girl, exploding on impact.

Derby Favorite

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Secretariat, the 1972 horse of the year and a winner in his first start of 1973, is an 8-5 betting favorite to win the Kentucky Derby May 5.

Linda's Chief is the second choice at 4-1, while Sham was posted at 6-1 in future book odds posted by the Reno Turf Club.



CHARRED HULLS were left when fire ripped through a boatyard in Chester, N.S., destroying 13 boats valued at $200,000. No estimate was available of damage to shed and equipment.

Homes Surround Reactor

TORONTO (CP) — A California engineer has an idea for helping solve the North American energy problem and some of its attendant worries with what he calls an atomic village.

Each would be a self-sufficient village built around a nuclear reactor. Each would create its own electric power, heat, air-conditioning, snow-melting, waste collection and water supplies with a minimum of waste energy and a maximum of recycling.

Hugh A. Bisset, the engineer, said at a meeting of municipal electric representatives that the first "closed-energy-loop" community might be ready in five years if scientists and engineers start now.

He said waste heat now dissipates 60 to 70 per cent of energy resources but his system would waste only about 10 per cent.

Small reactors would produce the electricity. Residual heat would be piped into homes and factories. It would provide hot water and melt ice off the streets.

The energy would also be used to treat garbage and sewage and water would be reused.

Off-peak electric power at night would be used to help grow fruit and vegetables in special greenhouses.

Mr. Bisset said his atomic villages, limited to about 500 families, would also avoid the problems of over-sized cities.

But he said there are three problems that will have to be solved in advance: getting scientists in several fields to work on it together; selling governments on the system; and figuring out political, legal and tax systems.

KAGU FOLLOWS DODO'S TRAIL

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — Flightless like the dodo, a bird called the kagu seems to be on its way to the same extinction.

The pearly grey birds are two feet tall and have a feathery fringe about the head. They are found only on this French island colony 900 miles east of Australia. No one knows how many are left in the Caledonian mountains, but zoologists say the number is low and dropping.

In the 17th century the dodo, a frumpy fowl, was killed off on the island of Mauritius in the Indian Ocean. Like it, the kagu is falling victim to former house pets turned loose to roam wild.

Dogs and cats ditched by their owners find the kagus easy prey.

Bush fires, which seem to follow nickel-mining operations and roadbuilding, also have taken a heavy toll. Even without fires, the noise from mining drives kagus farther into the hills, upsetting their hermit-like lifestyle.

"Kagus live very well in captivity," said Maurice Schmidt, a French biologist.

"But unfortunately they won't reproduce. Zoos are trying everything, but it's only been managed two or three times."

There may be anywhere from a scant few to hundreds still loose. The safest thing, scientists say, is to find a way for them to lay eggs in captivity to assure their line. They only lay one a year.

Murder Charge Changed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A charge against John Kirkland of Vancouver, in the fatal beating Jan. 10 of a 21-year-old Ontario man, Friday was changed from non-capital murder to capital murder.

The capital murder charge, which carries the death penalty on conviction, has been reserved for the last five years in Canada for murders of police and prison officers. Other murders have been classed as "non-capital" carrying a maximum of a life sentence

But prosecutor Brian Bastin said Friday the five-year trial period expired in January and there has been no federal legislation since to reinstate the "non-capital" charge.

Kirkland, 21, was originally charged with attempted murder of Allan Lawrence Kippin, 23, formerly of Windsor, Ont., by attacking him with a metal bar in a city rooming house.

That was changed to non-capital murder when Kippin died and was changed again Friday to capital murder.

A preliminary hearing was to have opened Friday on the non-capital charge but was adjourned to May 3.

Palestinian Deported

PARIS (Reuter)—Jamil Abdel Hasim, 28, a Palestinian, was deported from France Friday. He had been questioned in connection with a police investigation into activities here of the Black September Arab guerrilla movement.

Funeral Firm Sues CKNW

VANCOUVER (CP) — First Memorial Service Ltd., the firm of undertakers for the Memorial Society of British Columbia started a libel action in B.C. Supreme Court Friday for statements made about the firm on New Westminster radio station CKNW earlier this month.

Cited for libel are Radio NW Ltd., CKNW open-line show host Ed Murphy, reporter Terry Spence, former First Memorial Service employee Kenneth Timlick and John Reid, who was employed in a pick-up ompany for funeral firm First Call Service Ltd.

They Want to Remain a British Colony

The London Observer

NAIRCBI - Africans have witnessed the novel spectacle of a prime minister touring the continent not to enlist help in winning his cvountry's independence but to beg support for his people's wish that it remain a British colony.

Both a United Nations committee and the Organization of African Unity have passed resolutions urging independence for the 92 Indian Ocean islands of the Seychelles. But Chief Minister James Mancham, whose ruling Seychelles Democratic Party has won two successive elections on the basis of promoting closer links with Britain, thinks it inconceivable that 55,000 people scattered over so many islands can survive in independence.

The OAU last year decided that the opposition Seychelles People's United Party (SPUP), which holds five of the 15 seats in the Legislative Assembly and advocates independence from Britain, should be recognized as an official leberation movement, thus enabling it to draw on OAU funds. Angered by this move, Mancham set off on a five-week tour through Africa to try to get the OAU to withdraw recognition from the SPUP.

Mancham argued that since the SPUP, led by a 36-year-old London-trained barrister, Albert Rene, was allowed free movement inside and outside the islands and was permitted to participate freely in elections, it did not qualify as a genuine liberation movement.

Far from wanting to end links with Britain, Mancham, a 33-year-old lawyer, has suggested that his tropical island paradise, 1,000 miles from the coast of Kenya, should become an integral part of the United Kingdom with a status similar to that given to the islands in the English Channel. Says Mancham, "Independence without the ability to represent yourself diplomatically, independence with economic reliance on another country, independence without the ability to safeguard your territorial integrity — is simply not independence. It would be paving the way to another form of colonialism. It amounts to a search for a cure which would prove far worse than the disease."

Mancham regards calls from the SPUP for independence as "a calculated political manoeuvre to get financial support from those countries who would like Britain to pull out completely from the western Indian Ocean area."

He points out that the Seychelles administration has control over all major affairs except for law and order and external affairs. Britain has offered full independence for the islands if the majority approve, but has rejected requests for a referendum on the issue.

The SPUP maintains that, although it won only 44.1 per cent in the last elections in 1970 (compared with Mancham's 52.8 per cent.), it nevertheless has enough support to win an independence referendum. The party denies that its demands are influenced more by external factors than by popular sentirement on the islands.

"We are not fighting for our independence to please the OAU or the United Nations or any particular nation or group of nations for that matter," says a SPUP official. "Neither is it our purpose to drive the British out of the Indian Ocean area. We are simply entertaining the aspirations of our people to break out from this master-slave relation."

The English captured the Seychelles from the French in 1794, and the population today is made up of the descendants of early French settlers, Africans, Creoles, Indians and Chinese. Race is not a serious problem (as it is, for example, on the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius). But last year there was a spate of bomb blasts in the capital, Port Victoria, and elsewhere on the main island of Mahe just before a visit by Queen Elizabeth. This was followed by a strike by government workers and charges by the opposition of police brutality and intimidation.

HELP WANTED: PRIESTS

MONTREAL (CP) — The Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal has hired an advertising firm to conduct a two-week campaign aimed at attracting men to the priesthood.

Campaign director Father Barry Jones said the church decided to implement the program after the Trinitarian Fathers in the United States placed ads in a Playboy magazine which he described as "hedonistic."

The Trinitarians received close to 1,000 replies, 700 of which were genuine inquiries, Jones sad. Two months ago the fathers were still corresponding with 200 of these men, most of whom were college graduates.

"If young men aren't interested in reading church magazines, the answer is to go to the marketplace and put up your notice along with everyone else," he said.

The Montreal archbishopric will advertise in Montreal's English-language dailies, a few suburban weeklies, apd university papers.

Jones added that the U.S. Paulist Fathers advertise in underground newspapers.

The archbishopric will use a Canadian advertising firm, McKim, Benton and Bowles, to implement the campaign.

FLY-BY-KNIGHTS caused a commotion at Vancouver International Airport when they booked passage to Edmonton to promote tourism in British Columbia. They are members of the Lower Mainland Jousting Association.

New Era Dawning in Caribbean Islands

New York Times

ST. VINCENT, West Indies — The English speaking islands of the Caribbean, those volcanic and coral outcroppings of rock upon which flags of independence have been planted in recent years, are being moved by events into a new political and economic era.

A variety of pressures are forcing a review of the neocolonial aspects of tourism as Caribbean governments search for a formula that will enable the native West Indians to share more fully in the economic benefits derived from the massive influx of visitors.

This reassessment has produced a new language of realism that strips away the travel brochure image of the Caribbean as a sunny playground for North Americans and calls for liberation from outside money interests through a combination of economic pluralism and political pragmatism.

Coinciding with rising self-awareness are external pressures toward greater cohesion, such as the widely anticipated economic withdrawal of England from the hemisphere and the opening of a new period of inter-Caribbean diplomatic relations with Cuba.

Indeed, Castroism has fostered no more anti-American emotion in the Caribbean than tourism, some regional analysts believe, and may actually create less political interest in the future. What is needed, they say, is not ideology but native leadership with the competence to turn the tourism phenomenon into a force that serves the island's people.

But to make this idea concrete is a problem. England's entry into the European Common Market has raised serious doubts whether she can continue to protect imports from former colonies beyond short-term agreements. And any movement toward a common Caribbean identity must take account of sharply contrasting stages of development.

The Leeward islands, for example, tend to be more conservative and less developed than the Windward islands. The somnolent British Virgins, still a colony, are about as far removed from independent Trinidad, where a struggle between native blacks and brown East Indians crackles with tension, as American Samoa is from New York City. Oil refinery workers in Aruba earn wages that provide a fair living, while women working in an American-owned plant on St. Lucia make 15 cents an hour.

"We are very similar and very different at the same time," said one Caribbean political leader. "We have a sense of union only when we get together outside of the Caribbean. Take, for example, the cameraderie in the West Indian clubs of New York City. The difference between a Jamaican and a Barbadian is about the same as between a New Yorker and a Texan. Get the Texan to speak about the New Yorker and you would think they are from foreign countries. Let them meet in a Paris bistro and suddenly their arms are around each other and they are both Americans."

The Barbadian's grasp of white ways and his studied attachments to the work ethic are commented on in Calypso Lyrics, the topical news service of the Caribbean.

"The Trinidadian looks upon the Barbadian as staid and joyless, a man who postpones gratification for material success," observed Dr. Anthony P. Maingot, a native of Trinidad who teaches at the University of Miami.

Still, common threads do exist. A Caribbean trade association, Carifta, was formed several years ago, and while it has not yet succeeded in persuading West Indians to buy native goods and foodstuffs, it has established a base market that many hope will eventually wean the region from foreign money and merchandise.

And throughout the islands, the coming of independence and the emergence of native leadership has awakened an often expressed feeling of regional responsibility and a desire, despite great differences, to work out problems together.

Political co-operation was manifest, for example, in the recognition last December of Cuba by Jamaica, Barbados, Trinidad and Tobago.

"When Cuba indicated it would take an interest in spreading its experience in sugar cane and other economic areas, then we took an interest in establishing relations," said Branford Taitt, Minister of Trade in Barbados.

"We recognize the Soviet Union," the 34-year-old official continued, "why not a fellow Caribbean country where thousands of exile Barbadians live and work? We are not convinced that Communism is the best system.

"For that matter I am not personally convinced that capitalism is the best system for us. We just don't have the resources for capitalism."

Most of the islands apparently do not have resources sufficient for Marxism either. The Communist model in Cuba, one of the richest of the Caribbean islands in resources and technical experience, has still not found economic sufficiency despite massive Soviet aid.

What is developing as a viable economic force is the style of socialism found in Barbados and most of the other independent islands, a system of extensive government husbandry of limited resources with provision for a degree of private enterprise.

Meanwhile, the black power rhetoric that swept several islands in recent years, though it can still be heard in some places, no longer has the same disruptive fervor. There seems to be a growing recognition that just as the newly won political power did not automatically create economic power, neither would harsh talk or violence.

Canadians in Vietnam Are Frankly Nervous

By HAROLD MORRISON
CP Foreign Editor

TRI TON, South Vietnam (CP) — Determined to hang on, two Canadian army officers watched in anger as Polish and Hungarian ceasefire observers pulled out of this dusty border village today. Canadians feared their hurried departure may signal another round of North Vietnamese mortar shelling.

"They're trying to scare us out," said Maj. Bob Stewart of Winnipeg and Capt. Robbie Thomason of Allison and London, Ont., as they recalled two mortar attacks on the village earlier in the week which killed three South Vietnamese and wounded more than a dozen others.

"They come from Death Mountain," said a villager as he pointed down the dirt road towards the towering Co To mountains which dominate this cluster of primitive dwellings 15 miles east of the Cambodian border.

The 82-millimetre mortars, fired with devastating accuracy, exploded in two key village points, showering the surrounding area with fragments. A South Vietnamese captain and a soldier were among the dead. The old French building where the ceasefire observers had been billeted was untouched.

But although the Indonesians stuck with the Canadians it was evident that the Poles and the Hungarians had received orders to evacuate. Early today their bags were packed.

They were in such a hurry to get out that they ordered the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) helicopter off the pad before this reporter could get aboard. Using radio, Thomason ordered the chopper back to pick up this reporter.

Back in Can Tho, the ICCS district headquarters for this part of the Mekong Delta, Manfred Von Nostitz of Toronto, head of the Canadian delegation, said that until the monsoons start in June, the war situation in the delta is likely to become more dangerous. Can Tho is 55 miles southeast of Tri Ton.

Despite all talk in Saigon of ceasefire violations declining, experienced Canadian military men in the field suggest the battles between the North and South Vietnamese continue to rage, but they are largely unreported.

One Canadian expert said that the North Vietnamese, beaten back from securing Tri Ton and Hong Ngu to the northeast, returned with three regiments March 21. In an ensuing battle, the North Vietnamese lost 170 dead. Later the South Vietnamese lost an entire battalion, although the South Vietnamese expressed confidence that they can still resist the new North Vietnamese push.

Intelligence reaching the Canadians indicate that the North Vietnamese have a virtual free run of most of neighboring Cambodia, expanding the Ho Chi Minh Trail and branching into many parts of the delta, the rice bowl of Vietnam. The reports indicate that in the last 10 days 500 North Vietnamese have infiltrated into South Vietnamese outposts dominating the high ground, such as the Co To mountains.

Thomason and Stewart are frankly nervous. They are convinced the North Vietnamese can hit their targets accurately and that they will carefully avoid the ICCS compound. But they cannot be certain. The hurried departure of the Poles and Hungarians has added a further reason for apprehension.

"I have butterflies," said Thomason.

An American officer who is part of the Joint Military Commission JMC in this area said he can evacuate the Canadians in less than one hour. The Communist parties have refused to join the United States and South Vietnam in the JMC group here.

At Can Tho, Maj. Barry Dixon of Saskatoon, Montreal and Penticton, B.C., identified the mortar crews as part of B Battalion of the 101st North Vietnamese Division.

"They want Tri Ton," the acting Canadian military commander said. "If they want to hit us in Tri Ton, they can hit us easily. They are usin g scare tactics."

The Canadians suggest that once they and the Indonesians withdraw from this village, the mortar pounding will be intensified, the area surrounded and the North Vietnamese will seep further inland. Saigon, 120 miles to the east, is the ultimate goal.

"About 80 per cent of South Vietnam's rice comes from the delta," said Von Nostitz. "If the North Vietnamese can control these supplies, Saigon can be starved into surrender."

LIBRARY BOOKS TALK

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jim Derksen, director of the Central Audio Book Library, would like to establish Canada's first permanent taped-book service for the blind, visually impaired and disabled reader.

He said recent studies show about 15 per cent of Canadian school-age children to be affected to some degree with a reading disability, thus creating the necessity for such a service.

Mr. Derksen and his 15-member library staff have already applied for incorporation but "right now we are existing on make-work funding" through a $45,600 federal Local Initiatives Project grant which expires May 31.

If the library served all of Canada, the cost of a taped book would probably be lowered to about the same level as that of a print book, he said. A 300-page textbook that translates into a 10-hour recording requiring 50 man-hours to produce and costing about $200 may be duplicated for about $3.

"It's a question of cost to the country, in terms of educating the visually handicapped — or not educating them. The tape-recorded textbooks give them the possibility of becoming independent."

At the library, the staff works through the special education branch of the Manitoba department of education and the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, where requests for tapings are made.

After ensuring the textbook is not already taped through some other agency, the library uses a reader-monitor system of simultaneous taping and proof reading.

The master copy of the recording is kept on file at the library and the duplicate loaned to the person requesting it for one academic year.

Smoke Firm Fined

MONTREAL (CP) — Benson and Hedges Canada Ltd. was fined $27,500 Friday on to charges of misleading advertising.

The company pleaded guilty earlier this month to the charges arising from its $1,474,885 promotion of Belvedere cigarettes between September, 1969, and June, 1970.

Federal prosecutor Louis-Philippe Landry told the court the advertising continued throughout Canada although the company knew that only persons living in a certain region had a chance at the major prize of $25,000.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

No Real Christianity Without Tears

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Aldous Huxley's Brave New World, first published in 1932, has come to be accepted as one of the more significant novels of this century. It is a fantasy of the future, a mixture of science fiction and social satire, a warning against the menaces inherent in man's scientific and technological ingenuity.

Huxley tells that the citizens of the brave new world will have a drug — he calls it "soma" — to take the rough edges off life, to eliminate tension, to give feelings of complete well-being.

"If by any chance something unpleasant should happen in this brave new world," he writes, "there is always soma to give you a holiday from the facts. There is always soma to calm your anger, to reconcile you to your enemies, to make you patient and long-suffering. We carry our virtues about with us in a bottle. Christianity without tears — that is what soma is."

Huxley's fantasy from yesterday may become reality for tomorrow: pharmacology may soon be able to provide us with drugs which have all the advantages of alcohol with none of the disadvantages, drugs which will give us holidays from life's hard facts without subsequent hangovers and remorse.

But is the achievement of adjustment to one's circumstances by artificial tranquilization the way of personal fulfilment? Do you really wish to be, as it has been put, "happy like a turnip"?

The person who has been artifically tranquilized, whatever methods are used, has not found solutions for the basic problems of his life. At best he may find some temporary release from abnormal stress and tension: this may help him to new and healthier perspectives on his problems. At worst there is merely a temporary shelving of problems: there is ample clinical evidence that personal problems tend to become more painful and more complicated when artifically thrust aside.

Some people try to use faith as a tranquilizer, as a way of avoiding life's hard facts. But faith used primarily in such ways often sours and becomes menacing to the good life rather than an agency of it. Faith as an escapist ploy is pretty unreliable.

Biblical faith is not escapist: only perversions of it are escapist. There is no authentic Christianity without tears — and Jewish friends have told me that there is no authentic Judaism without tears either. In the biblical understanding of man's life, fulfilled personhood is not achieved in escape from circumstances, or in abject surrender to circumstances, but in mastery, by struggle, of circumstances.

Faith cannot serve you as easy tranquilization and escape, as Huxleyan "soma." But there are resources in faith that can help you cope with all that life thrusts at you and help you to mastery of your circumstances.

Different Emphasis On Lent's 40 Days

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The number 40 recurs like a refrain in Biblical events and it marks the length of an age-old Christian observance — the 40 days of Lent.

Nowadays, however, it has a different emphasis. Attention now is focused not so much on doing without something as on doing something positive to improve oneself and the conditions of others.

"More important than giving up something is giving something," says Rev. Albert P. Stauderman, editor of a denominational weekly, The Lutheran, of the general shift away from the older practices of fasting.

The new approach is pointed up in scriptural readings used in the liturgy of the period, such as in Isaiah 58, which says that rather than dietary fasting, God wants justice for the oppressed and bread shared with the hungry.

"Then . . . your healing shall spring up speedily . . .

Then you shall call, and the Lord will answer."

CELEBRATES RENEWAL

The observance is intended for penitence from wrongdoing, for rededication and spiritual renewal as a preparation for the Easter celebration of Christ's resurrection.

How it came to run for 40 days is not altogether clear, since it originally lasted only a day or two and later only a week.

It was lengthened to 40 days in the fifth century, and that time span now often is seen as deriving from the 40 days that Jesus fasted in the wilderness before beginning his ministry.

However, the figure 40 is one of those mysteriously recurring time measurements in the Bible, a kind of "holy" number.

In the flood for which Noah built his ark, it rained for 40 days and 40 nights. The children of Israel wandered for 40 years in the wilderness.

Moses spent 40 days and nights atop Mount Sinai when he received the 10 Commandments.

Forty hours elapsed from the moment Jesus died on the cross until His hour of resurrection. The period of the resurrection appearances lasted 40 days before He ascended into the divine sphere.

SUNDAYS EXCLUDED

The 40 days of Lent do not include Sundays, which were not "fast days" in the older modes of observance, when the emphasis was mainly on restricted diets and self-denial, which often took trivial forms such as forgoing sweets.

Roman Catholicism, in the changes of the mid-60s emanating from the Second Vatican Council, abolished its Lenten rules limiting eating to one full meal with meat a day, leaving it up to individuals to choose meaningful ways of observing the period.

Barrier Erected Around Statue

VATICAN CITY (AP) — workmen began erecting a bullet-proof glass barrier Thursday around Michelangelo's Pieta, fully restored by Vatican experts.

The statue, damaged last year by a hammer-wielding Hungarian expatriate, will be unveiled to the public before Easter, experts said.

Pope Paul VI will attend the unveiling and the reconsecration of the chapel in St. Peter's Basilica, where the statue was placed two centuries ago.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

With deepest thanks to all those who attended the Benefit Hockey Dance for Bob Ellis, February 24, 1973. The realization of the concern and sympathy all my friends, associates and especially those that attended out of the goodness of their hearts made my injury so much easier to endure. My sincerest thanks are extended to Jim Moody and the Colwood Recreational Hockey Association for all their assistance and goodwill. Many thanks as well to all my friends that sent cards and paid visits during my stay in hospital.
— Bob Ellis.

The gratitude in our hears can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends and relatives to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Gordie Paterson. Special thanks to Monsignor M. T. O'Connell, the Pallbearers, also Stan Martin, Mr. Bert Longhurst and Graham and Torrey McCall.
— Josephine Paterson, Patricia, Linda, Terry and Robert.

—Mr. John Fawcett and families.
We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our many kind relatives, friends and neighbours, Mr. Gaynes of McCall Bros., Mr. J. W. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. D. Rae of Oaklands Chapel, Dr. and Mrs. A. V. Piper, Oak Bay Chapter of Eastern Star, Base Supply Branch C.F.B., in the loss of our loving Mother, Daughter and Sister.
—Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Slade, Catherine and JoAnne Anderson and Ernie Slade.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends, neighbours, business associates, Legion members, and fellow lodge members, especially the Sisters and Knights of the Pythian Order. Special thanks to Reverend Ware for his comforting words, during the loss of our dear husband and father Jim Lequesne.
—Mrs. Margaret (Mugs) Lequesne, Donna, Kristine and Jimmy.

Our sudden loss, the death of our beloved wife and mother, Alice Fawcett, has left an emptiness in our hearts that can never be wholly filled, but the many kind words and acts of sympathy from our relatives and friends have helped immeasurably. We are deeply grateful to Rev. R. Faris, and Mrs. Alice Waddell, soloist, and McCall Bros.

9 IN MEMORIAM

McAULAY — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Elizabeth Reid, who passed away March 25, 1967.
The dearest mother and
and noblest friend
One of the best who God could lend;
dear,
Silent the voice we loved to Absent the face we loved so
dear,
Silent they oice we loved to hear,
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept
To love and to cherish and never forget.
—Fondly remembered by Margaret and Dad.

MUSGROVE—In loving memory of Mary Musgrove who passed away March 25,1971.
—Sadly missed and forever remembered. The Family.

PERRY — In loving memory of Charles Perry, who passed away March 24, 1972.
"His smiling way and pleasant face,
Are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each.
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again."
—Ever remembered by loving wife Grace and sons Bill an Charles, Grandchildren, and friends Nora and Arthur.

SOLOMON — In loving memory of Douglas, beloved husband and father who passed away March 21, 1971.
—Sadly missed, and quietly remembered every day, by wife Georgina, children, Neil and Karen, brother Ron, Mother and relatives in England.

SALESMAN
$15,000 YEARLY OPPORTUNITY
AAA-1 Corporation offers lifetime opportunities in growing industry to cover Vancouver Island. Extremely high repeat business. Territory semi-established. Exceptional fringe benefits. $150 weekly draw against commissions to start.
Call Mr. H. Sheriand, District Manager, for interview at Mayfair Motel, 388-7337, Friday afternoon and Saturday, March 23rd and 24th.

W—A—N—T—E—D
Mature, ex-businessman or salesman to introduce Harley Davidson Golf Cars (American Sales Leaders) to clubs and pros. This is not a daily grind but would require certain days or weeks in a year concentrated and working with golf courses in Victoria and Vancouver. (We do represent B.C. though.)
The challenge should be interesting and worthwhile, the earnings would depend on accomplishment and probably not be immediate. Nominal expenses would be provided, but the real remuneration would have to come from the sales and leases developed. We're looking for the man that wants an interest in life and has the initiative to build and look after a business without constant supervision.
Kindly arrange for interview, Don Telford, 386-8424, including Sunday.

FANTASTIC VIEWS
TOTAL SECLUSION

An 800 foot blacktop driveway leads up to the three-bedroom post and beam home with a living room 25x29 ft. One complete 25 foot wall in natural rock with the fireplace inset.
Sliding glass doors lead to both front and back sun porches off the living room, the walls are Walnut panelling, and the floor is finished in beige high quality wall-to-wall shag carpeting.
There are two bedrooms on the main floor and one downstairs. The master bedroom is 12x15, with an eight by nine 4-piece bathroom ensuite. This bedroom also has walnut panelling and beamed ceiling, and wall-to-wall carpeting. The second bedroom is 10 by 11 and adjoins the second three-piece bathroom which also has an extra large built in shower. The third bedroom is downstairs and is 10 by 16 ft. The rumpus room is 15 by 15 ft. and is finished in Cedar Knotty Cedar panelling and high quality wall-to-wall carpeting on the floor. There is a good sized basement with a double carport adjoining.
The view from this house is almost unbelievable, ranging all the way from Race Rocks to Mount Baker, and including the city centre and the Victoria waterfront and the Olympic mountains. At night it becomes a fairyland of glittering lights.
This secluded property is located 7 miles from downtown Victoria, fifteen minutes by car.
Approx. 1 acre is cleared and in pasture and there is plenty of room for a horse or two. Arbutus trees dominate the property as well as large firs and some Dogwoods.
The asking price of $57,900 is well below the replacement cost today.

THIS OLD HOUSE

Situated in Fairfield on a tiny lot two blocks from Beacon Hill Park has a great deal to offer for the discerning buyer. Under the main floor there is a basement and above the top floor ceilings, there is a roof to protect one from inclement weather. There is electric wiring, so that by turning a switch —PRESTO, there's light. Water is piped into this home, and there are taps which provide abundant water as needed. There is also a bathroom INSIDE the house, so that one need not venture outdoors to battle the elements; and an oil furnace keeps one in comfort, without the tedious chore of chopping wood. This old house is now vacant, so that you may move in quickly. Don't act in haste; may repent at leisure. But he who hesitates is lost. Clear title. Price $21,900. Don Bacon. 385-2458.

Miners Slam NDP Proposal

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The B.C. government wants a share in mining profits without running any of the risks or taking any of the losses, a special meeting called by the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines was told Friday.

Thomas Elliott, chamber manager, told the gathering of more than 1,000 a proposed amendment to the Mineral Act would mean the slow but certain death of the mining industry in B.C.

A resolution was passed amid thunderous acclamation which demands a public declaration that the provincial government will make a careful study of mine taxation before any action is taken.

The resolution also asks for an amendment to the proposed Bill 44 to preserve the rights of free miners, to encourage more prospecting activity by reducing the threatened increased cost of staking and holding mineral land and exemption of small claim and leaseholders from "production lease" provisions of the proposed legislation.

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick on March 1 introduced amendments to the Mineral Act—the first major changes since 1891—which will enable the government to buy into a mining development. Mining companies will also have to submit detailed plans regarding economic feasibility, safety standards and reclamation of the land before production leases are granted by the minister.

The amended act says "no person shall explore for, mine or produce minerals" unless he holds a free miners certificate, which will be limited to Canadian citizens or immigrants of not more than eight years' residence. In the case of a corporation, half of the directors must fill this requirement.

Another major amendment to the act permits the cabinet, if it considers it "in the public interest," to make loans to the holder of a lease or a mineral claim, or "acquire an interest or equity on behalf of the Crown in the property or operations of the holder of a lease or mineral cliam."

Ottawa 'Bankrolls Drug Abcess'

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Rochdale College in Toronto is "the largest drug distribution centre in North American bankrolled by the federal government," Peel County Coroner Martin Dobkin said Friday.

He made the accusation in his charge to a jury investigating the barbiturate overdose death of Dennis Sprang, 16, of this municipality just west of Metropolitan Toronto.

Dobkin described the college, built with federal funds, as "a festering abcess" and said the government was indirectly financing drug trafficking through Local Initiatives Project grants to Rochdale residents.

In earlier testimony, the jury was told the the youth visited the college Dec. 13 and obtained 15 capsules of mescaline. He took two of them and gave one to a 14-year-old girl at a rock concert

It's Time Gardeners Started Looking on Bright Side

GARDENING
jack beastall

What has come over that particular segment of the population to which you and I belong, the gardeners of the community?

Possibly it has escaped your notice, but we are creating the impression that gardeners are a group of grouchy, unreasonable people.

The time has come to take ourselves apart, examine the components of our make-up, then put back the useful parts and get rid of those which create a poor impression on on other folks.

If we don't do it ourselves some outsider will do it for us, and we shall most likely resent what is revealed.

The image we present to our children, to our new neighbors from other lands and from other parts of Canada, falls short of what is normally expected of the gardening fraternity.

Our climate is wonderful, our gardens should be excellent, yet we complain as if it were the biggest chore on earth to make them.

We make lawns, then complain to outsiders of the time and labor needed for watering, fertilizing, edge trimming, cutting, and weeding. The outsiders listen patiently and go on their way wondering.

Parents are worried because their children have not "inherited" the same intense love for gardening. On the rare occasions I have been able to talk to these children they have posed questions difficult to answer.

Cabbage Five Days A Week

"Since I was knee high I've listened to Mom and Dad complain of the work involved, the difficulties of getting things to grow, their aches and pains. I've had to do jobs just because the Jones kid did them, I've had cabbage five days a week because Dad grew it, and we could never go on a picnic because the lawn had to be cut or the potatoes lifted. Surely there's a better life than having every moment and every meal geared to a garden."

In trying to impress youngminds we have alienated any desire there may have been to follow our example.

Newcomers from Europe find it difficult to understand our approach to gardening. "You talk of weeds and pests as though these plants and insects had no right to exist, as though they were put into your garden just to annoy you.

You kill and destroy, yet you cannot name the good or the bad. You profess you love gardening, but you complain at a little spading or weeding, you would have no bird peck your fruit nor caterpillar chew a leaf, and when leaves fall you become frantic. But all these are good, all these make a garden.

"Why do you not count your blessings, enjoy your wonderful freedom, and be thankful you are privileged to have a garden?"

How do we act when a new neighbor moves in? If he seems interested in gardening he has to listen to long stories about the difficulty of growing plants in this climate. If he knows all that, we go out of our way to show him he does everything wrong.

Should the new neighbor not be remotely interested in a garden we complain over the condition of his lot, blame him for all our weeds and insects, object to his dog, cat, or children, instead of enlisting his cooperation and showing, by example, the benefits and pleasures of having a garden.

Sure we have problems, but they are our problems resulting from the way of life we have chosen. Let's face them. Let's show we can handle them. Let's be happy in our gardenng and impress others with our happiness, not with our problems.

Always remember that our rights end where our neighbors' rights begin, and that is usually at the boundary line of our property.

Each of us has a right to do as we wish with our garden. We resent being told what we should do or how we should do it. Let's concentrate on our own garden and leave the other fellow to tend his. It makes for better neighbor relations.

And it is time we quite hiding behind the phrase "what will the neighbors say?"

While it sometimes indicates a desire for acceptance by the community, more often it is just an excuse for not doing something, or an admission that we can't make up our mind.

As we start another round of planning and planting it may be worth while to give a few thoughts to the image we present as gardeners to our children and their friends, to our neighbors, and to those with whom we converse about gardening.

We could very well resolve to go about our hobby of gardening with a smile and a cheery word; to overhaul our scale of values and endeavor to see things in their right perspective; to appreciate, and express our appreciation, of the privileges of having a garden in which to work, relax, and experience pleasures that cost nothing but mean a lot.

We could well afford to think twice before we groan or complain, for we shall often find that what we look upon as an imposed chore is actually a task we have made for ourselves. In our desire to reach a certain goal. If its too much, abolish the goal, but don't complain.

It may help if we resolved never to lose our sense of humor; if we laughed at ourselves, our problems and our pains. Others are laughing at us and we may as well join them.

WEEK'S WORK

By the end of month, plant out sweet peas started in coldframe. East facing wall gives five months of bloom if plants are given good culture, including never allowing seed pods to form.

Hybrid tea roses near salt water or other frost free areas should be pruned now. Climbers, remove only dead wood.

Old rangy lilacs can be cut back now to get new growths to bloom lower. As much as half the height can be removed. Try to leave some of the newer shoots to give leaves for feeding the plant, thus inducing new growth. Young lilacs, no pruning.

Unwanted growth can now be taken out from climbing honeysuckles, wistaria, fleecevine (Polyganum baldschuanicum).

Remake mint bed, keeping new rooted pieces discarding old woody sections. Plant into bottomless tin pails to prevent spreading.

Plant out a few early summer cabbages. Use lime and set firmly.

Top dress rasperries, remember shallow roots easily damaged. Young fruit trees need mulch of compost also to prevent sun baking of root area.

Tunnel Talk Falls On Deaf Ears

LONDON (CP) — Government estimates that a cross-channel tunnel linking Britain and France might be in operation by 1980 have fallen on deaf ears in Britain.

"It'll never come, mate," said a Folkestone grocer. "My father and my grandfather used to talk about it, too."

The mouth of the proposed "chunnel" would be in the pleasant Folkestone suburb of Cheriton on the Kent coast, but residents there seem unworried about possible adverse effects on the community from increased traffic and noise.

Derek Burnett, secretary of the Channel Tunnel Opposition Association, says it is impossible to arouse people to the environmental dangers of the "big ditch."

"The reason is simple," he says. "Nobody believes anything they hear about it."

The latest round of muted channel discussion follows a government "green paper" earlier this week saying construction of the Anglo-French project would begin in 1975 if agreement was reached this year.

Ho-hum, says The Guardian newspaper. "The tunnel project will soon be 200 years old and in its present form it has been in a state of suspended animation for the best part of 13 years."

MAY PRESS AHEAD

Nevertheless, the Conservative government appears intent this time on forcing a full-scale parliamentary debate on the project, gaining approval and signing a construction treaty with France by July.

The officially estimated cost of the tusnel is $900 million but many observers believe it will run in excess of $2.5 billion.

"Very probably a grave mistake," thunders The Times, giving serious and detailed attention to the project.

The newspaper concedes that the tunnel "is not necessarily a bad thing" but hastens to add: "It is not necessarily a good one either."

Specially-designed, high-speed trains would hurtle back and forth through the tunnel, running every four minutes in peak periods and carrying all types of vehicles as well as individual passengers.

Marijuana Seized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Police in the city of Culiacan in western Mexico seized 28 tons of marijuana in one of the biggest drug hauls ever made in Mexico, the attorney-general's office said Thursday. The drug was found in an empty shop of a fertilizer company, a official statement said. It said two vehicles with secret compartments were confiscated and five persons were being held in an investigation.

Shooting Charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury returned a 10-count indictment Thursday charging three young Washington men with the Jan. 30 robbery and shooting of Senator John Stennis (Dem. Miss.). Stennis is in hospital recovering. The charges were against Derick Holloway, 18; Tyrone Marshall, 19; and his brother John Marshall, 21. The three are in custody.

$150,000 HOUSE HAS GLASS WALLS

TORONTO (CP) — People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

That old saying might soon have literal meaning if a model house to be exhibited at the National Home Show here next month is representative of the future.

The house is valued at $150,000, and of course the property to put it on would be extra.

Reflection 73, as the house is called, is a flat-roofed, one-storey, 10-room one.

At 6,400 square feet, it has more than four times the living space of today's average house.

Architect Richard H. Baggley said persons occupying the house wouldn't be living in a fish bowl. The mirrored glass exterior prevents people from seeing in during the daylight hours. But at night, if the interior is alight, the situation would be different.

But Mr. Baggley said the interior is flexible. Partitions can be moved to make rooms larger or smaller and also to give more privacy. Interior walls are not made of glass.

The architect said Thursday that if no one offers to buy the house at the show, April 6-14, it will be dismantled.

Miracle Coating Replaces House Painting
—ON ANY SURFACE—
NOW! Another Space Age Miracle . . .
ASBESTEX SINCE 1932
GUARANTEED TO PROTECT YOUR HOME FOR 20 YEARS!
The national manufacturers have now appointed NEVER PAINT AGAIN, B.C. LTD., as the only EXCLUSIVE distributors and applicators for Vancouver Island, and ASBESTEX thus becomes available to help Vancouver Island home-owners to eliminate the costly process of repainting.
ASBESTEX insulates, beautifies and protects for over 20 YEARS, it weatherproofs and is available in over 3,000 colours.
APPLIED WITH A GUN
ASBESTEX is applied with heavy duty spray equipment under high pressures. It fuses itself to any wall surface to a thickness of up to 20 TIMES thicker than ordinary paint.
ELIMINATES PAINTING
Since 1933, over a million buildings have been coated and ASBESTEX is thus the outcome of field laboratory tests by qualified chemists and 40 years of continuous research, which has now provided the ultimate in exterior coatings and most attractive exterior surfacing modern science can create.
ECONOMICAL
ASBESTEX is not a new product, but the cost has been so prohibitive up until a few years ago, that only large industries and corporations have had the means to use it. Thanks to the advancement in chemical technology, new powerful super spraying equipment, automated faster manufacturing processes and larger volume, ASBESTEX is now only ONE-THIRD the cost of what it used to be.
FACTORY GUARANTEED
Every ASBESTEX job is registered and factory guaranteed for 20 YEARS against peeling, chipping and flaking. ASBESTEX is the only coating with this UNQUALIFIED GUARANTEE.

Getting Back to the Earth? Grace Firth Never Left

By KENNETH TURAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Grace Firth can, should the occasion arise, pickle watermelon rind, make coffee out of persimmon seeds or coax wine out of carrots, rhubarb, rose petals and a dozen other plants. She can even pot roast a beaver's tail and fricassee a turtle, but looks upset if you seem impressed. "This is so simple," she says pleadingly. "If people only knew how simple."

People are trying to find out. Getting back to what it's all about, to the things that really count, to the LAND for heaven's sake, has become a bit of a North American mania. Mrs. Firth doesn't have to go back. Mrs. Firth never left.

"I just skipped a generation," she says simply. An extremely animated, 50-year-old woman siting in a cozy house in Vienna, Va., she looks totally unlike anyone who was once up to her armpits in frigid moose. "There's no memory about it for me. I just did it. It was part of me."

No Other Life

Raised by her grandparents in Missouri and later living nine years in Alaska, Mrs. Firth learned endlessly about the earth and its foods, about how to take almost any plant, fruit and vegetable known to man, even cattail plants and scurvy grass, and either grow it or gather it and eventually turn it into something good to eat.

Even when she came to live in suburban Virginia in 1955, she persevered. "What other life do I return to? she asks. "Do I look across the street and aspire to the country club life, or do I go back to the life I remember with happiness?"

On the side, Mrs. Fir th wrote, or attempted to write, the Great American Eskimo novel. A publisher suggested she deal with her own experiences instead, but Mrs. Firth rebelled. "They wanted some dumb kind of autobiography," she says, still riled. "I hate ego, oh God, how I hate it."

However "six or seven unpublished Eskimo novels later," she relented a bit and the result was a book, A Natural Year, in which it is proposed that you too can can mincemeat, and make lima bean bread. Honest.

Easy-Going Game

"It's not a rigid game, it's an easygong game, such an easygoing thing," says Mrs. Firth, eternally surprised that anyone should think making your own mead is the least bit difficult. "People see all these beautiful gardens in magazines, perfect, not a weed in them, and they say, 'I can't do that.' Well in life it's not like that, you don't do everything perfect. You just don't have time."

Furthermore, says Mrs. Firth, "you don't need all sorts of fancy equipment; people are always trying to sell you all kinds of complicated things you don't need." For applesauce, for example, all you must have is a cheap source of apples, a knife, a bucket and a pan, some bottles and —"your big investment" — a $4 canner.

Does she herself have a lot of dishes? Oh no, she says, producing a pot without a handle, an old iron skillet and utensils that look as though they may have found their way down several generations. She is not fancy about preparation either; she cooks in a oven with a broken door and worries over what would happen "if the Galloping Gourmet ever saw me doing things."

Grace unearths spuds

Though her cellar contains tidy jars of preserved apples, peaches, green beans, cabbage, relish, mincemeat, jams, pears and even okra, she is apologetic about its lack of riches, blaming Hurricane Agnes' damage at the family's country place in Culpeper, Va., for the alleged dearth. "I am not any kind of fancy person," she says emphatically. "I really don't think all of this is anything special."

This knack of making food out of anything at all comes from Mrs. Firth's grandfather, a Missouri cooper known to all as Uncle Steve. Uncle Steve was a strong believer in planting by astrology, wouldn't plant during the watery sign of Cancer for fear it wouldn't dry, and felt unequivocally that "God created turnips to sweeten hogmeat."

Lifestyle Scorned

"He did all these things and didn't even think about them," Mrs. Firth remembers: "He was a very relaxed and easygoing man. No matter how much he did, he always seemed to have time."

After a while, however, Uncle Steve's way of life fell into disrepute. "At some time in America's development, people came to look down at the rural," says Mrs. Firth, a bit unhappy. "Everyone aspires to be better, to the image of pushbuttons and a couple of cars. They moved to the city."

Mrs. Firth did pot. "There's nothing like seeing something grow," she says. "It's like going to church every Sunday. It sort of stabilizes you.

"There's a hope when you put break down. It's not only food, it's a growing thing, a giving thing, a hope for tomorrow. It's very meaningful — oh, I hate that word — but it does give you a faith in our earth, and by God we need that."

Need Stressed

This feeling for the land is so strong in Mrs. Firth it scares her sometimes. "When you gather something the earth has given you," she says, "you respect and love it more. We should begin reverencing the earth, really realizing what we've got here. People need, they need a feeling of belonging to the earth."

With the people who have returned, "disillusioned," Mrs. Firth says, "with the plasticity, the artificiality of all the goodies," she has a feeling of kinship that is not quite total. "It's okay as long as it's not too far out," says the woman who wrote that no LSD fantasy she's heard of could compare with the multicolored dreams experienced after eating a pint of pickled herring in sour cream at bedtime. "Sometimes they tend to overdo it at first, to sort of go whole hog. I wouldn't want to live on sesame seeds and things all the time."

For Mrs. Firth believes we should take advantage of man's technical powers, partaking of instant foods and overflowing freezers whenever appropriate, for "sometimes nature needs a little help." A moderate use of pesticides is okay by her, as is the killing of animals for food. But she is infuriated by abusive slaughter and once ran 3½ miles to get away from a companion who shot an eagle for sport. "I begged him not to," she says. "I even tried to pull the gun away. I couldn't stand it."

With all she knows, isn't there anything, anything at all, that Mrs. Firth has trouble with? Well, yes. "You know how you have to put money in a pay phone for long distance calls? It's sort of nervous for me. It's almost a crisis in my life."

Volunteers Needed For Jogger Trail

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Spring and the fitness ethic . . .

But tip-toeing through the tulips can bring this kind of retort from your local parksman:

"Keep offa the tulips, you little jogger!"

So Saanich parks attendant Howard Williams has a plan to enlist volunteers to help him build an off-beat jogging track at Beaver Lake Park, probably next winter.

At nominal cost — he estimates $200, mostly for materials — Williams figures to make a six-foot wide path through the trees around a sixth of a mile circuit behind the Wooded Wonderland.

It would be screened from the public areas of the park and afford serious joggers a natural setting to do their heel-and-toe circuits.

Most of the work would involve clearing undergrowth from the proposed route at Beaver Lake, which Williams said would not mean wholesale tree-cutting.

He's counting on enough interest and support from the jogging community to volunteer most of the labor required.

If he plans it carefully he could work it into the jogger's schedule:

First five minutes — jogging on the spot.
Next 10 minutes — swing brush hook.
Next five minutes — jog.
Next 10 minutes — rake slash.
Next five — jog.
Next 10 — calisthenics to straighten out kinks.

Harrison thinks timber slab signposts would make attractive markers for exercise stations spotted along the track about 150 feet apart. At the first could be a chinning bar, then a leap-frog post, a set of steps, an overhead ladder for swinging by the arms and finally a station for pushups.

If the jogger feels like doing some real roadwork after a couple of turns around the track he can use the lake trail which starts at the south end of Beaver Lake and reaches for five miles around the north end of Elk Lake and back down the east bank by Patricia Bay Highway.

That's if he hasn't crumpled into the bush to nurse a Charleyhorse. But as long as he keeps off the tulips . . .

IODE REGENT KEPT IN OFFICE

Members of Victoria Municipal Chapter IODE re-elected Mrs. C. C. Risch as regent at their annual meeting this week in Holyrood House.

The chapter also installed as officers Mrs. Lance Muirhead, first vice-president; Mrs. Roy Smillie, second vice-regent; Mrs. Elsie Lowthian, secretary and Echoes secretary; Mrs. Alan McFarlane, assistant secretary; Miss Joan French, treasurer; Mrs. V. H. V. Shepperd, organizing secretary; Miss Christine MacNab, education secretary; Mrs. Basil Shaw, services; Mrs. A. J. T. Laundy, public relations and standard bearer and Mrs. Smillie, citizenship.

The chapter received and spent more than $6,000 in 1972.

Oak Bay Slates Centre Talks

Oak Bay's special recreation committee will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers to discuss plans for the proposed recreation centre near the Oak Bay junior high school.

This will be the first meeting of the committee to be open to both the public and the press.

From Grace's Kitchen:

BAKED APPLE BUTTER

10 lbs. of peeled, cored and quartered apples and enough water to cover
1½ quarts of cider
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon cloves
1 tablespoon nutmeg
5 lbs. sugar

Simmer the apples in a large pot, with enough water to cover, until they reach sauce consistency. Stir in the cider, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and sugar. Pour the mixture into an enameled roasting pan. Cover. Cook in a 350-degree oven, stirring occassionally, until the mixture boils. Once it boils, turn the oven down to 250 degrees and let bake for five hours, or overnight. Ladle the thick apple butter into sterilized jars and seal them for storage.

UNCLE STEVE'S MULLIGAN STEW

"A lively, flavorful, soft-as-velvet drink"

1 gallon (total) of chopped parsnips, carrots, turnips and whole beets, washed.
1 cake of yeast
5 lbs. sugar
6 raw apples
3 potatoes
2 oranges
1 piece of ginger root
Raisins, figs, prunes to taste

Boil the washed parsnips, carrots, turnips and beets in 2½ gallons of water until soft. Let cool. When lukewarm, squeeze and discard the vegetables. Dissolve the cake of yeast in one cup of warm water and add it to the vegetable liquid. Add the sugar. Chop but do not peel the apples, potatoes and oranges, then add them to the elixir of vegetables and yeast. Beat a piece of the ginger root with a wooden mallet and pop it into the stew, along with any raisins, figs or prunes you might have on hand.

Cover the Mulligan and let it sit for two weeks. Stir and press with a wooden paddle periodically. Then strain. Throw away the fruits. Let the liquid settle for a day, then siphon off the clear liquid and bottle it. Cork lightly each container after you drop a small piece of ginger in each. When fermentation has stopped and the corks stay down, it is sealed. The longer your wait to sample the brew, the better the taste. Store at least one month.

Wilson's great look for spring 1973 . . .

Sometimes you can't see the woods for the trees . . . so upon our return from Hawaii last week we decided the best way of being brought up to date on what was doing at Wilson's was to attend that perfectly marvellous fashion show they staged for Norfolk House School . . . and perhaps tell you about a few of the clothes which pleased us, as well as the appreciative audience . . . A red, white and blue tweed suit . . . with matching full-length topcoat, by Henry White of Dublin, drew much applause . . . as did the Mayfair wool suit in a delicate shade of yellow . . . box pleated skirt and buttons in the shape of tiny metal flowers . . . Noticed quite a bit of red, by the way . . . It seems to be a big color for spring . . . along with green, yellow and other sunny shades . . . Yummy is the only word to describe the 100% pure cashmere wraparound coat in a cocoa color . . . or the cloud-light mohairs . . . one in beige over coral . . . the other pure white with mandarin collar . . . this latter great for evening wear . . . We love the Cisanella ensemble in avocado and white knit . . . Coat in a windowpane check, plain avocado dress trimmed with matching plaid . . . A Miss Style raincoat of navy Egyptian cotton embroidered with pink and white fishes . . . and an eye-stopper if ever we saw one! . . . Crisp, easy-fitting shirt dresses and striped Helanca travel dresses are another part of Wilson's casually elegant look . . . Drop in soon and see the great new clothes for spring at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

A general shortage of all natural fabrics is partly responsible for the increased price of clothing this year.

New line of Italian shoes . . .

Munday's, too, showed some of their beautiful shoes at this same fashion show . . . among them several models of a new line called" Famolare" which Mr. Munday had shown us at the store the day previous . . These Famolare shoes, produced in different Italian factories, are co-ordinated by one designer under the Famolare name . . . Very finely made, they come in two price ranges . . . $33 to $44 . . . and around $28 . . . In the first category are "Giovanna" . . . an open back and toe with a curved opening to follow the line of the toes . . . white or navy kid as well as black patent . . . "Mimi", a high fronted shoe with open toe and back, and an inside platform . . . calculated to please the conservative woman who likes simple styling and the platform look . . . White or bone kid . . . "Anzia" is a white kid or black patent stripping sandal . . . very dainty . . . and "Lisa" is a spectator with a difference in that the heel and open toe are white while the rest of the shoe is colored . . . in this case either navy or rust suede . . . A beautifully fitting shoe, we're told . . . In the less expensive range, you'll find "Sole" a casual sandal with wide straps punched and bound with raffia . . . white or navy kid . . . and "Mare", another sandal with wide T strap styling and the basket-weave look in white or beige . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Canada is fast rivalling Italy as supplier of quality ready-to-wear women's wear to the U.S. market.

Fine Bohemian crystal and porcelain . . .

We're still picking bits of excelsior out of our hair after penetrating the nether regions of Sydney Reynolds and watching them unpack the latest arrivals from Europe . . . crystal and fine china from Czechoslovakia . . . the Bohemia of good King Wenceslaus and all those romantic operettas! . . . Before we get down to specifics we want you to know that Mr. Reynolds was farsighted enough to get this big order in early before the dollar devaluation . . . and as a consequence, everything in the shipment is very reasonably priced . . . Now, here's what we saw coming out of those packing cases . . . The most fantastic continental porcelain coffee sets . . . pot, sugar and creamer, six demi-tasse cups and saucers, in five different floral patterns . . . just $18! . . . One of these would make a very nice wedding gift, we thought . . . Then ther's all kinds of beautiful heavy hand-cut crystal pieces . . . Vases, bowls, sugars and creams and jugs . . . the latter in several different sizes . . . Same for the vases which range from miniature bud vases to some around 18" tall . . . Reynolds also got a special buy on Bohemian colored crystal wine decanters ($25 now . . . $40 next time around!) . . . and Liqueurs in various colors to be sold at just $6 each . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-3931.

Rub a little perfumed bath oil into your body and on the backs of your hands . . . it's more potent than perfume itself.

Just what you need for that hallway! . . .

Looking for something to dress up your hallway . . . maybe a very narrow one? . . . Then we saw just the thing to fit the bill . . . the teak, blond oak or rosewood hall mirrors with little wall shelves or small tables at the Lighthouse . . . Both shelves and tables have little drawers in which you can keep gloves or other odds and ends . . . Some are plain . . . but most of them are decorated with tiles, either dark blue or brown . . . There's a beautiful rosewood table and mirror with inlaid copper . . . These mirrors and tables come in two sizes . . . the latter with either one or two drawers . . . so that no matter what the size or width of your hall, you'll find one in perfect proportion . . . Really handsome pieces, these . . . and quite different from anything else you'll see . . . So do go in and have a look at them . . . Poly-optical lamps have always fascinated us ever since we first saw one in the home of one of our dear ones . . . so you could hardly tear us away from the charming poly-opticals newly arrived at the Lighthouse! . . . Some of the smaller ones are battery operated . . . and would make charming table centrepieces . . . Others would be lovely on a TV or wherever . . . All sorts of bases . . . and tops that look like little fountains or trees . . . Every one is a conversation piece . . . And if by some chance you don't know what a poly-optic is . . . the Lighthouse people will be happy to show you . . . What's more, these intriguing lamps now come with a guarantee! . . . The Lighthouse, 1005 Broad St., 383-6633.

Pink, powder blue, yellow . . . these are the pretty feminine cruisewear shades which carry over into spring.

Gorgeous glass . . .

Visiting the Handloom again after a month's absence was sheer delight! . . . For one thing they were proudly displaying some gorgeous hand-blown glass pieces by local artist Mel Munsen . . . Mostly vases and bowls . . . some crystal clear and highly polished . . . Some sand blasted . . . some a combination of both . . . like the beautiful little rose bowl which Mrs. Higgin considers one of the lovellest things she has in the shop . . . Then there's a vase which looks as if it had greenery growing right in the crystal . . . rather difficult to describe, but you can take our word for it that colors and shapes are nothing short of gorgeous! . . . We got in on the unpacking of a lots of smashing catalogne shoulder bags from Quebec . . . Three sizes in these . . . a big roomy one which could be used as an overnight bag, just $16.95 . . . Medium size at $12.95 . . . and smaller bags with handles for around $6.95 . . . There's a fine selection of hand tooled and tinted leather belts to add sparkle to skirts or pants . . . A couple of adorable rag dolls from Nova Scotia . . . Every stitch of "Bozo the Clown" and "Hannah Whitney", a Loyalist doll . . . is hand done and this includes the clothes which are all removable . . . Any little girl . . . and some not so little . . . would go into raptures over one of these dolls . . . We'd even like one ourself! . . . The Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

A gentle rubbing with fine sandpaper or emery will remove spots and crusts from suede.

Shop now for summer! . . .

We've always maintained that the best time to buy summer dresses is long before summer actually makes its appearance . . . and this is borne out by the outstanding collection of summer dresses we saw at Charmante's the other day . . . We suppose they really got them in early for the benefit of women travelling to warmer climes . . . but smart stay-at-homes are snapping them up to make the local scene once the balmy days are upon us . . . Anyhow we were delighted with Charmante's summer dresses . . . Most all in easy-care, washable fabrics, and styles to rate a second or third look any time, anywhere! And whether you like a sleeveless dress, a short-sleeved one . . . or prefer you arms completely covered . . . you'll find a style to please you in this lovely dress shop! . . . We saw Ports blouses in practically any color you can think of . . . A very good selection of skirts in lightweight tweeds . . . plaids, plains, checks and camelhair . . . Good-looking patterned jersey suits from England . . . Lightweight wool pantsuits for spring . . . as well as co-ordinates with which you can put together your own as the fancy strikes you . . . A big variety of pant tops and some darling little shirred cotton sun tops such as you'll see in the latest edition of Vogue . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-1545.

Cruising . . the relaxing way to visit Hawaii . . .

It's enough to make a girl want to turn right round and head back to Paradise . . . the news of three upcoming sea cruises to Hawaii which Paulin's told us about when we went in to report our safe return home! . . . If there's anything to beat flying . . . it has to be cruising . . . and these three cruises in May and June, aboard the P&O's Oronsay and Arcadia, come at a perfect time for sailing the Pacific because the weather at sea will be good . . . and with school so close to ending, you could probably take the family along . . . Cruises aboard the Oronsay leave Vancouver May 21 and June 4, and last for 14 and 17 days respectively . . . The Arcadia cruise, sailing June 21 is for 18 days . . . and along with cruise 2, takes you to Honolulu, LaHaina, Kailua-Kona, Hilo and San Francisco . . . Here's the perfect way to relax, and really see the Islands in all their glory . . . Oahu, "The Gathering Place" . . . Maui, "The Best" Hawaii, "The Big Island" . . . Promises to be a gloriously exciting holiday . . . not too long and not too expensive . . . Two berth cabins start at $440 per person for the 14-day cruise . . . and this includes everything except shore trips, because your ship is your hotel . . . If you'd like to cruise to Hawaii . . . have a thrilling sea voyage . . . Get in touch with Paulin's right away because it's our hunch there'll be a great demand for bookings on each one of these three P&O cruises . . . Paulin Travel, 1006 Government St., 382-9168.

Ottawa Moves Towards Ingredients on Labels

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is taking first steps in a major trend to require all food products to list their ingredients on the label.

New food and drug regulations passed last week by order-in-council called for sausages, meat loaf, meat rolls, luncheon meats and the like to carry complete lists of ingredients on the label even though they are covered under the food regulations.

Dr. D. G. Chapman, chief of the health department's food directorate, said in an interview Thursday the department is "moving toward lists on the labels of all foods," even those covered in the regulations, which were previously exempt.

Consumers want to know, he said. "Not only that, we feel they are entitled to know."

The new regulations apply only to sausage meat and luncheon meats containing additional fruit, vegetables, nuts, cheese or processed cheese, macaroni, pickle or olives.

Other new regulations under the same section allowed the addition of these ingredients — something that had never been in the federal regulations before.

As well, the new regulations had minor changes in wording to ensure the meat products with such things added as fruit, nuts would meet the same standards as other meat products.

"The meat portion may not contain more than four-per-cent filler," Chapman explained. This is regardless of the amount of additional material used.

Previously-passed regulations limited sausages and luncheon meats to four-per-cent filler.

The new ones ensure that the meat-cereal ration will remain the same, he said.

The federal legislation appears to be along the same lines as new United States rules announced last week which are bringing in much stricter regulations about labelling, including listing actual percentages of ingredients rather than just a list in order of amounts.

The Commons special committee on food prices also has been demanding more information on labels — including a listing of ingredients such as proposed now by the health department.

As well, commmittee members have suggested that the nutritional values of the foods should be included on the label.

Chastity Clause Qualifies Women's Laws

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian laws which seem to protect women, in reality protect only chastity, Toronto lawyer Stanley Gersham said Monday.

He told 88 teen-aged students gathered for two-day seminar on sex, sponsored by Planned Parenthood of Toronto, that laws protecting women from sexual relations in certain age categories carry the qualifying clause that the woman must be of chaste character.

In theory, the law seems to punish the man, he said. A man can be charged for having sexual intercourse with a woman employee under 21, who is under his supervision, or a female under 16 even though he may think she is older.

But he can defend himself by saying the young woman was not chaste or showed a disposition to lewdness or that she was chiefly to blame for the act.

He asked whether the law is realistic in the high value it places on chastity.

"Should consent, at least for a woman 16 or over, not be enough?"

The laws reflect a society compelled to restrict sexual activity, he said, but with modern contraception "perhaps we should take a different view of sex."

Gershman also questioned the attitude of the law about women who become pregnant.

"The law seems perfectly willing to impose pregnancy upon a woman as punishment for her sexual act when it restricts her right to an abortion."

The conference, called Sex A to Z, was open to every high school student in Metro. Sixty-five girls and 23 boys attended Monday and some of their questions reflected their lack of knowledge.

One girl asked Gershman what chastity meant.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I live 350 miles from my young sister who is 13. She wrote me and told me she is being bothered by a "funny uncle." This same uncle tried the same thing with me and my two older sisters when we lived at home. My parents knew about it at the time, but they never seemed to care or think it was serious. Anyway, this uncle is still allowed in our house.

I wrote to my sister and told her to tell a school counselor, a minister or a policeman about what's going on, but she says she feels so ashamed and guilty. I wish I could make her understand that it's not her fault, and that there is no reason for her to feel guilty.

I feel so helpless and frustrated. Is there anything I can do from here? Big Sister

DEAR SISTER: Persuade your young sister to report this "funny uncle" to the juvenile authorities immediately. And just to cover all the bases, she should tell her school counselor about him. I can't imagine your parents being so calm and unconcerned.

DEAR ABBY: Lots of folks write to tell you that you were wrong, but I am writing to tell you that you were right. Also to say that I am sorry I didn't take the advice you gave me back in 1960 when I asked you what to do about a husband who used to beat me up so bad he's put me in the hospital.

You said: "Get rid of him, Honey, before he maims you for life."

Well, I didn't get rid of him. I took him back and gave him another chance. And I hate to tell you how many more beatings and chances there were after that.

Finally, on the night of June 17, 1972, we had another bad fight. My brother happened to come by at the time, and he tried to help me, but my husband shot and killed my brother on the spot. He also put a bullet through my rib case, shot a part of my right arm off, fractured my skull, gave me a concussion and broke my ear drum. The cops came in and killed him while he was trying to escape.

Even though I was in the intensive care unit for weeks, I am still alive, but like you told me back in 1960, someday that man would maim me for life. And he did. — Should Have Listened.

Hollandaise . . . A Cinch to Make

By MARY MOORE

Too many cooks are timid about making Hollandaise sauce so I am giving the foolproof method for the benefit of young cooks. It may be stored in the refrigerator, well covered, for as long as a week. You can have a ball serving it on vegetables such as cauliflower, broccoli, spinach, asparagus or artichokes. Or make the elgant Eggs Benedict for Sunday morning breakfast.

HOLLANDAISE

1 c. melted butter (or ½ c. each butter and margarine)
4 egg yolks
½ tsp. salt shake of cayenne
2 tbsp. lemon juice

Gently melt the butter (or butter and margarine) and cool down to room temperature. It should still be in a liquid state.

In beater bowl beat egg yolks until thick and pale. Add salt and cayenne. Beating on "high" to well-beaten egg yolks add cooled down melted butter slowly, 1 teaspoon at a time. Be sure each teaspoon of liquid butter is blended in before continuing with next teaspoon. After each four teaspoons add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and continue slowly until all of each is used. You may have to scrape mixture up from bottom with rubber spatula if the bottom of your beater bowl is broad.

This method for a cold Hollandaise eliminates the risk of curdling which is the trouble of many Hollandaise makers.

When done turn into a glass serving dish, cover carefully with saran and store in refrigerator. Use from it as a sauce on your dinner vegetables.

What has 100 relatives, whistles a musical kloo-loo-loo and is a delight to the observer? I am of course referring to the "Blue Jay" a beautiful bird which can be seen in most parts of Canada.

This eight-page pamphlet describes the blue jay and its behaviour. Interestingly, the bird's feathers are not really blue. The colour results from light refraction due to a peculiar structure of the feather substance. When the feather is crushed, the blue disappears.

Equally absorbing is the eight-page folder that describes another winsome bird, the "Chickadee". One distinguishing feature of this species is its long, dark-grey tail that looks like a handle. The chickadee makes various twittering sounds. The best known is the "Chicka-dee-dee-dee" which has given the bird its name.

The courtship habits of the chickadee as described in this pamphlet are fascinating, so is the paragraph about the bird's social relations. Chickadees establish a 'pecking-order' in which each bird ranks according to his degree of aggressiveness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some long-range plans could be blocked by older individual. Key now is to get files, correspondence, reservations in order. Take nothing for granted. Have fact at hand. You are likely to be challenged.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Changes are necessary in connection with payments, collections, general budget. Do some personal analyzing. Find reasons why — reject the superficial. Gemini, Virgo persons could be featured. Be more flexible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Problem could exist in connection with mate, business partner. Your best course is one of diplomacy. Don't force issues. Let others reveal their plans, aspirations. By being a good listener, you can make gains.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Draw line between being agreeable and naive. One you are associated with tends to take you for granted. Put a stop to this in firm but fair manner. Accent is on working conditions, general welfare.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dealings with children may be marred by disagreements. Be mature. Give a little without "giving in." Intelligent concession is key. Question of money arises, specifically in area of loan or allowance. Check record.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-SEPT. 22): If conditions seem "blocked" it is because a phase of activity or relationship has completed cycle. Know it and react accordingly. It would be foolish to hang on to past. Prepare for a new, brighter phase.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Relatives could appear obstinate, especially the older ones. Key now is to be original, independent, without appearing arrogant. Leo is involved. Hold off on visits, short trips if possible. Don't try doing too much at one sitting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money situation may be tight, but this is temporary. One who appears indifferent is merely tense. Know it and respond in sympathetic manner. Aquarius, Leo persons are in picture. Refuse to be possessed by possessions.

SAGGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pressure is apt to be exerted by mate, partner in connection with special agreement. Check fine print. Don't scatter forces. Talks with Sagittarian are indicated. What appears an adversity could boomerang in your favor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go slow. Steady pace is best for concrete results. Aquarius, Leo persons figure prominently. Stick to what you know. Don't try to make something from nothing. Assess what you fear actually lacks substance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends may appear solemn. Key is to offer suggestion without expecting enthusiastic response. Maintain sense of humor but don't appear to be ridiculing others. Many around you now are supersensitive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Outline goals to one who cares, especially family member. You are on the right path despite apparent obstacle. Individual in position of authority will eventually relent. Taurus, Libra persons are involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, introspective, about to embark upon phase of activity which could involve more travel than usual. May should be one of your most significant months of 1973. You draw to you many who are born under Pisces.

Forecast for Monday, March 26

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on change which puts you in favorable light with professional superior. Means some of your aspirations come close to fulfillment. Gemini, Virgo persons could play prominent roles. Accept special assignment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar aspect now coincides with education, willingness to learn and ability to communicate. Key is to express yourself in meaningful manner. Travel is on agenda. Status quo is shaken. Accept opportunity to revitalize.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What appears obvious may have nooks and crannies. Know behind the scenes. Legacy, money belonging to others is featured. Pisces person is in picture. Refuse to be possessed by possessions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Contract is presented. You may be in position to sign profitable agreement. Relationship with one close to you is cemented by common interest. Joint effort is more likely to succeed than lone effort.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Maintain steady pace—stay on course. Veering too far from what is familiar would be an error. Aries is involved. Finish current assignment. Associate is testing. Reporting. Mesns. Know it and comport self accordingly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent is on creativity — your own insights are of paramount importance. Your feelings, personal drives are spotlighted. Personal magnetism soars. Opposite sex is drawn to you. Imprint your style. Be original and definite.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Build on solid base. Discard rumors; go after factual information. One who disagrees with you could possibly become a valuable ally. Know it and don't burn your bridges. Aquarian is much in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You investigate, take short trip; exchange ideas with close neighbors, relatives. You are active and sense of humor comes into play. Don't rush. Many now offer much. Key is to be selective. You have right to quality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Talk money. Don't be put off by one who attempts to hid central issues in maze of details. Be frank. Speak your mind. One in position to fulfill request does want to hear the truth. Act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle is such that you can successfully begin, initiate projects. Stress independence of thought, action. Lead rather than follow. Throw aside false modesty. Say what you mean—mean what you say.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Luxury item for home is requested by family member. Be receptive. Give what you can— don't overburden yourself with more than you can afford. Quiet talk can culminate in agreeable situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some of your fondest hopes and wishes can become realities. Key is to separate fact from illusion. Your intuition serves now as reliable guide. Confidence in yourself is essential. Friend will prove worth.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have powerful creative drive. You are capable of organizing, bringing together persons able to get a job done. You are direct, a pioneer and an innovator. April will be your most important month of 1973.

Backward Look Into the Crystal

By ART STOTT

(Art Stott, a native son of Victoria, is associate editor of the Victoria Times.)

A not-so-young romantic looks at the pictures and catches himself humming the tune, An Old Fashioned Song to a Young Sophisticated Lady. The pictures belong to Owen Fowler and show him in various stages of youth with the bands for which he played drums in town.

They emerge, along with a dance program yellowed by age, at mention of the earlier days of the Crystal Garden. For those just short of Old Age Pension, or those who have recently started to collect it, the souvenirs launch a journey into sentimentality.

One of the photographs shows Zala's orchestra in the special shell built for the bands because original acoustics were less than satisfactory under the Crystal's leaky glass roof.

Wires were strung between girders to help, but whether they did more than hang up divers giving special displays from the rafters is the question. Certainly, when Ivo Henderson and his boys were playing in the North Ballroom in the Garden's opening season, the reverberations were interesting. Some — if not all — of the echo disappeared when they glassed the dancing area in that section off from the pool.

And given a good crowd, there wasn't much complaint when the general traffic swung to the South Ballroom in that innovative development which saw the floor laid on rubber to make it springier.

Crowds changed. Bands came and bands went — Billy Tickle, Bert Zala, Len Acres among them.

Owen, who played with many of the groups, though not always at the Garden, moved too.

His highly prized and age-yellowed dance program tells part of the story of an era when the Charleston made its debut here, preceding the Black Bottom and before the Conga line and Boomps-a-Daisy migrated from England.

Its face carries the emblem of the Britannia Branch, Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League, which sponsored one of the balls in honor of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales. The date is August 20, 1927.

Owen treasures it partly because George Ozard, the bandleader for whom he was working at the time, was called out of town and left to Owen the responsibility of drawing up the numbers. They flow like the wine of memory — Dreaming, Idolizing, Hello Cutie, Land of Glad Tomorrow, Doll Dance, Honolulu Moon, It All Depends on You, A Lane in Spain, Vagabond King Waltz, Ain't She Sweet? I Wonder How I Look When I'm Asleep, Russian Lullaby, Deed I Do, Blue Skies, If You See Sally, Charmaine, There's Everything Nice About You and Me and My Shadow.

The melodies float on a stream of recollection, spangled with the stardust of youth and the lovely girls of a past era when the waltz and the fox trot were interspersed only by the one-step.

The Prince of Wales? He was everybody's Prince Charming before he became "Uncle David" and when Wally was an unknown for future recognition. And 1927? That was a time when a dinner jacket, tailored to measure, cost about $45 and wore like iron, tickets to the big dances with elegant suppers went for $5 a couple, the world was serene and the Wall Street crash was a full two years ahead.

"Blue skies, shining on me, nothing but blue skies do I see."

'One in Four' Cancer Bound

VANCOUVER (CP) — One-quarter of all the people living in British Columbia are going to develop cancer, the provincial chairman of the cancer control committee, Dr. D. H. Williams, said this week.

"Two out of three families will experience the tragedy of cancer in their midst," Williams told delegates attending the 31st annual conference of the Canadian Cancer Society's B.C. and Yukon Division.

In 1969, a committee for the review of cancer care in B.C. was appointed jointly by the provincial health minister and the B.C. cancer foundation with Williams as chairman.

He said the committee has recommended to the provincial government that the B.C. Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation be expanded.

"It will be a multi-million dollar project to put all 49 recommendations made by our committee and approved by the goveernment into action and it will take several years," he said.

In B.C. one out of every six deaths is caused by cancer.

"We receive 6,500 new notifications of cancer each year and 3,000 people die in this province from cancer each year," said the doctor.

Williams said: "We don't even have the epidemiologist in this field in the province who can provide us with the vital information and statistics we need to reduce the number of deaths through effective regional programs."

"There has got to be a team approach — doctors, radiologists, nurses, physiotherapists, consultants, volunteers and families themselves getting involved," he said.

Looters, Smugglers Threaten Buried Art

NEW YORK (AP) — The New Yorker Magazine says looting and smuggling of art objects is so widespread that "by the end of the century all unexplored major archeological sites may be irrevocably disfigured or ravaged."

In the first of a three-part series beginning in the March 24 issue, Karl E. Mayer says that museums, dealers and collectors, many buying art for investment, are encouraging the illegal removal of art objects by paying high prices without asking where the art works come from.

Throughout the world, Meyer writes, sites holding secrets of the history of man are endangered both by looters and by "industrial and real estate development."

"As a result of both deliberate looting and the expansion of civilization," the magazine says, "the material remains of the past are being churned up at an unprecedented rate."

Meyer says that "the pre-Columbian field is a prime example of what might be called a 'growth market' in art."

"Forty years ago, the market scarcely existed but today it lures scores of dealers and thousands of collectors. Most of the art comes from three areas—Mexico, Central America, and the Andean republics of South America—and nearly all of it has been smuggled out of the countries of origin."

An increase of interest in American Indian art and high prices paid at recent major auctions have had "disastrous consequences for scholarship," Meyer says.

"The stimulous of the art market has made ancient sites the targets of an unexampled assault by looters armed with shovels, bulldozers and even dynamite," Meyer says.

HEAVE-HO and crew members of HMCS St. Croix take the strain, lowering their captain, Cmdr. R. L. Donaldson, over the side to a waiting whaler, in which he will be rowed ashore for the last time. Donaldson has been appointed base administration officer at CFB Esquimalt. His ship was removed from active service Dec. 19 and placed in reserve because of lack of manpower and funds. Three other ships in Halifax have been placed in reserve for the same reasons. Donaldson will not be replaced but a skeleton crew will keep St. Croix at a level that will allow short-notice reactivation should the need arise.

Foodless Arctic Trek Doesn't Scare Briton

By STEVE HUME
Edmonton Journal

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) A dogteam starving to death one by one, a foodless 60-mile walk across the snow-swept tundra to safety at a remote DEW line station, temperatures of 70 below zero.

That's the grim story that has emerged after the first leg of a former computer salesman's attempted trek by dogsled across Arctic Canada to Point Barrow, Alaska.

But it's not scaring off Colin Irwin, a 27-year-old Englishman who is a quiet, bespectacled six-footer who looks more like a university Latin scholar than an Arctic adventurer.

He's on a 2,500-mile trip that will take him through the world's most forbidding wilderness. The dogsled journey is just his way of spending an otherwise dreary winter hundreds of miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Mr. Irwin is still somewhere out on the barrens, determinedly plugging away at the second leg of his overland expedition. But the story of the first leg is still the main topic of conversation at Pelly Bay, a remote settlement of 215 people on the Arctic coast.

BEGAN MONTH AGO

More than a month ago, the lanky native of Bournemouth began his trek at Repulse Bay, a hunting and trapping settlement nestled in the bleak rocks of the western shore of Hudson Bay.

With a young Eskimo guide from Cambridge Bay and a team of nine dogs, Mr. Irwin set out across the barren lands for Pelly Bay 150 miles to the west. It was a routine overland journey that has been done by Eskimos in four days of fast travel, but usually takes just over a week of camping is snowhouses or tents along the trail.

For Mr. Irwin, the routine soon turned to nightmare.

HOLDS UP 10 DAYS

Near Committee Bay, a large body of water off the west coast of Melville Peninsula, the two men ran into heavy storms of the kind that are notorious in the Arctic for savage cold and impossible travelling conditions. Winds drive the temperatures down to chill ranges that can freeze exposed flesh in 30 seconds, and snow kicked up to altitudes as high as 2,000 feet drops visibility to zero.

The bad weather forced Mr. Irwin and his companion to hole up for 10 days, reports Father Andre Goussaert of the Roman Catholic mission at Pelly Bay.

At one point, the temperature, with no help from the wind, plunged to 72 degrees below zero.

Because of the delay, food began to run short, and by the time the party got moving again there was apparently not enough to feed both men and dogs.

With half the journey ahead of them, the huskies began to die one by one and were left along the trail until the two men had only one dog and no food.

At that point Mr. Irwin decided to abandon his sled, loaded with cameras he was using to record the treak for National Geographic magazine.

WALK 3 DAYS

The two men and the last surviving dog walked for three days without food, covering 60 miles of open tundra before reaching a DEW line station 10 miles out of Pelly Bay, Father Goussaert said.

"They were about three weeks on the trail," he said. "I don't know of anyone who has taken that long to travel from Repulse Bay to Pelly. They had really bad weather, but his guide was good, even though he was a younger man."

The two men were in good shape when they arrived at the DEW line station with their lone dog, he said.

"They got a hot meal and then came over to Pelly Bay."

In case of an emergency, Mr. Irwin is equipped with a radio beacon.

Experts in Arctic ground travel suggest the worst may be over. From now on he can hop down the DEW line along the Arctic coast. The bases are roughly 100 miles apart, which means Mr. Irwin and his dogsled will never be more than 50 miles from safety.

But other oldtimers are betting the Englishman never makes it to Point Barrow this year. He's left it too late, they say, and he'll run out of snow and sea ice when the spring breakup catches up with him off the North Slope of Alaska.

Remand Ordered In Stab Death

Roydon Gaylord Morrison, charged with the non capital murder of a 51-year-old man, was remanded in Victoria provincial court Thursday to March 26, to fix a date for a preliminary hearing.

Morrison was charged March 15 with the stabbing death of Wallace Omar Stevenson at 132 Dallas Rd.

Outside court, detectives said they are "certain" they are "certain they have the murder weapon, following analysis of several knives taken from the Dallas Road home.

Violence Threatens Belfast Education

By RICHARD NORSWORTHY

BELFAST (Reuter) — The children of violence in deeply-divided Northern Ireland are threatening the education system with collapse.

Education authorities estimate that more than 3,000 children of school age are roaming the streets of Belfast and never attend classes.

Discipline is breaking down in the classrooms and intimidation of both teachers and pupils is increasing as the almost daily violence in Belfast leaves a deep mark on social structures.

Even for those who attend school regularly, the sights and sounds of the bitter sectarian battles are never far removed.

British troops have taken over parts of some schools as barracks and observation posts. Soldiers escort both Protestant and Roman Catholic children from school to prevent sectarian attacks.

"The working class areas where most of the gun battles and riots take place are where we have the most problems," said R. J. McElroy, the city's education welfare fare chief.

FATHERS IN PRISON

"In the Catholic areas, many fathers are in prison or on the run from the police and a mother may be left to cope with five or six or more children and very little money."

When her son says he is going to school she has no way of knowing whether he goes. He may be playing truant or "going on the hike" to throw stones at British soldiers.

Teachers face a similar kind of intimidation from the older boys, and sometimes girls, at school.

"Many of these youngsters have lost all respect for authority," said one principal in the tough Bellymurphy area of Belfast. "They have lived through periods when the only law here was the Irish Republican Army. Neither police nor soldiers would enter the neighborhood."

"These children are tough," McElroy said. Most of them have battled with the troops in one way or another — some of them with guns. Authority means nothing to them.

"A teacher is very careful how he hands out discipline to these boys. When he leaves the school after work he doesn't know whether a gang will be waiting for him. And once a teacher allows himself to be bullied, the rest of the school loses respect for him and the system begins to break down."

Another reason for truancy is the presence of British troops in many of the schools.

McElroy said: "Many parents keep their children at home because of the gunmen and others because they are simply outraged that British troops should be in the area at all, especially in their children's school."

AFFECTS BOTH SIDES

For most of the 3½ years of sectarian troubles in Belfast the upsurge in truancy and hooliganism has been confined to Catholic neighborhoods.

"But when the Protestants formed their own no-go areas a few months ago and men in paramilitary uniforms set up barricades and refused to let the police in, trouble started in the Protestant schools," McElroy said.

"These children are out stoning the troops who have begun arresting their fathers."

Belfast has 70,000 children of school age and the average attendance is about 86 per cent, only a few points below the rest of Britain. But these figures are misleading, McElroy said.

"Families are intimidated out of one area into apother and we can't track them down. Therefore, they aren't on the rolls and can't be counted as truants."

TORONTO BAKER, 79 WON'T TAKE PENSION

TORONTO (CP) — John Witter, 79, who has worked as a baker for the last 50 years keeps getting tax bills from the revenue department for the old-age pension he has refused to collect.

The department contends that he owes $100 for the last tax year, apparently because he didn't list his pension as income.

But Mr. Witter, who earns $94 a week at his trade, has never claimed the pension and refuses to do so.

"The dough gets harder to knead all the time, but I'm in good health," he said.

Travel agent Andrew Banik, who fills out Mr. Witter's tax returns, said the government has saved about $7,000 because of his client's refusal to claim the pension and because he pays unemployment insurance premiums.

"I've been working as a baker for 50 years and I've never taken a nickel in unemployment insurance," said the baker.

"When will I retire? Well, I guess the wife will tell me.

Imports 'Fragile' Too

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States insurance orga- damage from low-speed imported cars suffer needless damagefr om low-speed impacts, about the same as North American autos.

In a report Friday, William L. Haddon, head of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, gave a House of Representatives commerce subcommittee his report on tests of the Volkswagen Superbeetle, Volvo 142, Toyota Corolla 1600, Opel 1900, Saab 99 and Datsun 510.

Meanwhile, two environmental organizations accused automakers of shirking their responsibility to develop pollution controls.

Tests on American cars involved the 1973 Chevrolet Impala, Ford Galaxie, Plymouth Fury, American Motors Ambassador, Chevrolet Vega, Ford Pinto, and American Motors Gremlin.

The imported vehicles have shown "they are, on balance, about as fragile as those made in the United States— that they have designed-in fragility, comparable to the domestically-made automobiles, that will inevitably lead to needless crumpling in low-speed collisions," Haddon said.

He said that while all the cars tested met current transportation department standards for low-speed impacts, not one of the vehicles tested could emerge without damage in a five-mile-an-hour impact which is required in next year's federal auto standards.

The pollution charge came Friday before the Environmental Protection Agency. David G. Hawkins, spokesman for the Sierra Club and Natural Resources Defence Council, said "none of the applicants (automakers) has committed itself to meeting the standards by 1975."

He said Detroit has not developed alternative power on a catalytic converter to reduce harmful discharge of tailpipe gases.

The auto-makers have asked for a delay to permit further research on the converter, a device that attaches car to reduce the emission of harmful exhausts. The automakers say they have experienced numerous failures with the device.

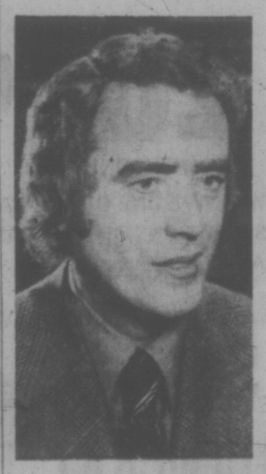
Weddings



Finn — Butt

The marriage is announced of Dorcas Susan Butt, daughter of Mrs. M. Butt, 707 Robleda Cresc., Victoria, B.C., and the late Kenneth John Butt, to W. D. (Liam) Finn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Finn, of Castlemartyr, Ireland.

The wedding took place on March 17, 1973 in Sacred Heart Parish, Victoria, Rev. D. F. Johnston officiating. Dr. Liam Finn is Dean of Applied Science at the University of B.C., Dr. Susan Finn is a Professor of Psychology at the same university.

Fitzpatrick — Godber

Reverend T. Williams officiated at the ceremony in St. Martin in the Fields Church on March 3, 1973, at 7 p.m., which united in marriage Kerry Ann, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Godber, 620 Agnes Street, Victoria, to Howard John, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fitzpatrick, Parksville, B.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length gown of white satin with train to match. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, white carnations and stephanotis. Mrs. Eileen Sagerloo and Miss Donna Fitzpatrick wore identical gowns of green beau de soie and carried bouquets of yellow marguerite daisies and baby's breath. Best man was Mr. Greg Cupelis of Fernie, B.C., and Mr. Glen Godber, brother of the bride, was usher.

A reception was held at the Queen Victoria Inn. Mr. M. Kubisheski gave a toast to the bride, and music was played by the Three-Times-Around Band. The bride chose a pink floral dress topped by a pink sleeveless coat. White accessories and a corsage of white carnations completed her ensemble. After a short honeymoon through Washington, Idaho, and Montana, the happy couple are making their home in Fernie, B.C.

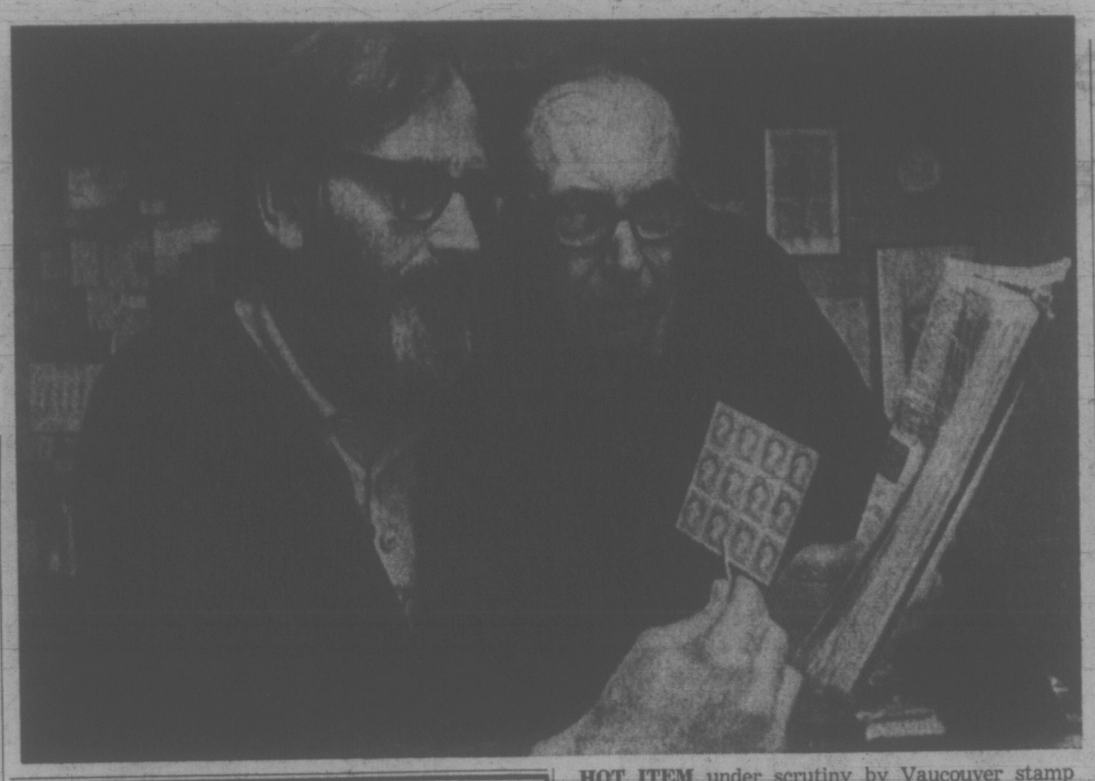
Walk Led to Death

STONY PLAIN, Alta. (CP) — The body of a 68-year-old Edmonton man missing since March 10 has been found in a snowdrift 20 miles west of this community, RCMP said.

Police said Nick George Cernansky apparently died of a heart attack after his car became mired in mud and snow on an abandoned road. His body was found by a highways department employee.

After his car became stuck, police said, Cernansky apparently started walking toward Highway 16, 1,500-yards away but collapsed 500 yards from the main highway.



HOT ITEM under scrutiny by Vaucouver stamp dealer Les Churchill, left, and customer Bill Millard is a sheet of one-cent Queen Victorias issued by Canada in 1868. Strong international demand for classic Canadian stamps has more than doubled the price of the issue since Churchill purchased the partial sheet at an auction two years ago for $1,250 a stamp.

Poor Fight Rich For Older Houses

TORONTO (CP) — Residents of the inner-city Cabbage Town area have taken up hammers and nails to fight higher-income professionals who buy old homes in their area and turn them into expensive town houses.

The Don West Neighbors Group has bought two run-down houses, renovated them into multiple-family dwellings and rented them at low prices to poor families.

It has brought another 10 houses up to city standards for their low-income owners who pay what they are able towards the renovation costs. The city pays the remainder out of a special grant fund.

The group, says administrator Albert Zehr, is mainly low-income and short on funds for buying the houses but, under special arrangement, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation allows it 95-per-cent mortgages for run-down houses and the group gives the other five per cent as a down payment.

The group pays $20,000 to $30,000 for old houses and deals directly with principals, saving itself real estate fees.

The federal Local Initiatives Program assists on the cost of renovations, averaging $10,000 a house, and laborers on the job receive a minimum $100 a week.

Rents in the multiple-family dwellings, ranging from $150 for two-bedroom accommodation to $170 for three bedrooms, are below market prices for the quality of accommodation, Mr. Zehr said.

Heat, hydro and water are included in the rent price. Mr. Zehr said:

"We want to provide a social mix so all houses in the area won't be taken over by the professional people who want to live downtown and who are making townhouses out of them."

The Curtis sisters . . . Tracy, Miriam, Kelly and Laurel.

Festival a Family Affair

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It is not unknown for the Greater Victoria Music Festival to attract family participation. If one member of a family discovers that festivals can be fun, it often leads to others getting involved.

But there is something exceptional about the Curtises.

There are four sisters, ages four to 12 years, and only Tracy, the littlest, will be missing this year because her teacher decided not to enter the Highland Reel group of which she is a member.

As for the other three there are only two days of the total two weeks of 1973 Music Festival (it opens April 2) in which one of the three girls is not performing.

Miriam, 12, Laurel, 11, Kelly, 8, and Tracy are the daughters of Mr. af Mrs. E. J. (Ted) Curtis, 1200 Union Road.

They all study Highland dancing with Adeline Duncan and the three older sisters are multi-prize winners. In fact they have garnered between them more than 120 medals and over 20 trophies in Highland competitions in British Columbia, Alberta, Washington and Oregon.

In the Victoria Highland Games that were held March 10, each sister won the Victoria aggregate in her own age group.

Laurel and Kelly have both been featured at the Butchart Gardens in the sunset programs.

This year is the first in which special highland dance classes have been included in the Victoria Music Festival and the sisters are entered in several of these.

But highland dancing isn't the whole Curtis story.

Miriam, a Grade 7 student at Cloverdale School, has participated in festival piano classes for the last four years and won a bursary in a duet class two years ago.

Besides the piano and highland classes this year she will also participate in school folk dance and band classes (she plays the clarinet).

As if all this were not enough for one young person, Miriam sings in the school choir and has taken up the guitar.

Laurel has been a highland dancer the longest—five years—and was named best Vancouver Island dancer for the last two years in her own age group.

She, too, plays the guitar and piano, is taking lessons on the drum and sings in her Grade 6 school choir. This year she will participate in folk dance and piano classes in addition to highland.

In previous festivals Kelly has enjoyed folk dance sessions and this year will be back in that section of the festival. A highland dancer for two years, she is looking forward to performing in the new classes.

She is a piano student as well.

Four years behind but determined not to be outdone, little Tracy basks in the shine of her sisters' trophies until she can win some of her own, and has to be firmly but quietly discouraged by mother in her desire to prove to the visitor that she can play a tune on the piano.

Mr. Curtis, vice-principal of Oak Bay Junior Secondary, is responsible for his daughters' musical gifts, says Mrs. Curtis.

"His whole family is very musical."

But it is quite clear that the attractive sisters get lots of encouragement and assistance from their mother in developing their artistic interests.

TOP STUDENT

(One of a Series)

Instrumental music and ensemble work is the special interest of 17-year-old Dianna Goode. She had early lessons on piano with Miss C. Leaske, but after three years changed to clarinet at the age of 11.

She is entered in duet and solo classes for her instrument in the Victoria Music Festival, is first clarinet with the Oak Bay Senior Secondary concert band under David Dunnett and plays in the Conservatory of Music wind ensemble.

With members of the ensemble, she recently entered the Vancouver Friends of Chamber Music junior competition. The ensemble reached the finals and will be performing April 1 at the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse.

Her present clarinet teacher is Lawrence de la Haye, who says that she will be a candidate next year in the National Youth Orchestra auditions.

Dianna lives with her parents, Sqdn. Leader and Mrs. C. S. Goode, at 1840 St. Ann Street.

TINY VIOLINIST STIRS AUDIENCES

. . . with symphony

Fairy-like, doll-sized Masuko Ushioda is one of the world's most electrifying musical personalities.

Since she began her career about 10 years ago, the dainty violinist has stirred music lovers and critics on almost every continent and has played with most of the world's major orchestras.

Manchurian-born, the child of an architect father and a mother who is a classical Japanese dancer, Miss Ushioda was Japanese and Russian-trained, having graduated from the famed Toho Scool in Tokyo and the Leningrad Conservatory.

More recently she was a pupil of Josef Szigeti who said of her, "Masuko Ushioda is the kind of event in the long life of an artist that one encounters twice or three times . . ."

With Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony, April 1 and 2, the violinist will perform the Mozart G major Concerto and the Prokovief No. 1 in D major.

This will be a welcome return engagement for Victorians who responded enthusiastically to her remarkable performance with the orchestra last season and again at the Summer Festival concert at Beacon Hill Park in the summer.

Other numbers to be performed under Maestro Gati's baton are Berlioz, Symphonie Fantastique and In Memoriam by Canadian composer Murray Schaffer.

'Mexico Winter' In Travel Film

The glamorous life in famed Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta and Cuernavaca will be shown in "Mexico in Winter," the next travel-tale film coming to McPherson Playhouse, Monday.

There will be two performances, at 6 and 8:30 p.m.

Veteran Showmen In Merry Widow

Two men playing character roles in the Victoria Operatic Society's up-coming production of The Merry Widow are among the most familiar and popular of the society's veteran performers.

Barry Grimshaw, Popoff, and Bill Broadhead, St. Brioche, in the show which opens Friday at McPherson Playhouse, have racked up more than 30 shows between them.

For Barry, Merry Widow may be his last for some time.

He recently sold his Victoria business and now is teaching meat cutting and baking in a Port Alberni secondary school. In order to fulfill his obligation to VOS he has commuted to weekend rehearsals and will have a special time off for the run of the show which goes through April 7, Sunday matinee included.

GRIMSHAW

BROADHEAD
. . . in them all

Born in Leeds, Yorkshire, Barry began singing with a concert party and after coming to Victoria sang his first VOS role — Pooh-Bah in Mikado — in 1964.

In almost every show after that until 1969, Barry spent tne following couple of years enhancing his acting experience in Bastion Theatre productions and on Bastion school tours.

But he was back with VOS in 1972 playing the union president in Pajama Game and Sykes in Oliver.

Choir singing in England and some voice training from choir master was behind Bill Broadhead when he first came to Victoria 21 years ago.

He became a member of the Victoria Choral Society but his first musical theatre experience in this city was as a member of the chorus in the first production of Amahl and the Night Visitors at Christ Church Cathedral in 1959.

The Victoria Operatic Society was undergoing some financial stress at the beginning of the '60s and was happy to accept from CJVI an invitation to do a live broadcast of a musical. In fact they did two — Carrousel and Showboat — and Bill was in both.

Since 1963 he has been in every VOS show and on stage in all but three. In those three he "pushed scenery around."

He played the same role in the second production of Merry Widow in 1965 as he is playing now and says it is one of his favorites.

But his all-time favorite was Mr. Show in the McPherson stage presentation of Carrousel.

Other rewarding activites have included playing in The Hallow Crown for Victoria Theatre Guild and siging a solo part in a recording made under direction of Richard Proudman by the Christ Church Cathedral choir.

RECITALIST at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, Sunday, will be soprano Lorraine Gorrell, assisted by Winifred Scott at the piano. The program consists of lieder and art songs by Schubert, Mahler, Ravel, Robert Fleming and Bernard Naylor. In addition, Lawrence de la Haye, clarinet, and Sally Simons, flute, will perform a work by Aaron Copland. The concert begins at 3 p.m. There is no admission charge.

OH WHAT A LOVELY WAR

Horror and the Humor

A unique combination of play, revue and musical comedy put together in the style of the traditional British music hall — that's Oh What a Lovely War.

This rich entertainment comes to Langham Court Theatre Thursday, the result of a collaboration between Victoria Theatre Guild and the University of Victoria theatre department.

The large cast under direction of UVic's John Krich is split about evenly between campus and community, with outstanding theatre students like Francine Wurster, David Parry, Richard Epp and Randy Cheveldave, and leading community actors such as Jack Droy, Colin Skinner and Josephine Seale in lead roles.

Design, costumes, lighting and music are in the hands of Bill West, Irene Peiper, Giles W. Hogya and Susan Pappajohn respectively, all from the university theatre department.

Others in the cast are Christine Puhl, Tanya Ryga, Bob Garfat and John Linfield of the university, and Josephine Seale, Marjorie Bancroft, Brian Allen, Tony Bukowiecki, Greg Clark and Graham Thomson from the Guild membership.

O What a Lovely War tells the story of World War I, using songs, dialogue, photographs, posters and newspaper headlines.

But it does more than merely relate a history of war. It also reveals in an effective theatrical manner the horror and suffering, the idiocy of those who planned, fought and profited, the emotion, riotous humor and old-fashioned sentimentality that went along with it.

After Thursday's opening the production will continue nightly including Sunday, through April 7.

The box office will open at Eaton's on Monday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Concert at Sanscha Hall

A concert of orchestral and choral music will be presented Sunday at Sidney's Sanscha Hall at 2:30 p.m.

Classical and popular music will be included in the program which will feature the Peninsula Concert Orchestra under direction of Bernard Rain.

Also performing will be the Singing for Fun ensemble directed by Florence Niedermann and the Kilian Singers with Dr. Kilian conducting.

The Peninsula Concert Orchestra has been sponsored by the Saanich School District No. 63 Adult Education program and has been in existence for about 10 years. During that time many pupils have received orchestral training and guidance through it.

More players are required each season for the winter sessions and membership is open to anyone who can play an instrument.

City Group Stages Rail Saga

By AUDREY JOHNSON

In the beginning it was simply an invitation Don Shipley, director of Vancouver's Playhouse Holiday, extended to Victoria's Company 1 to prepare a show specifically for Holiday's child audiences.

Shipley suggested four themes based on Canadian history subjects and out of the four the company and its artistic director, Carl Hare, selected the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

It was a small beginning but out of it has grown what portends to be the most important project in the two-year history of this unique western Canadian professional ensemble.

Old Tomorrow, a saga of the CPR, is the title of the show which is to be unwrapped for Victorians April 13 and 14, most fittingly in the ballroom of the Empress Hotel.

Thereafter it will be taken on tour across Canada, not to be seen locally again until the fall.

In this, its first two-hour long production, Company 1 has aimed to capture the feeling of the exciting years of Canadian history from 1855 to 1885.

Materials have been selected, telescoped, emphasized and highlighted to present a panoramic view of the free-wheeling events which led to the building of the railroad.

From the first impulses of Confederation through financial and political storms, through Metis rebellion and unimagined geographical obstacles to the pounding of the last spike at Craigallachie, Old Tomorrow follows the important events of those vital years.

MacDonald, Cartier, Stephen, Fleming, Van Horne, the politicians and financiers, the surveyors and engineers — all are present in the script with their energy, vision, quarrels and passions out of which history was made and a nation grew.

At the heart of the production and the person who as much as anyone will be responsible for what success it achieves, is slender, blonde Carolyn Zapf, an honors English graduate of UVic with a special affinity for the theatre.

On the roster of Company 1 members, Carolyn is listed as "dramaturge."

It's an unfamiliar title to many people but some will know that it means Carolyn does the scripting of Company 1's mainly original material.

To be precise, dramaturgy, according to the dictionary, means work in drama or "the art of dramatic composition and representation."

Therefore it is not quite the same as a playwright for even famous playwrights are not necessarily masters of the art of dramatic composition.

The dramaturge works directly with actors and director in developing an original script or adapting and arranging an existing one.

A playwright often works in isolation, rolling his script out of his typewriter and hoping that somewhere someone will produce and-or publish it.

And if he is lucky and they do, someone almost inevitably has to assume the role of dramaturge — perhaps the director or an assistant — in order to lift the play off paper and make it viable on stage.

The ideal situation, the one that has produced some of the world's best drama, sees the playwright working so closely with a company that he is dramaturge as well.

Most of the great modern Irish playwrights and some of the best of the American have evolved out of those circumstances.

It has taken two-and-a-half months for Company 1 to prepare the CPR script and a massive amount of reading and research on Carolyn's part.

For background material she has used such biographical works as Donald Creighton's books on Sir John A. Macdonald, Gibbon's Steel of Empire and some of Pierre Berton.

She has delved into the journals of those involved, letters and speeches, newspapers of the period, Royal Commission transcripts.

The idea for the scene on anti-Americanism was derived from political cartoons of the time, she explains.

"But the script is just one part of the pooling of creative talents that has evolved Old Tomorrow," Carolyn assures you.

"We work together as an ensemble, bouncing ideas back and forth. The stage ideas come mainly from Carl — we try things to see how they work and select the best ideas for inclusion in the script."

Apparently many of the ideas work so well that cutting becomes a problem. Like most writers, Carolyn finds amputation a painful process that has to be faced philosophically.

The script, now complete except for a bit more cutting and minor changes, is versatile as far as style is concerned. The various scenes are presented in forms of song, tale theatre, interview, rhythmic speech, movement and dance.

It is also flowing in its action.

Designed for a large auditorium and for an audience of between 500 and 800 people, the action takes place on eight platforms which can be moved freely about the auditorium, forming stages of different shapes and areas.

More than one scene may be played at a time and — similar to a circus or midway — the audience is free to choose which particular one they will follow.

Masks which release extra energy in the actor also suggest the scale of personalities involved. Parliamentary opposition figures — the Liberals — are played as giant puppets, nine feet tall. William Van Horne, who dominated the construction of the railroad, is a 15-foot puppet.

The embroidered puppet heads are the work of noted needlework artist Carole Sabiston.

Other well known artists and craftsmen involved are Donald Harvey, who is designing the sets and masks; Joy Richards, costumes, Jacqueline Sears, choreography and Rod Sample, music.

It's painful but necessary. Carolyn Zapf and Carl Hare debate cut in saga script.

Father Writes the Music

What spurs a 12 to 15-hour-a-day musician—teacher, organist, choirmaster, accompanist—to accept a new challenge and depart into the realm of composition?

It might be an inescapable urge to create, or it might be, as in Richard Proudman's case, the dearth of pieces in modern idiom for a specific solo performer. For instance, his trumpet-playing daughter, Juliet.

"We're always looking for new music," says Proudman, who frequently accompanies Juliet on piano or organ. "Neither of us likes to repeat the same music too often."

Both admit their affinity for the baroque and rococo eras; besides more early composers wrote for the trumpet than 19th and 20th century composers appear to have done.

The problem came into focus when a recital was scheduled for father and daughter at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, (where he is organist-choirmaster, and they began to select the music.

Almost the entire program seemed to fall into the 17th-18th centuries and earlier, styles.

That's when Proudman decided to put his creative energies to work and he is now well into a sonata for trumpet and piano. The slow movement, romantic-hued and lyrical in a contemporary sense, will be performed at the recital which takes place Monday at 8 p.m.

Proudman says that like most composers writing for instruments they themselves don't play, he has had to try his ideas on Juliet and let her tell him what worked.

"For instance I had to rewrite the whole second movement in a different key because as I had originally conceived it it couldn't be played on the B flat trumpet."

First movement ternary form is more complicated and takes longer to develop so that part of the sonata is yet to be completed, although it is pretty well sketched out.

Juliet, a consistent winner in music festivals, and a trumpet student of Richard Ely, will also play an arrangement of Handel's Samson aria, Total Eclipse, as well as a movement from a trumpet concerto by F. X. Richter, a Prelude and Ballade by Guillaume Balay and Jeremiah Clarke's Trumpet Voluntary.

There are many arrangements for trumpet and they're worth doing, says Proudman, who feels there is a tendency to become too snobby about arrangements.

Several solo organ numbers by Proudman will present music of Bach, Buxtehude Mozart, Schumann, Franck and others.

Featured also will be a group of pieces in which Juliet will be assisted by the second trumpet of Laura Jenkins.

MDs Sign Pact

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A collective bargaining agreement was signed Wednesday by state officials and representatives of 750 doctors working at state mental hospitals. Lt.-Gov. Ernest P. Kline said the contract was the only one of its kind in the United States. The contract, which runs through June, provides grievance procedures and fringe benefits for doctors, but no pay raise. The group has a limited right to strike.

Suit Feared

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federation of Independent School Associations has expressed "deep concern" that parents of children attending the Slocan Valley Free School may be prosecuted by the Nelson school board.

The FISA said it fears such a case could set precedents which would lead to harassment of every parent group trying to establish alternative forms of education.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: How often is it safe for a bird to bathe?—M.G.

DEAR M.G.: One bath may be too many if a nonaquatic bird gets in over its head; even a spit bath could prove fatal, indirectly, if the bird was subject to chilling drafts afterward. However, when proper bathing facilities are at hand and there is no danger of chilling, you can pretty well leave it up to the bird to decide when and how often to take the plunge.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Speedy, our snake, has been developing a little bulge around the middle lately. She has slowed down quite a bit, too. Could she be just fat? Or pregnant?—M.J.

DEAR M.J.: Speedy's situation could be related to complications of pregnancy, presuming, of course, she has had an opportunity to achieve that state somewhere along the line. However, most pregnant snakes aren't so obvious about their condition. The fat would be unlikely, too, to concentrate in one area. A more likely possibility then would be either an abscess or a tumor. Certainly Speedy should be checked out by the doctor. She probably needs help.

Pedwin Walks A Man Right Out Of The Doldrums And Into The World Of Fashion Excitement With Innovative Pacesetters

There was a time when the only significant difference from season to season was the shape of the toe. Now men have a choice of two-tone jobs, suede and leather combinations, thicker soles and higher heels. With so many variations on the shape of the toe, from rounded to blunt, it's easier to simply remember what NOT to wear. Pointed toes or anything resembling them are out. Remember to alternate your shoes. They'll last longer. Take advantage of the shoe horn. It was invented for daily use.

You'll be reaching new heights with today's heels. Just how high is up to your own discretion. Examine the Pedwin's and go for variation. A word of caution. Don't let heels wear down too far. If you are hard on your heels, rubber taps should be applied BEFORE you wear the shoes. It's interesting to observe that despite the high calibre comfort and fashion excitement inherent in Pedwin shoes they are priced well within reach of the average income. So step up to new fashions today with Pedwin.

MPs Weigh Election Chances

OTTAWA (CP) — The consequences are being weighed warily by the various political parties as they manoeuvre toward a predicted parliamentary showdown and a possible general election.

As attitudes apparently stiffen over proposed tax cuts for manufacturers and processors — an issue which could bring down the minority Liberal government — MPs on all sides of the House are taking uncomfortable glances ahead at the election campaign that would follow.

"I think we could pull it off," said a Conservative MP, "but, my God, I wouldn't like to go into a campaign on the basis of us voting against tax incentives to business."

"I'd like to see the Tories explain that one away," said a Liberal. "But there is a danger that they might be able to sell their idea of a time-limit on the tax cuts."

"The issue doesn't bother us," said a New Democratic MP. "We fought the last campaign against 'corporate welfare bums' — but it's no secret that we simply don't want another election now."

A Progressive Conservative motion of non-confidence in the Trudeau government is to be debated Monday in the Commons, but it is more likely to embarrass the NDP than to bring about the government's defeat.

The NDP financial coffers — even more than the treasuries of other parties — are badly strained from the last campaign.

The NDP said Friday it will decide its position on the motion during the weekend and announce it when the debate gets underway Monday.

But reporters overheard NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) tell Treasury Board President C. M. Drury after the Commons adjourned Friday:

"If we decide to defeat you, we'll do it on our own motion."

Another NDP member, who asked not to be quoted directly, noted that the government will bring back its old-age and veterans pension increases Tuesday for final stages of debate in the Commons.

He saw little chance of the NDP using its balance of power to defeat the government with pension increases just around the corner.

The issue which many predict will bring down the government is a budget proposal, first advanced last May 8, that corporate taxes for manufacturers and processors be reduced to 40 from 49 per cent as an incentive for increased investment and job creation. Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield says this would create long-term inequities, but his party will vote for it provided the reductions expire at the end of this year.

He says there is a moral obligation to implement the measures for the time being because thousands of firms have already made decisions based on the tax changes.

"But I have no enthusiasm for the proposal," he adds.

There are increasing indications that Finance Minister John Turner will introduce the legislation without the time limit.

TOTS 'DEPRIVED' FOR RESEARCH

BOSTON (AP)—The Boston Globe says a University of Texas research team deprived 17 infants of a food substance essential for their development in an experiment conducted in 1956-57.

The Globe says the researchers deprived the infants for up to 13 weeks of linoleic acid, a fatty substance contained in mother's milk, even though they knew a diet without this food had produced skin breakdown, "marked emaciation" and possible damage to the brain or spinal chord in animals.

The study, published in 1959, was sent to Senator Edward M. Kennedy, (Dem. Mass.), by Dr. Alvin F. Poussaint of Harvard Medical School, The Globe says. Poussaint told Kennedy in a covering letter that he hoped the material would serve as "documentations that will enable you to gain support for legislation that involves human subjects in research."

Kennedy heads a Senate health subcommittee that has been holding hearings on human experimentation.

STORY BEHIND APARTMENT BOOM

Half the population of the city of Victoria lives in apartments. Yet nearly all city government officials who oversee building and zoning live in private houses.

Must the apartment boom go on? Why did it happen? In a feature article today on Page 15 Times' city hall reporter Roland Morgan investigates and finds some eye-opening facts.

U.S. Fears Gasoline Shortage

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Office of Emergency Preparedness warned Friday that there may be a gasoline shortage this summer and called on refineries to increase output.

OEP acting director Darrell Trent said that although gasoline production for the past five weeks has averaged 42.5 million barrels per week, one million more than the same period last year, "this increase is not enough to meet the need."

He urged the industry to increase production immediately, "both by operating refineries at near to capacity levels and by devoting a large share of their yield to this product."

"Unless gasoline production is increased or cossumer demand lessens, spot shortages could occur much sooner this year because of the poor inventory position," Trent said.

President Nixon today was considering further moves to meet the energy crisis after lifting import ceilings on crude and petroleum products for independent oil companies pleading "hardship."

Nixon was preparing to send to Congress a message dealing with the entire scope of the growing oil shortage and other shortages of natural resources facing the nation.

The shortage was already a reality to at least two distributors, one in New England and the other in the Middle West. One firm that sells gasoline to 13 service stations around Norwalk, Conn., said it only had one wek's supply on hand. Another firm that operates a chain of 25 service stations around Minneapolis-St. Paul reported it had to close all but six of them because it couldn't get any gasoline.

Women Bait Trap

BELFAST (Reuter) — A third soldier has died following the shooting of four off-duty members of the British security force by guerrilla gunmen after they were apparently lured to an apartment by women Friday night, the army announced today.

A fourth soldier remains in critical condition.

A civilian was also killed during the night when he was shot from a passing car in the Catholic Lower Falls area. His brother was seriously wounded.

The killing of the soldiers — described by police as "one of the most fiendish brutalities of the present emergency" — came only hours after the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army vowed to press on with its campaign of guerrilla violence.

And it raised fears that a mass rally of militant Protestants in central Belfast today could lead to more bloodshed.

The army said the four soldiers were in civilian clothes and met two girls at a tavern in Lisburn, headquarters for the British forces in Northern Ireland, 12 miles southwest of Belfast.

They were invited to an apartment in Belfast's Antrim Road, and when they arrived one of the girls said she would bring two more friends to join them. But the "friends" with whom she returned were two gunmen who ordered the four soldiers to lie face down across the bed and then sprayed them with submachine-gun fire.

The gunmen and the girls then fled, but one of the two surviving soldiers crawled into the street to raise the alarm.

COLD CURE COSTLY

STANFORD, Calif. (Reuter) — British and United States scientists reported Friday they have successfully tested a preventive for the common cold.

The only drawback is that a dose currently costs several thousand dollars.

The scientists, however, believe that techniques will be developed to mass-produce the material — called interferon — and the cost will come down.

Interferon is a protein purified from human white blood cells infected by viruses. The substance is secreted by the cells to interfere with — or prevent — the viral infection of other cells.

"This is the first agent known to prevent cold infections in man," the scientists report in an article to be published Monday in the Lancet, the British medical journal.

The research was performed at the British Medical Research Council's common cold unit at Salisbury by Dr. Thomas C. Merigan of Stanford medical school in California, and Drs. Sylvia Reed, Thomas Hall and David A. J. Tyrrell of the common cold unit.

Merigan, now back at Stanford, said findings also showed that interferon could delay the start of influenza B infection, leading the scientists to believe that the agent could prevent influenza if the proper dose could be given.

Safeway Sues UFW

FRESNO, Calif (WP) — The chairman of Safeway Stores, Inc., Friday accused Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers Union (AFL-CIO) of "attempted extortion" and "libel" in its lettuce boycott and filed a suit seeking $150 million in damages.

Quentin Reynolds announced the filing of the suit at a San Francisco press conference, telling newsmen that the union and the Interfaith Committee to Aid Farm Workers, another defendant, have intimidated and harassed Safeway since last December.

The suit, filed in Los Angeles superior court, comes on the heels of the UFW's iceberg lettuce boycott, which has concentrated on the Oakland-based Safeway and several other large grocery chains.

Reynolds said the suit alleges that the farm workers union and the Interfaith committee, a group of clergymen, "are and have been engaged in a conspiracy to commit unlawful acts — such as bringing spurious law suits against Safeway, distributing handbills and pamphlets which contain false and misleading statements, engaging in mass picketing of Safeway stores and otherwise disrupting the lawful conduct of business."

In recent weeks the UFW and allies have filed numerous suits against the chain, alleging mislabeling of meat, false advertising and the sale of contaminated cookies, meat and lettuce.

In a court hearing last month a Safeway attorney said the union's mass picketing was costing each of its 500 California stores $5,000 a day in revenue.

50-to-1 Long-Shot Wins Big Prize for Canadians

DONCASTER, England (AP) — Bronze Hill, an unrated four-year-old colt who almost never ran at all, was 50-to-1 shock winner of the Irish sweepstakes Lincoln Handicap at Doncaster today.

He carried to victory the hopes of four Ontario residents and earned them prizes of about $123,000 each.

Queendom, a 15-to-1 long-shot finished second 1½ lengths behind and yielded a prize of about $49,200 for each of four other Canadians.

Three Canadians held tickets on the third-place finisher, Desperate Dee, and won about $24,600 each.

Two of them are British Columbia residents: Lois McDonald of North Vancouver and G. Brianche of Lilloet.

There were no other major winners from B.C.

Ridden by virtually unknown jockey Mark Birch, Bronze Hill charged to victory at the end of the one-mile race.

A maximum of 26 starters was allowed in the race and with 27 acceptors the two bottom weights — Bronze Hill and Sixfiveseven — were put into a ballot to eliminate the odd one.

Bronze Hill was lucky, survived the ballot, and stayed in to win by 1½ lengths from second-place Queendom, a 15-to-1 betting shot, with Desperate Dee, the 25-to-1 third placer, another half length behind.

Also big winners were British bookmakers, who admitted they were laughing all the way to the bank. Virtually none of this country's legion of punters had even considered backing Bronze Hill.

One of the $123,000 winners, Alan Lawrence of Kitchener, has been buying sweepstake tickets for 20 years.

Lawrence said in an interview the first thing he is going to do is disconnect the telephone.

"I just know we're going to have every salesman in the country around here in the next few days."

Lawrence reads horoscopes "just for laughs." He said that last week his horoscope said he would be receiving "a very pleasant gift in the form of money from an unexpected source."

Another one, Wayne Fitzpatrick of Tillsonburg, said an anonymous caller offered him $10,000 Friday night for his ticket.

Fitzpatrick, 37, a secretary-treasurer of a car dealership company, said he thought the call was a prank.

NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. Report Hints Trudeau in Straits

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. News and World Report, a weekly news magazine, says Prime Minister Trudeau is preparing to give up the party leadership because he is finding it difficult to obtain campaign funds from large, mostly U.S.-owned Canadian corporations.

The magazine in its current issue says Finance Minister John Turner is more acceptable to the business community as the Liberal party leader and is being mentioned as a possible successor to Trudeau.

U.K. Gas Returns

LONDON (Reuter) — Preparations for resumption of full gas supplies were under way today following acceptance by striking gas workers of a wage offer within limits set by the British government.

Uganda on Alert

KAMPALA (UPI) — Tanzania moved fresh troops toward its border with Uganda today following an unsuccessful invasion of Uganda by a 3,500-man force on Friday, Uganda radio said. Ugandan armed forces were ordered on "full alert" status.

Pakistanis Clash

RAWALPINDI (Reuter) — Clashes between rival political groups which left at least 13 dead and more than 100 injured raised fresh doubts today on government and opposition reaching agreement about a constitution now before the Pakistani National Assembly.

Slides Destructive

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Floods and landslides have struck wide areas of Romania and Bulgaria following a sudden thaw. Reports from Bulgaria said landslides destroyed about 40 houses.

No Trace of Ship

NEW YORK (AP) — Rescue vessels early today reported finding no trace of the Norwegian freighter Norse Variant or her 30-man crew as the search off the New Jersey coast entered its third day.

B-52s Renew Strikes

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. warplanes, including heavy B-52 bombers, again hit targets Friday near Phnom Penh, the 17th consecutive day of American attacks against advancing Communist troops.

The capital has been on a full alert status for two days, with authorities fearing a possible Communist offensive following attacks only miles away to the north and south.

Communists marked the third anniversary of the founding of the anti-government National United Front led by deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk by launching new attacks on major highways. Military sources said they saw this as a move to draw government troops from Phnom Penh.

In Saigon, a veil of pessimism appears to be settling over Michel Gauvin as he surveys the first two months of a bullet-riddled Vietnamese peace.

"The ceasefire is not working," the Canadian ambassador concluded in an interview. "The ceasefire has not been implemented. It is not effective."

The veteran diplomat is aware of the political game played under a hot sun in this Indochina rice bowl.

Socreds Swear Party 'Alive and Well'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Delegates to the British Columbia Social Credit convention Friday made it clear that they don't consider the party the mastodon of B.C. politics.

Agnes Kripps, a former MLA for Vancouver South, got the ball rolling during her opening speech, claiming "newsmen are saying Social Credit is dead." She then added that "Social Credit is the only viable alternative" to the current New Democratic Party government.

Then Grace McCarthy, the former Social Credit government's minister without portfolio, told delegates to "ask the press" about the accomplishments of W. A. C. Bennett and the future of Social Credit in B.C.

In later interviews, several delegates pointed out that the party is alive and well, one of them saying, "pretty lively, eh? See, we're not dead."

The rash of assurances about the party's future apparently stemmed from news media commentary following the last election. Several political observers said then that the stunning defeat at the hands of New Democratic Party Premier Dave Barrett's "Socialist hordes" had dealt a death-blow to Social Credit in B.C.

Last August's defeat left the party with 10 MLAs in the 55-member legislature. The NDP have 38 seats, the Liberals five and the Conservatives two.

The note of optimism was furthered by the former premier, who, in his keynote speech, predicted that Social Credit would sweep the NDP out of office in the next election. He said if an election were held today, the party would win its biggest-ever majority.

Bennett's hour-long speech was punctuated throughout by table-thumping approval and standing ovations from the roughly 500 delegates and visitors.

It was the first mass meeting of the Social Credit troops since the August 30th election. Today, delegates were scheduled to discuss the primary resolution of the two-day convention — rules governing next November's leadership convention.

The party has never had a leadership convention — Bennett was elected party leader and premier by a legislature caucus vote following the 1952 election. He held office for 20 years until last August's defeat.

Last week Bennett confirmed that he won't seek the leadership in November, thus opening the leader's post for the first time.

Just prior to his speech, Bennett recalled Mrs. Kripps to the podium, where she led the convention in what Bennett called "our great new freedom song."

To the tune of Old MacDonald Had A Farm, it began: "In B.C. we owned our land, be-fore N-D-P . . . with a Barrett freeze here, and a Waffle freeze there . . ."

The 72-year-old former-premier said that last year's defeat was good for social credit. He said the opposition role will stimulate party membership drives and stiffen the resolve to oust the NDP.

LOCKED DOOR NO HELP FOR SHEEP

DUNCAN — When farmer Walter Paddle of Norcross Road heard that nine sheep had been killed by dogs on a Metchosin farm Monday, he locked his sheep in his barn.

As an added precaution he nailed the door.

Early Thursday morning he found that marauding dogs had broken into his barn and killed 10 purebred border Cheviot ewes.

"It is getting terrible," he said. "Soon you won't be able to keep anything."

Two-Year U.S. Drug Study Yields 100 Suggestions

By STUART AUERBACH
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — After a two-year look at the United States' drug crisis, a conservatively oriented national commission reported this week that the federal response "tends to perpetuate the problem" and that Americans need to develop new attitudes toward drug use.

On the federal level, the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse, called for the establishment of an independent superagency to take over all drug programs, law inforcement, education, research and treatment.

The agency would have subcabinet status and its head would report to the president. But to prevent creation of a permanent drug establishment, the commission said this agency should die after five years.

The long run solution, however, lies in a far-reaching change in American attitudes toward drug use, which the commission said are "inconsistent and founded on many misconceptions."

For example, the commission pointed out that the use of alcohol ("without question is the most serious drug problem in the country today") and barbiturates ("America's hidden drug problem") is condoned. But the use of marijuana or heroin is condemned.

"Chronic alcoholism and hidden barbiturate dependence . . . share much in common with chronic herion use," the commission said. "Drug use becomes interwoven into the fabric of the users' life because it replaces something otherwise missing."

These conclusions lie at the heart of the more than 100 recommendations by the commission, which was created by congress in October, 1970. Nine of the 13 members were appointed by President Nixon, the others—two representatives and two senators—were named by each house of congress.

The president met with the commission Thursday but made no comment on its report. Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said Nixon had not read the final draft.

Earlier, Warren announced that the president would send a reorganization proposal to congress to put all narcotics law enforcement agencies under the justice department.

He indicated that Myles Ambrose, a special assistant attorney general and director of Drug Abuse Law Enforcement, would leave the government after overseeing the transition to the new agency, and some one else would be put in charge of the program.

The reorganization plan, which either house of congress could veto if it acted within 60 days, may be ready within a week, Warren said.

It will move some 500 customs agents who are working directly on narcotics problems from the treasury to the justice department, he said.

In addition, all other enforcement activities would be consolidated under the justice department's bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs, Warren said.

However, rehabilitation and education programs would not be affected.

Last year, in its first report, the commission recommended the elimination of criminal penalties for the private use of marijuna — a recommendation it repeated in this report.

Otherwise, however, the comission said "irresponsible" drug use — which threatens the safety or welfare of others, impairs a person's ability to function, or retards his development — should be discouraged.

But penalties for possession of drugs should be lowered, and persons arrested for possession should be offered treatment rather than jail. Failure to accept treatment would result in no more than a year in jail and a $500 fine.

Drug traffickers "should be punished severely", the Commission said. But it differed with President Nixon's proposal last week that all traffickers receive mandatory minimum jail terms.

"This would return the drug use prevention effort to relying on fierce words in statute books instead of constructive action," the Commission said.

Throughout the report the commission tried to balance its desire to discourage drug use in America with its feelings that the nation had overresponded to the drug problem and that harsh penalties for drug use would solve nothing.

It reserved its strongest attack for what it called a billion-dollar "drug industrial complex" that has grown up over the past five years and now has "a vested interest in the perpetuation of the problem."

Federal spending on drug programs, the commission pointed out, has increased 1,092 per cent since 1969 and is still climbing.

"Drug abuse spending in the last decade," the commission said, "can be summarized thus: An ill-defined program emotionally expressed, led to ill-defined programs lavishly funded."

The Special Action Office of Drug Abuse, created by President Nixon to co-ordinate out of the White Huse the government's drug efforts, failed in its job, the commission reported.

And federal law enforcement efforts have been even worse.

"Integragency rivalry and lack of co-ordination, for example, have seriously hampered prevention of illegal drug trafficking," the Commission said.

"A sometimes bitter dispute exists between the bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs and the bureau of customs regarding which agency has primary authority to carry out investigations overseas and in cases where illegal drugs cross the border into the domestic market.

"This quarrel has persisted despite repeated efforts to resolve it by the president, by the Ashe Council on Government Reorganization, by the secretary of the treasury, and by the attorney general. It has often kept the two agencies from sharing intelligence and effectively co-ordinating investigative activities."

For these reasons, the Commission recommended the creation of a super drug agency — modeled on the Atomic Energy Commission and to be called the Controlled Substances Administration — to run all federal drug programs, including law enforcement.

To correct a similar dilution of effort on the state level, the commission recommended that all states create similar agencies which would run their drug programs and deal with the federal government.

All commission recommendations but the one creating the separate federal agency were unanimous. But Sen. Harold Hughes (D—Iowa) and Sen. Jacob Javits (R—N.Y.) disagreed; they said a single federal agency would not work.

Looking at the vastly expanded drug information and education programs, the Commission found them "scientifically inaccurate" and ineffective.

It recommendel a moratorium on the production and spread of new drug information materials until new standards for accuracy can be set and the present programs can be evaluated. The government is currently considering such a move.

"In recognition of ignorance about the impact of drug education, the commission recommends that policy makers should also seriously consider declaring a moratorium on all drug education programs in the schools, at least until programs already in operation have been evaluted and coherent approach with realistic objectives had been developed", the report said.

"No drug education program in this country or elsewhere has proven sufficiently successful to warrant our recommending it."

Looking at specific drugs, the commission said:

—"Alcohol, the most commonly used drug, is strongly associated with violent crime and with reckless and negligent operation of motor vehicles."

—Heroin has the potential for great dependence and is attractive to a "highly vulnerable population . . . it's social cost is considerably out of proportion to the number of its users . . . and justifies the highest possible restrictions on availability.

"Unfortunately, present social policy tends to exacerbate this cost even more. Because of enormous pressure characterizing the present social-legal-medical response, a disproportionate degree of behavioral disorganization and disruption accompanies heroin dependence."

—Barbiturate use is probably higher than people think, especially among bored housewives. "The commission believes that barbiturate dependence may be the modern equivalent of the hidden opiate dependence of the late 19th Century."

Instead of stricter controls over barbiturates, the commission recommended that doctors be more careful in prescribing them.

The commission is far from radical in its makeup. Raymond Shafer, its chairman, was a middle-of-the-road Republican governor of Pennsylvania. The vice chairman, Dr. Dana Farnsworth, took a strong anti-drug line when he was head of student health services at Harvard University. The executive director, Michael Sonnenreich, is a former sarcotics bureau official. Its average age is 55, and its only black, Mitchell Ware, is a law enforcement official.

Winemaker's New Twist Keeps Everybody Happy

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Everybody knows that most wine improves with age.

For the ordinary man the problem is to keep it long enough to mature.

For the average winemaker the problem is to keep capital tied up for several years in maturing and unsold wines.

A New Zealand winemaker has come up with an ingenious way to satisfy everyone.

For a payment in advance he is undertaking to supply a dozen bottles of quality wine every year for five years.

Buyers who feel the wines would never survive at home are entitled to leave them safely stored out of the way of temptation in the winemaker's cellars until ready to use them.

The winemaker himself is under less compulsion to release wines until they are at their peak. With payment already made, he is in a position to give more independent advice to clients on when he believes they should be used.

Customers get a personally labelled vine in the vineyard, and a dozen custom-labelled bottles bearing their name for each five-year order they place.

PRICE CHEAPER

For $50 they get a total of 60 bottles over five years of a blended red or white wine made from hybrid grapes. This works out at 84 cents a bottle compared with the present price of $1.50 a bottle in retail wine stores. In five years' time the price might be a great deal more.

For wine from classical French grape varieties like cabernet sauvignon red or pinot chardonney white, the down payment is $75, which works out at $1.25 a bottle over the five years.

For his part the winemaker gets a quick return of capital, plus an assured outlet for his wine for five years.

There are risks for customers. The winemaker has made it clear that if calamity strikes a vintage, it might be necessary to postpone delivery until the vineyard returns to production.

And if some disaster destroyed the company's winemaking ability, customers could lose the balance of their investment.

Against that, the reputation of the company, N. Nobilo and Sons, of Huapai, near Auckland, stands high in New Zealand.

The founder of the company migrated from Yugoslavia, where his family had a centuries-old winemaking tradition. His son, Nick Nobilo Jr., has established a reputation as one of New Zealand's most talented young winemakers.

The company's products, especially the red table wines, are in the top rank of high award winners in New Zealand competitions and have also gained honors abroad.

Cruise to Hawaii with P&O. Two weeks, four island ports. From $440.

For a fortunate few, there is a different Hawaii.

It is the Hawaii that can only be experienced aboard a ship. Where islands appear as dots on the horizon and draw slowly nearer, their mountain peaks shrouded in mist and clouds.

Where cruising coastal waters reveals unforgettable views of rain forests, quiet coves, and jet black beaches of volcanic sand.

P&O invites you to discover this Hawaii in First Class comfort aboard our Oronsay or Arcadia, both registered in Britain, and offering passengers all the friendly service and gracious hospitality of an English country inn.

You'll make two calls at Honolulu. Then visit the historic old whaling port of Lahaina. Kailua-Kona with its deserted temples. Hilo, rich in the color and fragrance of orchids, gardenias, and anthurium by the million.

Oronsay and Arcadia will make three cruises this spring, ranging in length from 14 to 18 days. You can sail from Vancouver on May 21, June 5, or June 21. Cruise fares on these all-First Class ships are as low as $440 (based on double occupancy), including transportation, meals and entertainment.

We've prepared a colorful, 16-page booklet to tell you more about our Hawaii and the big white P&O liners that take you there. Ask your travel agent for a copy. Or send in the coupon today.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

With deepest thanks to all those who attended the Benefit Hockey Dance for Bob Ellis, February 24, 1973. The realization of the concern and sympathy all my friends, associates and especially those that attended out of the goodness of their hearts made my injury so much easier to endure. My sincerest thanks are extended to Jim Moody and the Colwood Recreational Hockey Association for all their assistance and goodwill. Many thanks as well to all my friends that sent cards and paid visits during my stay in hospital. — Bob Ellis.

The gratitude in our hears can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends and relatives to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Gordie Paterson. Special thanks to Monsignor M. T. O'Connell, the Pallbearers, also Stan Martin, Mr. Bert Longhurst and Graham and Torrey McCall.
— Josephine Paterson, Patricia, Linda, Terry and Robert.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our many kind relatives, friends and neighbours. Mr. V. Jaynes of McCall Bros., Mr. J. W. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. D. Rae of Oaklands Chapel, Dr. and Mrs. A. V. Piper, Oak Bay Chapter of Eastern Star, Base Supply Branch C.F.B., in the loss of a loving Mother, Daughter and Sister.
—Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Slade, Catherine and JoAnne Anderson and Ernie Slade.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends, neighbours, business associates, Legion members, fellow lodge members, especially the Sisters and Knights of the Pythian Order. Special thanks to Reverend Ware for his comforting words, during the loss of our dear husband and father Jim Lequesne.
—Mrs. Margaret (Mugs) Lequesne, Donna, Kristine and Jimmy.

Our sudden loss, the death of our beloved wife and mother, Alice Fawcett, left an emptiness in our hearts that can never be wholly filled, but the many kind words and acts of sympathy from our relatives and friends have helped immeasurably. We are deeply grateful to Rev. R. Faris, and Mrs. Alice Waddell, soloist, and McCall Bros.
—Mr. John Fawcett and families.

9 IN MEMORIAM

McAULAY — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Elizabeth Reid, who passed away March 25, 1967.
The dearest mother and
and noblest friend
One of the best who God could lend;
Absent the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear,
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept
To love and to cherish and never forget.
—Fondly remembered by Margaret and Dad.

W—A—N—T—E—D
Mature, ex-businessman or salesman to introduce Harley Davidson Golf Cars (American Sales Leaders) to clubs and pros. This is not a daily grind but would require certain days or weeks in a year concentrated and working with golf courses in Victoria and Vancouver. (We do represent B.C. though.)
The challenge should be interesting and worthwhile, the earnings would depend on accomplishment and probably not be immediate. Nominal expenses would be provided, but the real remuneration would have to come from the sales and leases developed. We're looking for the man that wants an interest in life and has the initiative to build and look after a business without constant supervision.
Kindly arrange for interview. Don Telford, 386-8424, including Sunday.
